PLEDGES AID IN WIDENING 7 RADIAL ROADS

Emmerson O. K.'s Plan of Motorists.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.

The proposal to widen seven radial highways to 40 feet for a minimum distance of 100 miles from Cook county and to widen other main thoroughfares in the Peoria and East St. Louis areas, was given a definite form yesterday. Louis L. Emmerson, Republican nominee for governor, discussed the enterprise with representatives of various downstate communities at the La Salle hotel.

The conference was arranged by Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, which has taken up the fight for wider main arteries with a view of getting action in the coming state administration.

For Wider Roads.

Mr. Emmerson disclosed his views frankly. They were, in effect, that he had a strong belief that economic conditions demand the immediate widening of certain radiating roads in the Chicago area and certain congested highways in other areas.

"While my first concern, if elected governor, will be the carrying out of balance of the $100,000,000 bond issue program, so that all communities will receive the roads they have been promised, I am more than ever convinced that the widening of radial or arterial roads is of immediate necessity and serious importance. If the next governor, I assure you that this work will be pushed ahead as rapidly as possible. If not the governor, then you can rely on Lou Emmerson to get behind this program anyway."

Assurances from the participants in the conference, who represented a circle, including Danville, Springfield, Peoria, Rock Island, Dixon, Rockford, Crystal Lake, Woodstock, and to the lake shore at the north, were that the public is fully awake to the necessity for wider key roads in that great area, and is expressing its sentiment in no uncertain terms.

Show Traffic Congestion.

In informing Mr. Emmerson of the general public clamor for this road improvement, S. E. Bradt of De Kalb cited the studies by engineers which show that 5 per cent of the existing roads carry 80 per cent of the traffic, and added that if the 5 per cent were given more capacity they would probably carry a higher percentage.

Mr. Hayes told the conference that a similar conference with Floyd E. Thompson, Democratic nominee for governor, is to be arranged. Justice Thompson, he said, had informed him that he probably would be able to arrange to discuss the subject within a fortnight.

"The object of the conferences," Mr. Hayes said, "is to fix the status of this highly essential road improvement program on an entirely non-political basis. Both nominees are agreed that highway development is not a political matter, but an economic one.

"Therefore it is our aim to obtain the same assurances from each nominee, so that regardless of the result of election the roads of Illinois will be given the attention that is required."

Wants Public's Approval.

Mr. Hayes added that if there were any doubt in the minds of the nominees as to the state of public sentiment on the matter, steps will be taken to get an expression of public feeling on paper, and the results thereafter submitted.

"My belief is," Mr. Emmerson told the gathering, "that in our present system of highways we have a fine investment. If we allow, by preventable congestion, some of these roads to lose their value to the people who paid for them, we are allowing our investment to depreciate in a manner no good business man would countenance.

"The governor of Illinois should be the servant of the commonwealth, and his own ideas on this or any other subject might not be shared by the people of the state. I shall listen to the voice of the people of the state on this subject, as on others.

"If I find a well developed and unmistakable sentiment for the widening of radials and congested main traveled arteries I pledge myself now to devote my energies to the formulation of an equitable plan of widening such thoroughfares to meet the demands of traffic conditions.

To Seek Needed Laws.

"In that case I will endeavor to have proper legislation proposed and enacted to provide means for such an enterprise and when such legislation is procured will push the road widening program with vigor.

"I regard the automobile to be

Men and Women of 47 Nations Parade.

AMSTERDAM, Holland, July 28.—Forty-five thousand spectators jammed the stadium here this afternoon to witness the parade of athletes of 47 nations which marked the opening of the Olympic games. Prince Consort Henry, in the absence of Queen Wilhelmina, presided at the inaugural of what is the ninth of the series of international games.

The opening of the spectacle today was marred by the refusal of France to participate in the parade of athletes. The French Olympic officials had been insulted and one of them was punched in the jaw by an over officious Dutch gate keeper yesterday.

Later the French accepted a formal Dutch apology, took a special Olympic oath, and decided to compete in the games starting tomorrow.

Forty-five thousand persons jammed the new Olympic stadium, and half again as many milled around outside, unable to get in.

Applause for Germans.

Outside of the Dutch, who were parading before their own home town enthusiasts, the imposing looking German athletic team received the biggest applause while parading around the stadium. Other former enemy nations, Austria, Hungary and Turkey, also got a loud hand, but there was hardly a ripple of applause when the British, Italians, Belgians and Americans filed by.

This possibly resulted from word spread around the stands of the French refusal to parade, and indeed before the lengthy opening ceremony was over a score of wild rumors were circulating about a fight between the French and German delegations. None of the rumors had any foundation.

The incident leading to the withdrawal of the French from the opening ceremony started yesterday when the French athletes, accompanied by M. Paul Mericamp, secretary of the French Athletic federation, and a member of the Olympic committee, came out to look over the new stadium.

Frenchman Is Struck.

The German team had preceded them and had been allowed, like the other delegations, a glimpse of the structure. For some reason the stodgy Dutch gatekeeper refused to allow the Gallic team in. Hot words followed, terminating by the Dutchman swinging a couple of left hooks to M. Mericamp's jaw.

Last night, in the presence of the French consul general here, the Paris team demanded and received an apology from the Dutch Olympic committee. Furthermore, the French asked that the gatekeeper be discharged, and this the Dutch also promised.

But today when the French drove up to the stadium, shortly before the inauguration ceremonies, they found the same gatekeeper. They asked the Dutch committee to get another gatekeeper, and when this was not done they withdrew, most of the husky athletes, however, storming another gate and crowding into the stands.

U. S. Delegation Larger.

The United States presented the largest delegation of visiting athletes, with the Germans the second largest.

The American section was led by Johnny Weissmuller, the Chicago swimmer, and Clarence Houser, the shot put star, who carried the American standard and Stars and Stripes. They were followed by Maj. Gen. MacArthur and the other American Olympic officials. The women athletes followed, clad in white, then the men, wearing straw hats, dark coats, with Olympic shields, and white trousers.

There was some surprise among the spectators when Houser failed to dip the colors in passing the royal box, but the American officials explained that that was an American custom, adhered to since the revival of the classic games. Neither did the Americans give the Olympic salute in passing the reviewing stand.

The athletes had to stand in the field an hour and a half while speeches were made and a Dutch chorus gave an exhibition of native music.

Take Oath of Amateurism.

Then the representative of each nation took the Olympic oath of amateurism, and nobody balked at the oath.

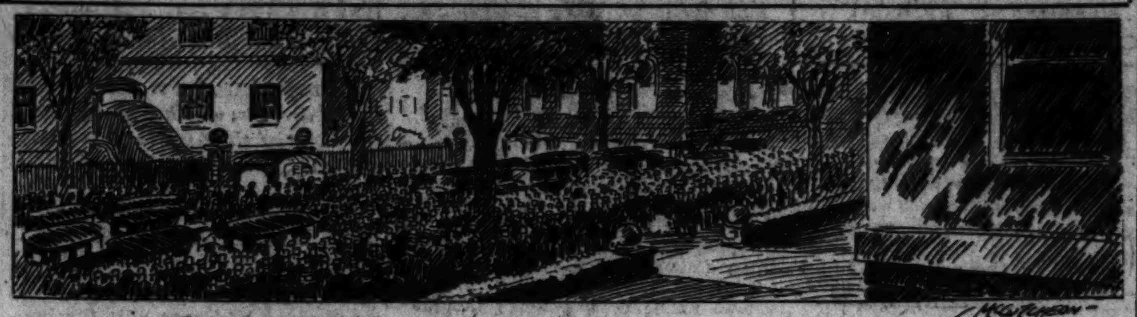
THE MASTER OF THE WORLD



SYNOPSIS.

Paul Rayburn, a scientist employed by the Grannett company, discovers a method by which he thinks he can talk with Mars. He loses his job, but continues his experiments, and, after financial difficulties, in which he is aided by Theodora Downs, the rather plain cousin of his former employer's daughter, Eleanor Grannett, he gets into communication with Mars, learning, among other things, how to change gold into platinum and how to make women beautiful.

Rayburn is waited upon by a group of eminent financiers, who have arrived to offer him $1,000,000 for his inventions, while admitting among themselves that they are worth five billions; but, reading their minds, he laughs at them and leaves them astounded. For his next experiment Rayburn selects Fay Thornton, known on the stage as the world's homeliest woman, and announces that he will make her beautiful.

The success achieved by Rayburn in this experiment created more of a sensation than any of his other discoveries, but despite his announcement that he will conduct no more beautifying experiments, one persistent dowager connives with Grannett, his former employer, to meet the young man socially. Grannett turns to Fay Thornton and she persuades Rayburn to attend the party. When he arrives he is surrounded by women whose ambition it is to be made beautiful, and, being able to read their minds and, seeing their greed and avarice, he makes a speech ridiculing them and then leaves them dumfounded.

Rayburn discovers that the Grannett company is using questionable methods to obtain use of his discoveries and decides to chastise Grannett, his former employer, some more. He gets from Mars the secret of how an aging man can trade his declining years for half as many years of vigorous youth and then makes arrangements with Uncle Jim, an elderly employé of the Grannett companies, and tries the experiment on him. While his experiments in rejuvenation are in progress some one tries to kill Rayburn, but he miraculously escapes.

The President of the United States sends for him and he learns that several nations are plotting to take his life. He assures the President and his cabinet that his discoveries are at the disposal of his country, but hopes that they will be used to prevent rather than carry on war.

While the matter is being discussed representatives of five world powers ask for and receive an appointment with the President, and Rayburn is taken to the home of the secretary of the treasury, where he is introduced to the family as Mr. Margate, a librarian. He meets the secretary's daughter, who invites him to a social affair to which a number of foreign ambassadors have been invited. Masquerading as Mr. Margate Rayburn attracts little attention at the affair, but suddenly he is recognized by the dowager whom he had refused to make beautiful and the room is soon in an uproar.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

After the sensational disclosure of Rayburn's identity it was no longer possible to keep his presence in Washington a secret. In some mysterious way the news was flashed to the papers and within fifteen minutes reporters and photographers arrived and were clamoring to see him.

While the dinner party was still in progress, extras were on the street with the simple announcement that Paul Rayburn, who had disappeared soon after his miraculous escape from the bomb of an assassin, was in Washington as a guest at the home of the secretary of the treasury. It was intimated—a prophetic guess—that his presence in Washington had an important international significance.

No longer inconspicuous and unconsidered, as he had been while posing as Mr. Margate, Rayburn found himself the center of an eager pressure of excited guests. Three ambassadors were urging him to come to breakfast the following morning! Ambitious hostesses were stalking him as they were always stalking the various lions who came to the capital, insistently trying to book him for luncheons and dinners.

When the time came for the ladies to leave the gentlemen to their coffee and cigars, they refused to go, and insisted upon remaining in the dining room where they could gaze wonderingly at the amazing man who had in his power the miraculous gift of making homely women beautiful.

The whole character of the dinner party had undergone a profound change. From being conventionally social it became intensely emotional, electric with deep undercurrents of hopes, ambitions, and designs, all centered around the embarrassed and uncomfortable young man who had passed unnoticed an hour before.

Miss Sterling, dazed and bewildered, sought her father, the secretary.

"Did you know that Mr. Margate was really Rayburn?" she asked accusingly.

"Certainly," he smiled. "We wanted to keep him a secret for the present, but Mrs. Van Guilder spoiled that."

"And you didn't tell me!" She was on the verge of angry tears, infuriated to think of such a maddening waste of opportunity. Her father's answer did not improve her frame of mind.

"I thought," he said, "that possibly you were discriminating enough to recognize him as an unusual person, even though unlabeled."

A butler whispered something in his ear, and he arose at once and left the room. A moment later he was speaking to the newspaper men outside.

"You must excuse Mr. Rayburn tonight, gentlemen. For reasons I am not at liberty to state he cannot be interviewed this evening. If you will see me tomorrow afternoon, conditions may be different. Yes," he said, answering a volley of questions, "he is my guest for the present. He arrived this morning. Further than that, I must beg you to excuse me."

A flashlight flared and the secretary smiled. "Don't waste your photographs on me. I'm sorry to disappoint you, but Mr. Rayburn cannot be seen or photographed tonight."

When the guests left near midnight they were waylaid for further information, but they had been admonished to make no statements.

During the long hours of the night until nearly morning the crowd continued to stare curiously at the darkened house within which slept the man whose name was upon the lips of all mankind.

At eleven o'clock the following morning the ambassadors assembled at the White House for the conference with the President. These ambassadors represented the formidable Pan-Europa combination organized some years before as an economic alliance to combat the immense standardized mass production of the United States.

Into this European economic union even Great Britain had been absorbed, while the British dominions had gravitated, as subordinate economic dependencies, toward the great American union. This coördinated Europe, working shoulder to shoulder against American competition, had become sufficiently effective through group action to hold its own.

Now, with the Rayburn discoveries, all this equality was wiped away.

The spokesman of the ambassadors briefly stated their case. He spoke forcefully and without the customary diplomatic indirection.

"Mr. President," he said, "a situation has arisen which we must meet. I refer, of course, to the Rayburn discoveries, which completely upset the economic status quo of the world. Your nation suddenly acquires an advantage with which we cannot cope I speak frankly. It is self-evident. The purpose of our conference today is to see whether we may not be able to agree upon a course whereby this inequality which threatens our very economic existence may be adjusted—amicably." He paused and, after a tense silence, proceeded with significant care in his selection of words. "Unless our nations are to be allowed to participate in the benefits arising from the Rayburn discoveries, we shall be obliged—even forced—most reluctantly to take the only defensive course which our situation demands."

The President, who had been listening with sober intentness, now glanced sharply at the speaker. For a moment there was an ominous hush.

"Do not misunderstand me," quickly added the spokesman. "The action I refer to is not military but economic. We may be forced to employ by way of reprisal our only weapon of defense, although a most effective and powerful one, the economic boycott which by reason of the European union we can impose absolutely."

Incomes of 75 Chicagoans who are alleged to have earned nearly $100,000,000 on which they paid no income tax were reported to be under investigation yesterday by federal special intelligence agents directed by A. P. Madden, head of that division of the internal revenue bureau. Those being investigated are said to be officials of 40 corporations in the Chicago prohibition district which held permits to withdraw government alcohol for manufacturing uses.

The investigation will cover the incomes earned by the corporations during the last five years. The permits of each of the forty corporations have been revoked at some time during that period for infractions of the law. More than half of the alcohol obtained under the permits, which permitted the withdrawal of from 1,000 to 30,000 gallons a month, was diverted into bootleg channels, it was claimed.

One of the corporations, which the government agents admitted they have under scrutiny, is the Shirley Laboratories, Inc., operated from 1925 to 1927 by Samuel Weinberg, president, and Roy C. Swanson, secretary.

Those two officials are now under a sentence of a year and a day each in the penitentiary having been convicted in the federal court of diverting nearly 100,000 gallons of government alcohol. Their permit was for the purpose of manufacturing perfumes and hair tonics.

Names of other corporations included in the investigation were kept secret but it was learned that among them is one holding a permit to withdraw 30,000 gallons a month on which two officials reaped a profit of nearly $5,000,000 in eighteen months.

POPE TELLS CARDINAL TO STAY OUT OF U. S. TILL AFTER ELECTION

ROME, July 28.—(AP)—Pope Pius has instructed Cardinal Sincero, who soon will leave for Canada, not to enter the United States on the trip. The pontiff does not wish the cardinal to visit American territory during the presidential campaign lest his presence be interpreted as a desire on the part of the Holy See to influence the presidential election.

Cardinal Sincero is sailing for Canada on Aug. 9 to inaugurate the Cathedral of Montreal. He greatly desired to visit the United States, where he has many friends, but acquiesced to the pope's desire.

The pontiff, on the other hand, willingly approved a visit of Cardinal Cerretti to the United States because he will arrive at San Francisco on Nov. 18, when the presidential election is over. Cardinal Cerretti is going to Australia for the Eucharistic congress. He then will visit Washington, where he once served as auditor to the apostolic legation.

Steal $35,000 in Diamonds from Woman in Hotel

Denver, Colo., July 28.—(AP)—Diamonds valued at $35,000 were stolen from the hotel suite of Mrs. Elizabeth Quotidomine, sometime last Tuesday night, it was revealed today by detectives.

Pastor, Two Police, Bandit Shot in Battle

Using his victim, a minister, as a shield, a Negro robber fought it out with four members of a detective bureau squad early this morning at 34th and La Salle streets. Two of the policemen were shot, one seriously, and the minister was wounded, probably fatally, before the bandit fell to the pavement with five bullets in his body. He is not expected to live.

The wounded policemen are Jerry O'Connell, 32, of 10306 Avenue L and Howard J. Doyle, 35, of 5648 Indiana avenue, who was in charge of the squad. They were touring the district with Patrolmen John Ryan and Edward Tussey when they saw two robbers rifling the pockets of the Rev. W. D. Van Pertioloy, 32, of 102 East 35th street, colored, pastor of the Mount Vernon Baptist church.

As the police car stopped one robber fled and the other swung Van Pertioloy in front of him and opened fire. The four policemen leaped out. O'Connell and Doyle fell wounded. Ryan and Tussey ran to one side and their bullets struck the robber from the flank. He collapsed as he attempted to return the fire and the pastor also fell wounded, presumably by a bullet from the bandit's gun.

O'Connell was taken to Lakeside hospital where it was found he had been shot in the chest. His condition was reported critical, as was that of Van Pertioloy. Doyle suffered a scalp wound. The robber gave his name as James Whittaker, no address. His companion, Joseph Harris, 3501 South Wabash avenue, was captured later.

Defeated, but Not Prisoner, Nobile Asserts

COPENHAGEN, July 28.—THE TRIBUNE correspondent met Gen. Umberto Nobile and his companies when they arrived at Malmo early tonight and traveled through the evening with the commander of the ill-fated Polar expedition in his private compartment to Copenhagen, obtaining an exclusive interview for the United States.

More than 2,000 people crowded to the small ferry station when the Stockholm express arrived at Malmo, carrying two special sleepers with Gen. Nobile and seven companions, including Prof. Behounek, the Czech scientist.

The general appeared at the window in answer to friendly calls from the crowd, which greeted him with kindness and gave him flowers. Many demanded autographs and the explorer was busy for some time signing scraps of paper.

Copenhagen Reception Quiet.

The arrival at Copenhagen late tonight was watched by a few people, in respectful silence. Gen. Nobile drove immediately to the Italian legation, where he will get his first sleep in a proper bed in many weeks. No crowds appeared at the legation. The impression received from newspaper circles indicates that favorable comments will appear in the press.

During the journey to Copenhagen, Gen. Nobile, who was forbidden to give interviews on matters directly concerning the Italia disaster, expressed satisfaction with the kindness of the people along the route. Pointing to his compartment, laden with flowers, fruit, and other gifts, he said:

"I am not a prisoner. Where does that foolish story come from? The men are returning defeated, and would rather do it quietly. I am, naturally, happy to be returning home, but I am ready to commence a new expedition immediately."

Nobile Far from Well.

Gen. Nobile is far from well. He limps noticeably, leaning heavily on his stick. He sent greetings to the people of America, particularly Chicagoans, expressing thanks for the many kindnesses received when he returned with Capt. Roald Amundsen on a former expedition, via the United States.

Gen. Nobile and his party are remaining in Copenhagen for the night and will leave tomorrow for Rome. Capt. Zappi is in Stockholm, where he will visit Dr. Malmgren's mother and hand her the compass entrusted to his care by the Swedish scientist.

Determined to continue the search for Capt. Amundsen and Commander Rene Guilbaud as long as hope remains, the French authorities have sent two hydroairplanes to Tromsoe, where they will be mounted and conveyed to Svalbard aboard the cruiser Strasbourg.

TRIBUNE MAN WITH MARINES IN NICARAGUA

Tells Real Story of Hardships.

Marines Abroad

This is the story of the marines in Nicaragua. It is an account of their daily doings in the wildernesses where American forces have been asked to intervene to protect American lives and property and to insure a peaceful election this November. Mr. Edwards of The Tribune staff lived for weeks with the marines, marching with them through jungles and visiting lonely outposts in the interior. Nicaragua was viewed from the air in the bombing planes of the marine air corps and from the sea on the warships of the navy. A series of stories will detail the obstacles which the marines have faced and which, in the opinion of the marines' officers, have made the pacification of this revolution ridden country the most difficult task ever attempted by them.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PUERTO CABEZAS, Nicaragua, July 8.—Six bearded, ragged, barefooted soldiers sat in a circle in a thatched hut some miles from Bocay in northern Nicaragua. Stacked rifles in a corner proclaimed their profession. A certain similarity in their tattered attire indicated they had once worn uniforms. But there was nothing to identify the country to which they owed allegiance.

The six men were watching intently one who seemed to be a leader. He was measuring syrup carefully from a can and dealing it out spoonful by spoonful to his companions. Each seized his spoonful as his turn came and swallowed it greedily. There were sighs when the measurer clamped the lid on the can firmly after giving two spoonfuls to each man.

Eager for Change.

The men had dined on canned corned beef and bananas. They had forced the food down. Marooned for months in the jungle with the same canned goods fare each day, their stomachs cried for a change. Especially, they craved sugar in any form.

These were American marines! And the scene pictured was presented to a relief expedition which had toiled over miles of the Coco river, which empties into the Atlantic sixty miles north of Puerto Cabezas, on the east coast of Nicaragua, to bring supplies and replacements. The marines to be relieved could hardly believe in their good fortune. They stammered their welcomes hoarsely. Three of them were shivering and burning alternately with malaria.

The average citizen of the United States thinks with a prideful thrill of the marine corps. He has in his mind a somewhat hazy picture of a dashing trimly uniformed figure thrusting through tropical vegetation with bayonet fixed, engaging daily in combats in which he is outnumbered ten to one, always emerging victorious.

Start With a Push.

The early history of the marines in Nicaragua did much to strengthen this impression. During the dry season, late in 1927 and in the first three months of this year, the marines pushed rapidly into the interior. There were daily engagements with the forces of Gen. Augusto Sandino, who alone remained in opposition to the reign of American order.

Tales of heroism were cabled back to the States. Sandino was driven to hiding in the hills. There was justification once more for that immortal matter-of-fact phrase: "The marines have landed and have the situation well in hand."

But there have been no stories of battles of late. Torrential rains beat down upon the mountains and jungles of Nicaragua. Travel is impossible except on the swollen rivers. Sandino lurks in some wild retreat, content to remain uncaptured, thinking no more of sallies upon the machos—the American warriors who are too willing to fight.

Have 72 Outposts.

In 72 outposts thoughout Nicaragua dwell small detachments of marines. They are to remain until November in accordance with President Adolfo Diaz' plea to the United States for insurance of a peaceful election. Their mere presence maintains peace among the warring elements.

These posts are as isolated from each other as if situated in the arctic regions. The airplane maintains some system of communication. But even marine pilots, who daily break most of the rules laid down by careful aviators, find it impossible to make a landing in the jungle.

With the advent of the heavy rains last May, the marines have been confronted with hardships which, in some cases, are almost incredible. The men scorned all obstacles during the dry season when daily marches and the whine of bullets, often from an enemy ambush, gave them plenty of action. But at present, there is nothing but inactivity—and an inactive marine begins to hate himself.

Need of Activity.

The canned food diet at the outposts is relieved only occasionally by tough, unsalted Nicaraguan beef, bananas, and plantains. The men's uniforms are torn to pieces in struggling to beat back the jungle. Their shoes go to pieces. They allow their beards to grow. They lose buttons from their clothing, identification badges, even the ball, anchor and eagle insignia of which they are so proud.

With the cessation of daily warfare, a greater foe enters the field. It is a curious fact, unexplained by medical science, that malaria is kept well in check while the men are active. When the fighting stops, the fever creeps in.

An Indiana Medic.

Maj. O. W. Grisier, genial medical officer at Puerto Cabezas, who in his youth was a country doctor at Columbia City, Ind., has a little joke.

"I've got the biggest command on the east coast," he says. He refers to his hospital [which is modernly equipped] where there are always at least forty officers and men being treated for malaria. They are carried in and they walk somewhat weakly out, but the average remains. The fever is cured rather quickly but it has a habit of recurring, once contracted.

"No one can escape malaria, if he stays in the jungle long enough," said Dr. Grisier.

View of Commander.

Brig. Gen. Logan Feland is in charge of the 4,000 marines at present in Nicaragua. An additional 1,000 are now entering the country. Gen. Feland, a veteran whose record is studded with citations for distinguished service in many campaigns, said that the pacification of Nicaragua was the most difficult task ever attempted by the marine corps.

That task has been mainly accomplished for the moment. In the cities and towns of Nicaragua, order has replaced the bloodshed of a year ago when two opposing political parties had armies in the field. Sandino remains uncaptured, but he is now not much more than a fugitive.

"We'll capture Sandino in the end," said Gen. Feland. "What irritates the marines in Nicaragua is the impression, prevalent in some sections of the States, that Sandino is continually harassing the marines. If we could only find him! The topography of the country is entirely in his favor. We'd like to give him a chance to harass us."

A Romantic Nicaragua.

Nicaragua has a romantic history. This equilateral triangle of a country, fifty thousand square miles in size, smaller than the state of Iowa, was discovered and fully explored early in the 16th century by the Spanish conquistadors who were attracted by the country's mineral wealth. A rich crop of gold dust and nuggets was gathered and the section became known as "the treasure box" of Central America.

This fame spread and buccaneers of all nationalities began harassing the Spanish settlers on the Atlantic coast. Drake is supposed to have paddled up the Segovia river, sacking the mining towns, and other expeditions penetrated to the Pacific coast on plundering expeditions.

The Indians joined the pirates against the Spanish, and a fight was kept up for years among the forests of the marshy lowlands until the Spaniards at last abandoned the Atlantic coast and settled along the Pacific coast from Corinto to San Juan del Sur.

An American President.

Nicaragua was under Spanish colonial rule for three hundred years. In 1821, it proclaimed its independence and almost constantly since then revolutions have kept the country in unrest. The mad exploits of William Walker, an American, who, with a handful of soldiers of fortune, won his way to the presidency of the republic just before the civil war, form a romantic chapter in the country's history.

For nearly two decades, marines were posted in the country to protect American lives and property. When these marines were withdrawn in 1925 at the insistence of Senator Borah, Gen. Emiliano Chamorro, leader of the Conservative party, immediately seized the government. Liberal leaders formed an army and revolution followed revolution until marines were once more landed at Bluefields, in January, 1927, to protect foreign lives and property.

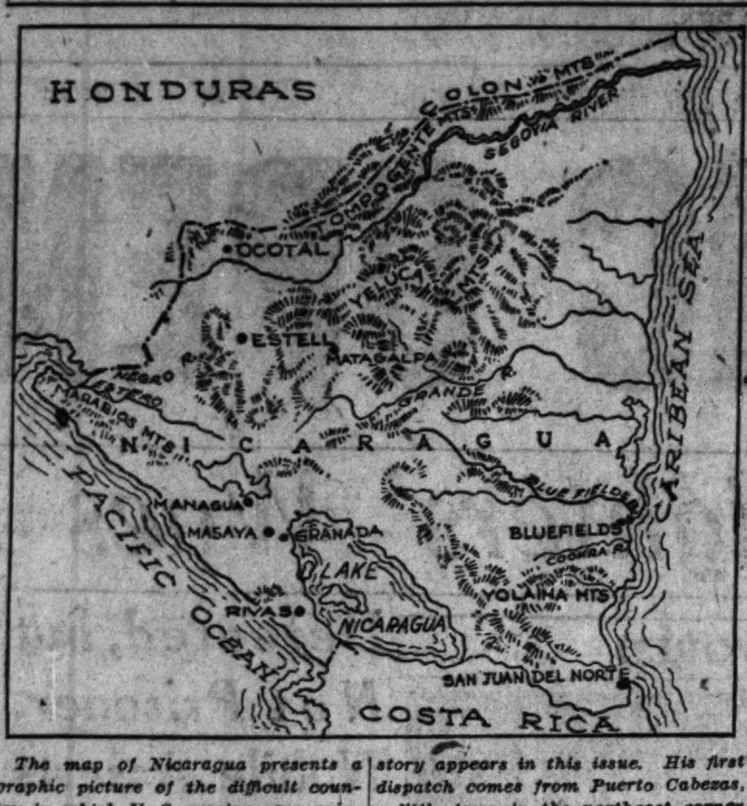
Where Marines Are Peacemakers



The map of Nicaragua presents a graphic picture of the difficult country in which U. S. marines are operating against the rebel bandit elements. The Tribune sent a reporter to Nicaragua to live with the marines and tell the real story of what they are facing to make Nicaragua a safe country in which to live. His first story appears in this issue. His first dispatch comes from Puerto Cabezas, a little town in the northeast corner of Nicaragua. The town does not appear on the available maps, but is known to be near the Coco river, which forms the northeast boundary of Nicaragua.

HOOVER IN WILDS OF CALIFORNIA ON FISHING TRIP

Eureka, Cal., July 28.—(AP)—The Hoover party arrived at camp on Bull Creek flat shortly before sundown today.

The party started from Stanford university early today by automobile and covered 260 miles through the Redwood empire before pitching camp for the night. Residents of Humboldt county, apprised of the coming of Mr. Hoover, prepared the camp.

Dinner, cooked on campfire stoves, supplied by E. R. Freeman of Richardson Grove, was served in regular picnic style, Mr. Hoover being in the center of his large party.

After dinner the blankets were unrolled and thrown over the cots which were stretched in rows.

Once settled for the night, the campfire was lighted and the news photographers blazed away with flashlight guns, obtaining pictures of the candidate and his guests.

No attempt will be made to catch fish in the morning.

ALL TEXAS DRYS WHO BOLTED AL ARE DEFEATED

Dallas, Tex., July 28.—(AP)—Incomplete returns from 177 of 253 counties in Texas compiled by the Dallas election bureau gave:

For United States senator: Mayfield, 48,204; Connally, 43,713; Owsley, 32,350; Blanton, 29,201; Cunningham, 6,600; McLemore, 2,939.

Lieutenant governor: Miller, 56,255; Love, 31,970; Parnell, 12,428; Darwin, 7,480; McCall, 5,481.

William E. Hawkins and Mrs. Edith B. Wilmans ran for governor on platforms pledged not to support Gov. Alfred E. Smith for president.

The lieutenant governor's contest was regarded as pointing the division of Texas in support of or against the presidential nominee. In this race, State Senator Thomas B. Love, who bolted Gov. Smith, was running well behind Barry Miller of Dallas, the incumbent.

NAB 2 YOUTHS IN ACT OF HOLDING UP CANDY STORE

Two youths who attempted to hold up a Fannie May candy shop at 6737 Stony Island avenue, were captured by Patrolman Frank Mulhern late last night. They gave their names as Walter Milles, 21 years old, 1925 Olive street, St. Louis, and George Holden, 18 years old, Tampa, Fla. Police believe they may be part of a gang which has specialized on robbing candy stores.

Mulhern was in the candy store as Mrs. Sue Martin, 7308 Stewart avenue, the clerk, was preparing to close, when the two men entered. Milles thrust a revolver in the face of Mrs. Martin, ordering her to hand over the contents of the cash register. When they saw the policeman they fled. He pursued and captured them just outside the door.

Robert Romano, 8344 South Ashland avenue, manager of Seeley's drug store, 331 East 47th street, was forced to hand over $238 from the cash register to two colored men armed with revolvers who entered the store as he was preparing to close just after midnight.

Incinerator Ashes Yield 4 Diamonds Worth $13,000

Atlantic City, N. J., July 28.—[Special.]—Incinerator ashes today yielded four valuable diamond rings worth $13,000 belonging to Mrs. William Van Dyke Smith, a resident at the President hotel. She had wrapped the rings in tissue paper and in a moment of absent mindedness tossed them into the waste basket. When the waste was collected they went into the incinerator.

VOTE JURY TURNS INQUIRY ON GANG FUND IN POLITICS

Underworld Is Reported Campaign Contributor.

Contributions to political bosses from vice, gambling and bootlegging chiefs have come under the scrutiny of the special grand jury, it was learned yesterday, when investigators came upon evidence indicating payment of large sums, ostensibly as "campaign contributions," to ward leaders.

Capt. John Stege, chief investigator for the jury, was directed by Frank J. Loesch, chief special assistant attorney general, to concentrate his activities in an investigation of conditions in three wards. They are the 27th, bossed by Homer K. Galpin; the 20th, bailiwick of Morris Eller, and the 24th, political domain of Paul Rothenberg, chief deputy coroner on the staff of Coroner Oscar Wolff.

Study Ettelson Pay Rolls.

At the same time David D. Stansbury, first special assistant attorney general, was directing an inquiry by Special Assistant Attorneys General Ferre C. Watkins and William H. Haynes into the pay rolls of Corporation Counsel Samuel Ettleson. Although the prosecutors refused to make public their findings thus far, it was reported they have discovered not a few politicians and state legislators on the pay roll who performed no duties for the city other than campaigning for the reëlection of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe and the rest of the "America First" ticket.

The prosecutors were reported consulting the law books to determine whether the pay rollers, and the officials who put them on the pay rolls, might be prosecuted for conspiracy to defraud the city of large sums.

These two developments in the special grand jury's work, which now is beginning to reach into the realms of the men who directed the alleged alliance between politics and crime, were marked by evidences, according to prosecutors, of renewed obstructions to the special grand jury's program. Every effort is being made, it was learned, to keep the investigation within the bounds of the 20th ward, and possibly the colored wards of the near south side.

$200,000 Gang Donation Reported.

But Prosecutor Loesch declared he was determined to push his inquiry anywhere in the city where evidence of fraud and political violences in connection with recent elections should lead it. One contribution of a notorious gang leader to a political war chest was $200,000, the investigators were informed.

Morris Eller, boss of the bloody 20th ward, will be questioned before the special grand jury on Tuesday, it was indicated by Prosecutor Loesch, who declared the grand jurors had much about which to quiz the boss. He will be required to sign an immunity waiver before he is permitted to testify, Mr. Loesch said.

Chief Justice William V. Brothers of the Criminal court, who has held himself at the call of the special grand jury for five days, expecting a request to summon a new grand jury for August, left yesterday noon for his summer home at Northport, Mich., where he has been ordered by his physician to take a rest for the summer.

Will Ask an August Jury.

Prosecutor Loesch declared he had decided to call a special grand jury for August, but he said the summons could be issued when Judge Brothers returns next Friday.

An addition to the prosecuting staff of the special grand jury was announced by Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom yesterday when he appointed Attorney George F. Callaghan a special assistant attorney general. Mr. Callaghan spent four years in association with Prosecutor Stansbury, and is regarded by Mr. Loesch as an invaluable addition to his staff.

Information that unauthorized solicitors were seeking funds for the special grand jury, and were not turning the contributions in, reached Maj. Will H. Clark of the prosecution staff yesterday. He notified the Association of Commerce, and the Better Business bureau was instructed to make an inquiry.

Charges "Sob Sister Policies" Would Wreck St. Charles School for Boys

Maj. William J. Butler, acting superintendent of the St. Charles School for Boys, announced last night that he has taken a militant stand against an effort on the part of authorities and "sentimentalists" to abolish military training and corporal punishment as corrective measures in the state institution.

One year ago on his appointment to the position, military order and discipline and the application of the lash in case of infractions of the rules were introduced by Maj. Butler in the institution, wherein are quartered nearly 800 juvenile offenders, many of them experienced felons. As a result Maj. Butler points to record of high morale, obedience, efficiency, and self respect among the inmates and a low record of escapes.

These Are Proposed Changes.

Now, through the agitation of groups of social workers, termed "sob sisters" by Maj. Butler, he fears that the St. Charles school is threatened with disorganization and demoralization. He has been given peremptory orders by Roy W. Ide, state superintendent of public welfare, to supplant in part military training with boy scout activity; to substitute a psychiatric laboratory for spankings of rapists, gun toters, and thieves; to introduce "ensemble singing and parlor music" where a school band now exists.

Mr. Ide's orders were based on a recommendation of Dr. Herman M. Adler, criminologist and head of the state juvenile research department, who in turn was induced to make his recommendation on the grounds of a report submitted by Calvin Derrick, head of the Jamesburg, N. J., boys' school. Mr. Derrick's survey of St. Charles and his report on it after a three hour visit, Maj. Butler attributes to the activity of Miss Jessie Binford, director of the Juvenile Protective association, and Harriet J. Comstock, her assistant.

Calls Them Sob Sisters.

"These sob sisters would have us nurture on lollypops and soda water, felons, recently weaned from a diet of white mule and raw alky," Maj. Butler declared in defending his outspoken position. "I want the issue met squarely so that future superintendents can spend their time running the institution for the benefit of the boys, instead of having their time consumed in combating those who wish to criticize without careful investigation."

The visitor to St. Charles is immediately impressed with its military character. Members of Chicago's "young 42 gang"; Negroes, who have escaped from half a dozen jails; small, bright eyed youngsters, and every variety of juvenile hoodlum and petty offender, come to attention and bring their hands to military salute at the approach of Maj. Butler. The commandant returns the salute with a smile.

Spend Night in Camp.

On the bank of an artificial lake on the 1,300 acre farm, are pitched a row of army tents. A battalion of inmates is assigned each evening to pitch the tents and make camp. They pass the night there with trusties for sentinels and the next morning they break camp.

The movement of details to school, to their tasks, to the movies is conducted in military fashion with juvenile officers in command. The boys display alertness. They swing to the rhythm of the march and on their faces is an expression of intentness.

"The military atmosphere of the place is unfortunate," Derrick's report on the conditions states in part. "I think that side of the work is overstressed. One never is able to forget that he is in the presence of a commanding officer. The constant saluting and coming to attention is oppressive."

In answer to this criticism, Maj. Butler cites seven substantial benefits of the military order, which he said, have been proved in his year's command.

Says Sloppiness Ends.

"It prevents sloppiness," he declares. "It inculcates respect, produces order, inspires obedience, advances personal cleanliness, personal hygiene and sanitation, will help prevent loss of life in case of fire, and helps the house father, house mother and teacher."

"The St. Charles boys," he added, "have been sent here because neither their parents, nor their school teachers, Sunday school teachers, community or authorities could make them obey. We are the last resort and we have found that military training and corporal punishment produce the desired results among these heretofore incorrigible boys."

Corporal punishment, which consists at St. Charles of the application of the lash upon the backs of boys who have attempted to escape, have engaged in immoral practices, or have broken the rules of the institution, has been an effective measure. It does not leave a sting of resentment in the spirit of the boy, Maj. Butler said, and it commands his fear and respect.

Six months ago, Maj. Butler related, a Negro youth, standing over six feet in heighth and weighing more than 185 pounds, terrorized a small white boy. The Negro was punished with a lash. Later when he had maintained a good record, he was placed in a position of trust. Within the last week the Negro was found guilty of a similar offense, but Maj. Butler is prevented from ordering him punished because of the new rule whereby offenders must be referred to the psychiatric laboratory for a scrutiny of their complexes, inhibitions, ability with the little blocks, and other more advanced manifestations.

Since the psychiatric laboratory was ordered, the population of the guard house, a squalid, ill smelling room, has increased from nine to twenty-eight. These boys, disgruntled and vindictive—questioning of them yesterday disclosed—are awaiting psychiatrical attention, where under Maj. Butler's system they would have been whipped and turned out.

Boys Want to Get Out.

"Whip us and let us go," was the cry that went up when Maj. Butler approached the bars of the guard house.

"I can't do it, boys," he said. "You have to wait for the psychiatrist."

As for the suggestion that Boy Scout activity be substituted for military training, Maj. Butler said training in scoutcraft is being given the boys without their actual alliance with the organization. There are two objections, he said, to Boy Scout work at St. Charles. The first is that the inmates are hardened youths, accustomed to the dangers and thrill of the existence of holdup men. They cannot be eased into respectability, he contended, by the sort of work that the Boy Scouts offer. Military training, with its more mature but primitive fascination, is the most effective means of turning the youths from an exciting life of lawlessness to an exciting orderly existence.

Scouts Might Object.

The second objection is that affiliation with the Boy Scouts might be objected to by other scout groups, with the consequent result that the St. Charles boys would soon find themselves regarded as undesirables.

"I have given the authorities to understand," Maj. Butler asserted, "that if they insist on these changes I will not be responsible for the results, nor do I wish to share any of the credit should they be successful. I have brought the institution from a condition of chaos, wherein corporal punishment was applied surreptitiously and the inmates were coddled, chucked under the chin, patted on the back by every variety of social service worker, to a point of high efficiency, trust, and respect among the boys. I will not be responsible for the overturn of this order."

RUSSELL TO TELL MAYOR OF POLICE PLAN TOMORROW

Reinstatement of Stege Expected to Be Asked.

Who will be who in the Chicago police department as reorganized and what its future policies shall be probably will be determined tomorrow at a conference between Mayor Thompson and Deputy Commissioner William F. Russell, selected as successor to Commissioner Michael Hughes. Russell plans to leave tonight for a visit to the mayor's retreat in Wisconsin.

Two days ago, after being notified of his appointment by Corporation Counsel Ettelson, the deputy commissioner indicated that he would accept the post if given a free rein unhampered by politics. Ettelson assured him there would be no restrictions, but, nevertheless, Russell reserved a final decision until he talks with Mr. Thompson. It was understood that he desired the mayor's approval of his plans.

Report Move for Stege.

One of these, it was said, affects the detective bureau and the reinstatement of Capt. John Stege, deputy chief under Mayor Dever. Stege was ousted from the force a year ago by the Thompson civil service commission.

The movement to restore Stege to authority was one of many rumors yesterday. One report had it that Russell already had seen the mayor and quoted him as saying, "everything looks favorable." Another, later denied, was that Capt. Stege "scouted rumors that he would be reinstated." Stege said he had discussed the matter with nobody.

Still another published rumor, likewise believed to be unauthentic, stated that City Collector Morris Eller, 20th ward boss, had gone to Wisconsin with his resignation in his pocket. Last night it developed that Eller is visiting his daughter at Lake Geneva and is nowhere near the mayor. Before leaving he flatly denied the resignation report. His son, Judge Emanuel Eller, termed the report "utterly absurd."

Deny Further Resignations.

Persons closest to the mayor have been and still are insisting that the resignations of Hughes and City Controller Fitzmorris were isolated politically and were not forerunners of a wholesale administration shakeup.

However, the outcome of Deputy Commissioner Russell's conference with the mayor on the police situation may furnish some real sensations, they said. Should Russell take the commissioner's job on his own terms and with the active support of the mayor, they predicted, his plan is to start a vigorous campaign of law enforcement. This, the mayor's advisers reason further, would be an indication of the mayor's intention to bring his administration into favor.

Capt. Stege is now chief investigator for the special grand jury investigating election fraud and terrorism. His appointment to a high office in the police department, thus, would likely be accepted as evidence of a reversal of the police attitude toward the investigation.

Known as Spectacular Officer.

During his police career of 17 years Capt. Stege gained a reputation as a spectacular officer. On one occasion Stege arrested Joe Saltis—for whom Hughes' men have been searching for over two months—and Saltis remarked he couldn't do it without a gun. Stege handed the gangster's weapon back to him and dared him to shoot. Saltis went quietly to jail.

Stege first incurred the wrath of the Thompson forces during the mayoralty campaign when he was sent to the Hotel Sherman to look for hoodlums. He discovered several Thompson politicians in the lobby and relieved them of guns. A few days later, acting upon orders, he raided several disorderly houses in the bailiwick of State's Attorney Crowe.

Two months after the election Commissioner Hughes filed charges against Capt. Stege, and after a trial before the civil service commission, described by his attorneys as "a burlesque," he was stripped of his star. The technical charge against him was that he had killed a man in 1900 while defending his mother against an attack and had falsified the police records by spelling his name Stege instead of "Stedge." Behind this evidence, however, politics was said to be the real reason for his dismissal.

Realignment Expected.

In addition to proposing the reinstatement of Capt. Stege, according to those best informed, Deputy Commissioner Russell will discuss with the mayor a realignment of other police commanders.

Deputy Commissioner William O'Connor, now in charge at the bureau, and Chief of Detectives Michael Grady would probably be relegated to station posts, giving Stege the job vacated by O'Connor, it is understood. Capt. John Egan is mentioned to fill Grady's post if the Russell program goes through. Egan is known to be regarded by Russell as a strong and efficient officer. Friends of Russell also believe that Deputy Commissioner John Alcock would be placed in charge of police discipline, while other deputies might be shifted or demoted to make way for captains brought in from other stations.

Should Deputy Commissioner Russell's conference with the mayor be satisfactory, he will formally take office on next Wednesday, Aug. 1. He would then become acting commissioner until his appointment is confirmed by the city council, now adjourned until Sept. 12.

Two Milwaukee Dailies Advance Price to 3 Cents

Milwaukee, Wis., July 28.—(AP)—An announcement of a one cent increase to three cents in the price of the Daily Journal and Wisconsin News, afternoon newspapers, effective Monday, was made today. The increase places all four Milwaukee dailies on a three cent basis.

In making the announcement today the Journal said that the annual cost of making the newspaper had increased in ten years from $2,000,000 to $5,500,000 and that it has become economically unsound to continue the two cent price.

DROWNED WHEN SPEEDBOAT CRASHED INTO STEAMER

START INQUIRY ON FOUR DEATHS IN BOAT CRASH

Holland Mayor Is Placed on Coroner's Jury.

Six leading men of Holland, Mich., including the mayor, were impaneled as a coroner's jury yesterday to investigate the deaths of three young men and a boy who were joy riding in an airplane motored speedboat when it crashed into the paddlewheel on the side of the big lake steamer City of Holland late Friday night.

The dead are Paul Landwehr, 21, son of the millionaire president of the Holland Furnace company; John Kolla Nystrom, 14, a cousin of Landwehr; Earl Van Lente, 22, and John Arens, 32, employés of the furnace company. Arens was the father of four children.

George Lyle, 21, an aviator, recently of Los Angeles, and Robert Mandrano, an Argentinian well known in New York as the dancing partner of Landwehr's sister, Donna Leano Landwehr, were rescued.

Makes Report of Accident.

Capt. D. A. McDonald of the City of Holland made a report of the accident yesterday when his ship docked in Chicago.

"We saw the speedboat several times as we passed through Black Lake channel from Holland to Lake Michigan, and it seemed to be circling around the steamer," he said. "I can't understand why they would come so near to our paddle wheel in a frail craft. They should have known the danger.

"Suddenly I heard a thud and I realized they had struck us. We lowered two boats and searched for the occupants for a half hour. Two of them were picked up by fishermen. When we couldn't find the others, and it was dark, we came on to Chicago. I regret the accident very much, but there was nothing we could have done to avoid it."

Young Landwehr was a licensed pilot. Last week he had won races in a water carnival with his boat, the Chriscraft. He was also a student of flying and when Lyle came to Holland to live they became constant companions, interested in airships and watercraft.

Use Airplane Motor.

In their desire for speed they replaced the boat's engine with an airplane motor.

"We were going 40 miles an hour," Lyle said, "and I believe it was Paul's intention to come as close to the ship as possible and then veer off. Something went wrong—what I don't know."

Coast guards and Sea Scouts spent the night cruising around Black Lake on the possible chance of rescuing others after Lyle and Mendrano had been picked up. In the afternoon they recovered the four bodies.

LIVERIGHT IN HOSPITAL AFTER MYSTERY INJURY

New York, July 28.—[Special.]—Horace Liveright, publisher and producer, was taken to Roosevelt hospital today with a fractured left arm. Considerable mystery surrounds the circimstances in which he was injured.

Mr. Liveright received an anaesthetic when his arm was set and efforts to get from him the story were unavailing.

His brother, Otto E. Liveright, said the publisher had been injured when his automobile struck a truck "somewhere in New Jersey" Friday night, en route to Deal, N. J. The brother said the producer had been brought back to his home and removed to the hospital.

The butler at the publisher's home declared he knew nothing of the accident; that Mr. Liveright had left there at 10 a. m. showing no signs of any injury.

ASKS CHANGE IN LAW TO PERMIT BEER IN HOMES

Provision for the sale of pre-Volstead beer to the family by the case and in reputable eating places by the bottle was recommended yesterday by Charles Conrad Hanch, well known automotive engineer. In a letter, copies of which were sent to both presidential candidates and all members of congress, he urged retention of the 18th amendment, but repeal or revision of the Volstead act.

"Leave the 18th amendment alone," Mr. Hanch wrote. "Amend or repeal the Volstead act and provide by federal law for the manufacture of old-fashioned, wholesome, nonintoxicating pre-Volstead beer and its sale to householders by the case and in reputable eating places by the bottle or glass under government regulation and taxation.

Making in the home of wines and ciders for household uses and not for sales would be permitted.

Retail Scale Highest in Eight Years.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Retail prices of beef in Chicago are the highest they have been for many years, and the peak is not yet reached. Reports indicate that an occasional porterhouse steak will soon sell at the war time price of $1 a pound.

In a shopping tour of various retail districts yesterday porterhouse steaks were selling at from 29 cents for No. 3 grade to 90 cents for No. 1 grade a pound. North side butchers are commonly asking from 75 to 80 cents a pound for their best grade of porterhouse and some as high as 90 cents.

The wide difference in quoted prices of similar cuts, amounting to as much as 61 cents a pound, is due to differences in the quality of meat. The 90 cent porterhouse is of the choicest steers, while the 29 cent steak is from a comparatively low grade animal.

Several retail meat markets in the loop were offering the best beef cuts they carry at the following prices: Porterhouse, 50 to 70 cents a pound; sirloins, 35 to 55 cents; rounds, 40 to 45 cents, and rib roast, 30 to 45 cents a pound.

Suburban Prices Higher.

Prices run higher outside the loop and in surrounding suburbs. Typical suburban shops yesterday morning were asking 70 cents a pound for the best porterhouse, 60 cents for sirloins, 50 cents for rounds, and from 40 to 50 cents a pound for rib roasts.

Porterhouse, 29 to 75 cents a pound.
Sirloin, first cut, 22 to 60 cents a pound.
Rib roast, light end, 20 to 45 cents a pound.

A year ago the same grades of porterhouse were selling at from 25 to 50 cents a pound; sirloins, 22 to 45; rounds, 20 to 45, and rib roasts, 20 to 36 cents a pound. Back in 1920 when steers on the hoof were selling higher than they are today the following prices prevailed: Porterhouses, 35 to 75 cents a pound; sirloins, 33 to 50 cents; rounds, 33 to 45 cents, and rib roast, 19 to 40 cents a pound.

Consumers say they cannot console themselves to the high prices now being asked for beef. The reason for the boost, they are told, is that there is a shortage of beef cattle in this country. The United States had about twelve and a half million fewer beef cattle on the farms at the first of the year in 1920 than they had at the beginning of this year when it was estimated that there were approximately 23,373,000 head.

At the Chicago stock yards during the last few days steers sold as high as $16.85 a hundred, the highest July price in the last eight years. The same kind of animal sold in July of 1920 at $17.25 a hundred. Beefsteaks were not as high then as they are now.

Retail butchers have paid from about 23 to 25 cents a pound for the choice dressed carcass of thousand pound steers during the last few days.

E. PEORIA SCHOOL HEAD DROPS DEAD.

Peoria, Ill., July 28.—[Special.]—W. N. Brown, 52, superintendent of East Peoria High school, dropped dead today of heart failure.

AUTOS TAKE 3 MORE LIVES IN DAY; TOLL, 570

Three deaths as a result of automobile accidents increased the motor toll in Cook county since Jan. 1 to 570 yesterday.

Cordelia Davis, colored, 16, of 6111 South Wabash avenue, was killed when she was struck at 59th and State streets by an oil tank truck driven by George Marx, 16, of 453 West Garfield boulevard.

John Hill, 40, of 4165 Lincoln avenue was killed when the automobile which he was driving collided at Lincoln and Ogden avenues with a machine driven by Robert Heist, 28, 743 Columbia avenue.

Joseph Possentino, 25, of 529 Hartland court, died of injuries suffered in collision of automobiles on July 22 at Ashland and Grand avenues.

At Valparaiso, Ind., George Stevenson, 5824 Prairie avenue, died of injuries sustained when his car overturned in a ditch. In Detroit three Chicagoans were injured when the Chicago-Detroit bus in which they were riding was struck by an interurban train. They are: Warren A. Good, 4501 Malden street; his wife, Sally, and Mrs. Minnie Barkwell.

VAST LOTTERY RACKET FACING POLICE CLEANUP

Nobody but Promoter Ever Wins.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 28.—[Special.]—You can bet on anything in New York—and lose. There are almost as many sucker crap games as night clubs, and race track bookies are as thick as buzzards in Mexico. But the prize racket of the gambling world here is the lottery.

Lottery tickets are easier to purchase in this town than postage stamps. Recently the police with the aid of their second cousins, the federal boys, set out to do something about it. Today they lifted one corner of the official tarpaulin and revealed a batch of sixteen prisoners and a cart load of printing presses and baseball pool tickets.

"We have only scratched the surface," said Inspector McAuliffe. "The two raids in which we captured these men was just a preliminary to our campaign against gamblin in this city."

A $50,000 A Week Racket.

These two hauls—one on a downtown printing establishment and the other on suite of offices in a Park Row building—broke up a ring that was doing a $50,000 a week business in Manhattan alone, besides sending out tickets by express all over the east and as far west as Chicago. Among the exhibits were tickets with such familiar names to baseball pool players as:

The Giant—$1,000 grand prize.

But You Never Win.

The tickets sold from 25 cents to $2 a week, and in all instances the procedure was the same—each player purchased a numbered ticket, on which he kept his score of runs scored in leagues according to the teams allotted on his ticket. If his runs seemed larger than any other possible combination he would claim the prize. As a rule he was told he had made some error and the prize had gone to some one in a distant city. This particular group of racketeers employed sixty salesmen, some of whom are said to have sold more than 1,000 tickets a week. One cigar store in Stamford, Conn., had a weekly order for 50,000 tickets.

Police said other large orders were regularly listed from Philadelphia, Chicago, Cleveland, and Cincinnati.

Penniless Wives Complain.

For weeks, it was said, anonymous complaints from wives and mothers of small wage earners who were losing money in the pools have been coming into police headquarters. Most of the complaints were signed "Heartbroken Mother," "Despairing Wife," or "Victim."

The federal agents joined in the raids when it was learned that lottery tickets were being distributed from this gambling center of the United States by means of mails and express. Each of the sixteen arrested was charged with the possession of lottery tickets and held in $500 bail.

Lotteries are thriving here as they never have before. Several thousand salesmen canvass the city daily, calling on workers in almost every office building, store, shop, and newspaper plant. The baseball lotteries, the largest of which is called the Albany pool, are only a drop in the bucket.

They're Hard to Kill.

The Albany pool, recently shut down, is said to be operating again under another name. Its secret headquarters never have been located. Broadway, which is down on the books for the next raid, supports a dozen lotteries. One is based on clearing house figures, another on stock market sales. Still others known as Red, Blue, Pink, Yellow and all the colors of the rainbow, are not based on anything. You just buy a number and keep paying for it every week when the "salesman" calls to tell you "Some guy out west won."

Harlem has more policy games than any other section of the city. The happy-go-lucky colored folks up there provide a golden field for lottery ticket venders. Everybody, from the newsboys to the deacons and the "widow ladies" plays the pools.

CHARGE SUSPECT WITH SLAYING OF AUTO OCCUPANT

Louis Gregory, 56, of 5812 Virginia avenue, was formally charged with manslaughter last evening in connection with the death of John Bradley, 23, who was shot as he sat with a girl in a parked automobile at Richmond street and Lincoln avenue on Friday night.

Gregory was arrested after Capt. Martin O'Malley of the Summerdale police had been informed he was known as a neighborhood crank and sometimes fired a rifle from a window. They added that he had in effect declared war on spooners near his home.

Detectives searched his home and found a .22 caliber rifle, which had been recently fired. Gregory admitted he had been shooting rats, but added that he had not fired at any persons in cars. In the car with Bradley was Miss Nellie Flynn, 850 Lawrence avenue. She was questioned and released. Bradley, who lived at 2423 North Talman avenue, was a plumber.

CAR TURNS OVER; FOUR HURT.

Newcastle, Pa., July 28.—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Wallach of Chicago and their two children were injured when their automobile turned over near here today.

DEFEATED, BUT NOT A PRISONER, NOBILE ASSERTS

Zappi verified our position. It was foggy and after observations had been made the airship was lowered to permit us to get a glimpse of land. We descended to a height of about 150 meters [492 feet] before we could get below the fog and from 12:30 to 2:30 a. m. on the morning of May 24 we circled over the pole.

"No life was to be seen. We could not even see the sky above us. But we wound up the gramophone in our cabin and when Gen. Nobile gave the signal we started playing.

Lower Flag and Crucifix.

"The Italians held up their hands in Fascisti salute while the gramophone played a Fascist hymn, and after that came another record, "Beautiful Italy with All My Heart," a patriotic song sung by the Italian minority in Triest and its terrain when they belonged to Austria before the war. When the song ended we lowered over the pole a big silk Italian flag we had brought for the purpose and a huge crucifix blessed by the pope.

"It had been the intention that Mariano, Prof. Pontemoli, and Dr. Malmgren should be lowered to the ice, but on account of the way the Italia was bumping about in the wind Gen. Nobile thought it unwise to carry out this plan. We did not even drink the champagne we had brought with us for the occasion. Somehow, we forgot about that. After two hours of circling over the pole, we began what we hoped was to be our homeward journey. We did not go straight south, however, as Gen. Nobile wanted to explore the area to the east and southeast. We found no land there and met nothing but fog and wind.

Misfortune Overtakes Ship.

"I had my last observation at 8:35 a. m. on May 25. Precisely an hour later I was standing, watch in hand, to make my next observation when misfortune overtook the Italia.

"Malmgren, I remember, was standing near the side rudder of the airship. Zappi was tending the altitude rudder. Gen. Nobile stood at his post in the navigation cabin. The wind had changed to the southwest and had increased in force. We were about 1,200 meters above the ice. Five minutes before the final disaster the Italia suddenly became very heavy.

"Ceccioni burst into the cabin and told Gen. Nobile she was sinking. Gen. Nobile immediately sent Alessandri up on the roof of the balloon to examine the airhole. I believe it was not more than two minutes before Alessandri had climbed up before the Italia was down on the ice.

"From a height of 500 meters she fell with the speed of a bird wounded in flight and with her rear end foremost. Gen. Nobile had ordered the engines stopped and we were now drifting eastward with the wind. Gen. Nobile shouted to Malmgren to leave the side rudder so he should not be crushed if we collided with the ice. Zappi, however, still stood by the altitude rudder.

"Stern foremost, the Italia struck the ice. It was a bad moment. Pomella was instantly killed by the impact, but I believe it was our salvation that the stern took the first blow. The big gondola struck the ice with its lower half first and was completely shattered."

"We fell out. The airship drifted on with those who were asleep at the time she fell, with the motormen and with Alessandri, who was still on the balloon deck. I did not see anything more of her. You understand, so much was happening. We later measured the distance between the ruins of the rear gondola and navigation controller. It was at most 200 meters, showing that everything must have happened in a second.

"Just beside the ruins of the rear gondola. Pomella was lying with his head crushed. Malmgren was sitting next to Mariano.

"Malmgren Wanted to Go."

"Why did they leave us?" Behounek suddenly broke off his main narrative to ask. "They wanted to go. Gen. Nobile did not order them. He merely declared he wanted to stay with Ceccioni and that the others might go if they wished."

He referred to Dr. Finn Malmgren and his two Italian companions, Zappi and Mariano, who attempted to walk to land.

"It was after four days had passed and Biagi had received no reply to his radio message. Malmgren himself wished to go. Mariano and Zappi, you see, could not march alone.

"They had calculated they would be able to walk ten kilometers per day. That was wrong, but at that time we knew nothing of the speed of the ice drift. That was the cause of the fate of the Malmgren party. It is reported that Zappi, when he was found, wore three suits. I do not consider it incredible that Zappi may have put Mariano's clothes on, too."

PAYS COURT $97.20 FOR BAGGING A MEAL OF ROBINS

Peter Contela, 39, of 11535 Prairie avenue, cares nothing for robins as songsters, but favors them greatly as an article of diet.

Yesterday he went into the outskirts of South Holland with a rifle to get a meal. He had shot nine of the birds when a stranger approached and asked him what he intended to do with the game.

"I'll stew 'em up into a fine mess," he said. "Ever eat any robins?"

The stranger said no. Then he disclosed his identity. It was Chief of Police Jacob P. Young of South Holland, who is also president of a chapter of the Izaak Walton league. Contela was taken before Magistrate Henry Oster and fined $10 for each robin. The total bill, included costs, for the meal of robins he didn't eat, was $97.20.

LIQUOR STRIFE TEARS AWAY PARTY LINES

Rural Districts Face Test to Rule Land.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 28.—[Special.]—With prohibition the paramount issue and the wet cities rising to throw off the yoke of the dry rural districts which have ruled the nation for a century and a half, the United States now is in the throes of a presidential election fraught with the most stupendous implications since the polling of 1860 in the shadows of the slavery conflict.

The entire country is torn with the strife of this contest for the presidency. Early predictions that there would be but one battlefield and that in the east, have gone by the board. There are at least three battle grounds in this election whereon a desperate struggle will be waged.

The Three Battle Grounds.

There is the east the wetness of which is relied on by the Democratic management to compass the election of Smith. There is the south where the churchmen and the women are in revolt against Smith and endeavoring to swing the solid south to Hoover. There is the traditionally Republican corn belt where 32 farm organizations have indorsed the Democratic party farm relief plan.

Party lines are being torn asunder. Wet Republicans are lining up for Smith, dry Democrats for Hoover. But where the disgruntled Republican farmers are headed is not clear at this time, but if they follow the lead of the corn belt farm organizations that promoted the McNary-Haugen bill, they will be plumping for Smith.

And athwart the scene is cast the shadow of religious intolerance. The prejudice against the elevation of a Roman Catholic to the presidency lurks behind the drive against Smith engineered by Protestant churchmen ostensibly on the prohibition issue. They are against Smith because he is a wet but they would be against him even if he were a dry, because he is a Catholic. Evidence of this cropped out at the Asheville conference and is coming to light in hundreds of summer religious meetings now being held in the south.

Smith Forces Dry Issue.

Smith has drawn the line of battle in a manner never dreamed of by the leaders of either of the major parties before the nominating conventions. The forthright New York governor has forced the issue of prohibition, an issue that both parties sought to bury. The leaders on both sides confidently assured themselves that it would not be an issue in this election. It might come to the fore in 1932 but not this time.

Smith made prohibition the paramount issue with his telegram to the Houston convention, declaring that if elected he would endeavor to bring about the modification of the prohibition law and with his appointment of John J. Raskob, who boldly advocates the institution of a government liquor dispensary system.

Other Issues in Shade.

All other issues have been thrown into the shade. Even farm relief has become a lesser issue. The tariff no longer is an issue, the Democratic party having embraced the Republican protective tariff principle. Everybody is thinking and talking prohibition. The presidential election has been turned overnight into a great referendum on the question of whether the prohibition law shall or shall not be modified.

Such spokesmen of the drys as Bishop Mouzon of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, have conceded that the polling in November will constitute a referendum on prohibition modification. If Smith should be elected the drys would be compelled to admit the country had declared for modification. If Hoover should win the wets would be forced to concede that the people had rejected their modification proposals.

See Modification Early.

Opponents of prohibition suddenly have been filled with high hopes of achieving its modification much earlier than otherwise could have been expected. They had about concluded that the prohibition experiment needs must become still more farcical before the country would be roused to action. Then Al spoke and changed the situation in a flash. The anti-prohibitionists saw that if Smith could be elected they would have an opening wedge to modification. Only congress can change the law and though they might fail to carry congress this time they would have a President to lead the fight for a congress in 1930 or 1932, that would change the law. And there is no more powerful leader of a cause than a President.

No wonder the hopes of the anti-prohibitionists flamed high. And every move that Smith has made has raised their hopes still higher. He swung the party to a protective tariff stand and thus allayed the fears of business men that if he were elected the tariff wall would be razed and hard times would ensue.

Bids for Big Business.

He made a big business magnate chairman of the Democratic national committee, thus enlisting the influence and financial support of aggregations of big business hitherto aligned with the Republicans. By these moves Smith has made it easy for the wet Republican business man to support him without apprehension.

The wet east is aflame with enthusiasm for Smith. Al is its white hope and Raskob is its assurance that there will be plenty of money to organize the country and get out the vote to put Al over. To the wets it looks like the propitious moment for the great offensive against the drys of which they have been dreaming.

The Republicans recognize the serious menace with which they are confronted in the larger cities throughout the country and particularly in the east, where the urban vote constitutes the majority vote in a number of states.

G. O. P. Faces Uphill Fight.

The Republicans realize it is going to be uphill work for them to carry New York, New Jersey, and Massachusetts, where the Republican party is shot through with the disaffection of the wets. Even in Pennsylvania, which the Republicans never have failed to carry for President, but where the wet urban Republicans nominated Vare for senator, Hoover is threatened with a loss of Republican votes proportionately greater than the dry votes Smith is likely to lose in any state of the dry solid south.

With his bid for support of the wet cities Smith is staking his chances of victory on carrying the east, holding the south in line and picking up just enough scattering votes in the west to put him over. But he realizes he cannot win without New York in any event nor in all probability without Massachusetts, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Delaware. Wherefore, his strategy has been to inspire hopes in these wet states that his election would pave the way to modification of the prohibition law at no distant date.

G. O. P. Foresaw Menace.

The menace now faced by the Republicans in the wet cities and particuarly in the wet states of the east, is precisely what the Republican leaders in those regions have foreseen for years.

Charles D. Hilles, national committeeman for New York, warned the G. O. P. hierarchy long ago that the Empire state soon would be irretrievably lost to the Republicans unless the party made concession to the reaction against Volsteadism which Smith was capitalizing in every election to the discomfiture of the Republicans. How to stem the tide of wet Republican defection is the present concern of the Republican leaders in the east.

They are clinging to the hope that Mr. Hoover in his speech of acceptance will offset Smith's bid for the wet vote by holding forth some promise of a receptive attitude toward modification, if he should be elected. That, the eastern Republican leaders calculate, would tend to keep the less rabid wet Republicans in line for the ticket.

In the entire situation there is nothing more prophetically significant than the rise of the cities to a position threatening the overthrow of the rule of the rural regions in this country. Smith, a city bred man, preëminently the candidate of the cities because he is wet and they are wet. Hoover, son of a village blacksmith and nurtured in rural atmosphere, has made himself the rural favorite by espousing rural views on prohibition.

For a century and a half country has dominated city in the government of the American republic. The cities have been compelled to bow to the ideals, prejudices and whims of rural majorities in congress and state legislatures.

Country Wrote 18th Amendment.

The writing of the 18th amendment into the constitution was the latest and greatest triumph of country over city. And that the dominance of country over city might be perpetuated the rural regions for more than a century have denied the cities their just representation in state legislatures.

Representation in legislatures originally was so devised as to discriminate against cities and in the last two decades there has been a denial outright to the cities in many states, as in Illinois, of the increased representation to which increased population entitled them.

For twenty years the Illinois legislature, dominated by rural drys, has refused to reapportion representation in the legislature because it would increase the representation of wet Chicago and other large Illinois cities in Springfield.

Likewise for the last decade the rural majority in congress has prevented a congressional reapportionment under the census of 1920 which would operate to increase by not less than fifty members the representation of wet cities in the house.

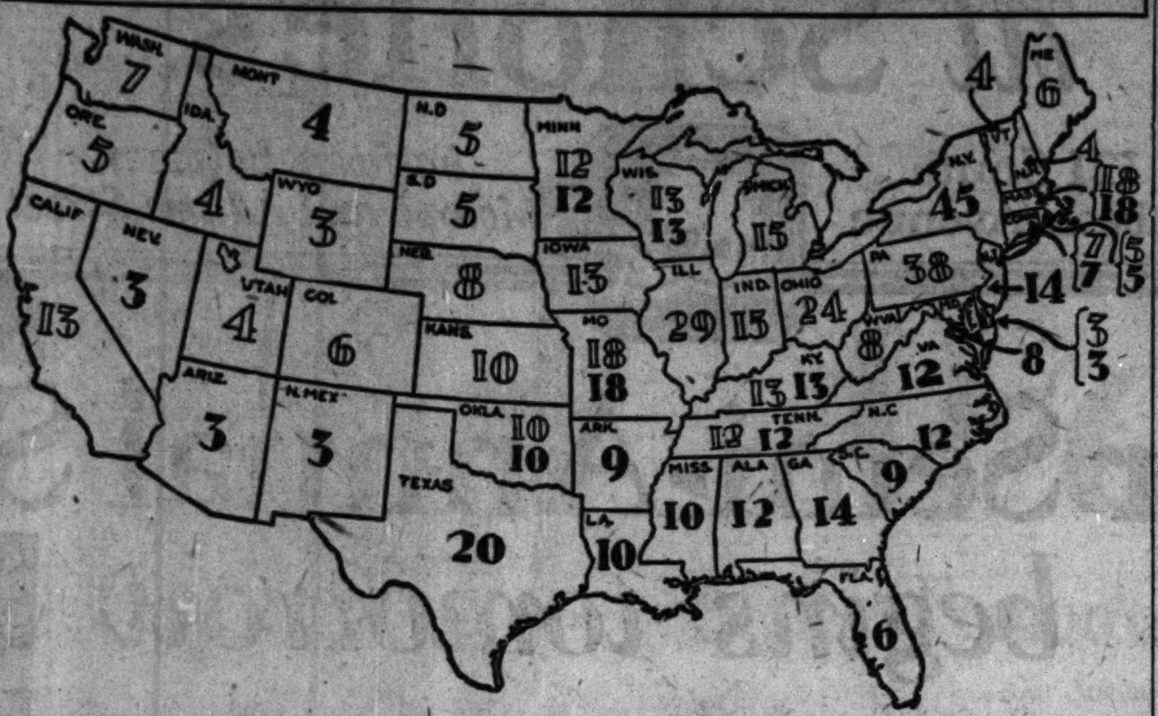
Now there are unmistakable indications that the worm has turned at last. The wet cities, populated largely by foreign born citizens with notions of personal liberty diametrically opposed to those of rural America, are struggling to break the fetters of Volsteadism. If Smith wins the result will be an indication that the cities have come into power in the land. If Hoover wins provincial America still will be in the saddle.

But even though the country beats the cities in this contest it will be only a question of time at the present rate of urban growth when the rural regions will be compelled to pass under the yoke.

The population was 45.8 per cent urban in 1910 and 51.4 per cent urban in 1920. Presumably it is more than 55 per cent urban now and still going up. But by "urban" the census bureau means all places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and the smallest of the cities thus classified are essentially rural in thought and outlook.

Everywhere the drys are sounding the warning that rural America is threatened with overthrow in the government of the country.

ESTIMATED POLITICAL MAP OF THE U. S.



The figures in the map give the electoral vote in eachstate. The black figures represent Smith votes and those in outline are for Hoover. In the doubtful states figuresfor both candidates are shown.

CURTIS EXPECTED TO STRESS FARM AID IN SPEECH

Voted for McNary-Haugen Bill in Senate.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 28.—[Special.]—Republican campaign managers are counting upon Senator Charles Curtis, the vice presidential nominee, to do yeoman service in bringing the agricultural west into the line for the party ticket.

It is understood Senator Curtis will stress the farm relief issue in his acceptance speech which he has been working on in Washington during the last week.

As one of the allied group which opposed the nomination of Herbert Hoover for the presidency in Kansas City because of his refusal to support the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, Senator Curtis now Hoover's running mate, is expected to explain to the agricultural voters the reason for his present confidence and promises of the presidential nominee.

Senator Curtis voted for the McNary-Haugen bill in the senate and then voted to sustain President Coolidge's veto of the measure.

Soon after making his acceptance speech in Topeka, Kas., on Aug. 18 Senator Curtis will begin an active campaign.

He will make a number of speeches in the agricultural west as well as in other parts of the country.

The nominee will leave Washington within the next few days for Topeka.

New Form of Helicopter Is Invented by German

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 28.—The central office for the investigation of new aviation inventions announces that a German has invented a new form of helicopter plane. The model, which was tried out in Berlin, has a horizontal rotating propeller which makes vertical ascents and descents possible and holds the machine suspended in air. A full size helicopter is under construction.

PLENTY OF FUN WITH AL ON TRIP TO LONG ISLAND

Jumps Into Bathing Suit and Dives Into Bay.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Hampton Bays, L. I., July 28.—[Special.]—Al Smith is having a grand day. Once more he is boss of the show and worrying about everybody's comfort.

And that always makes him happy.

The brief vacation which he is giving himself between now and the opening of his campaign for the presidency of the United States has begun.

Already he has extended it. Last night it was to last "oh until about next Wednesday."

But when he snuffed the salt air late today, and saw the dimpling waters of Long Island sound, he weakened, and to my question he whispered back, "I don't think I'll get back to Albany till the fifth of August."

Family Ready About on Time.

Amid prolonged cheering by a section of the sweltering New York City multitude, the governor rolled away from the Biltmore at precisely noon. Only half an hour behind schedule, which is pretty good for him because, as he tells it, starting time always depends on "when the family is ready."

Al Smith lived through the cheering and the handshaking at the departure. He is at home with crowds. Knows how to manage them and makes them listen. It is private political conferences that tire and irk him.

Big political rallies and throngs are the joy of his life. He feels at home amid the turmoil.

Bids Thousands Good-By.

So with "good-by everybody" to the thousands, he motored at a 30 mile pace north in Madison avenue and east over Queensborough bridge on to Long Island. A dozen cars filled with relatives and reporters followed him.

A squad of the New York state police in their drab uniforms that are touched with purple, led the way.

The first stop was Smithtown, half way down the island, and in Smithtown is the old Riverside Inn, which in gayer days was an authentic gathering place for sporting men. Into the old bar, which has become a sedate lunch room, the nominee strode with his train of scriveners in his wake.

Instantly he was candidate all over. Planting one foot firmly on the old bar rail he said:

"Tall glasses with a lot of ice in them and then some bottles sizzly water."

"Running for Alderman."

And that was all. Al Smith looked apologetic but he said nothing. He soon was, however, full of quips.

"Don't," he said to the happy host, "be taking any money from these men; I need all the votes. I am running for alderman."

Subdued but relishing laughter rewarded this remark and some of the inn's help stole out of the room to tell the great man's pleasantry to other help looking on from the inn yard.

The governor examined with keen interest the old sporting prints in the bar. Grand old colored prints of Tom Cribb, "champion of England," in 1842, and of "Deaf" Burke hanging on the other side of the doorway, and a modern photograph that pictures the signing of the articles of a prize fight over a case of Pom Sec in New York in 1892.

Finds Democracy in Land.

So the candidate and his retinue sipped and munched and chaffed, just as Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover and their retinues would not, and all was very cheerful and unassuming as an old shoe.

The value of the occasion, if any, was that you somehow got the feeling from it that this country still is a democracy and that the inhabitants of it don't set much store by pomp.

Finally Al Smith called out: "Well, is everybody served? Are we all caught up?"

That appeared to indicate departure, but all of a sudden a cool nose was poked into the candidates hand and a brown collie that had been clipped all over save top of head and tip of tail demanded his attention.

"Here Comes the Lion!"

"Gee," exclaimed the governor, "here comes the lion!"

More laughter.

"Now," he called, "all aboard; get on the boat!"

While he was helping daughter Emily [Mrs. Warner] into the car she snuggled her cheek against his and stole a kiss, and he laid his arm caressingly on her shoulder when she did that.

Watching all that I thought to myself, well, the White House will be a cheerful place if ever this man goes there to live.

Indicating the route for the rest of the way of nearly a hundred mile journey, he appeared to know the roads and the short cuts better than the drivers did, and, as I was telling you, he was the busy boss of the parade all the way along, and in his herringbone tweeds he looked very well indeed.

We passed the little wayside schoolhouse where Walt Whitman, the "good gray poet," taught school nearly a hundred years ago.

Nominee John W. Davis of four years ago would have been interested and he would have stopped, but times have changed in the Democratic party.

So we pushed on past the lane that leads to Walt's birthplace at Amityville.

Gets into Bathing Suit.

Finally we drew up at a country club called the Canoe Place Inn at Hampton Bays which the governor is going to make his headquarters for several days.

The club overlooks Peconic bay and it wasn't ten minutes before the candidate was out of his tweeds and into his blue bathing suit with the white stripes and sporting in the water. He loved it.

He swims well. He can perform tricks in the water.

All the while he was playing about you could see his gold encased scapular gleaming from a gold chain that hung around his neck and I was winded of the Catholic boys I used to go swimming with long, long ago, only their scapulars were not incased in gold.

One of the governor's favorite cronies greeted him at the club. He is William H. Todd, the shipbuilder, and on his yacht Al Smith is going to spend many hours this coming week.

Todd is the man who, questioned by a United States senate committee that was probing election funds, said to the august examiners: "Speak louder, I got a bum ear."

A Republican, but for Al.

Asked also whether he would contribute to a fund for the election of Al Smith, the shipbuilder replied: "All I've got, if that would make him President. I'm a Republican, but I'm for Al."

Two girls from Houston in pith helmets, who told their Uncle Al that they had made it from Houston to New York in seven days, greeted him at the Biltmore this morning and gave him $5 for his campaign fund.

He kept their bill as a souvenir and had them write their names on it. Then he gave them another bill, with his name written on it. Later, when his souvenir bill got warm in his pocket, he had an awful time reading their names. The best he could do was "Caroline Mayburn" and "Amanda Earl."

Before he parted with the girls he stood up in his car before 2,000 persons and put one pith helmet on top of his straw hat.

He'll never grow old. Lord love him.

Wm. Allen White Dares Al to Defend Tammany Record

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 28.—[Special.]—William Allen White, Emporia, Kas., editor, today issued a statement that will lend a little zest to the Democratic presidential campaign. In it, Mr. White cited his proofs of his earlier charges that Al Smith was a tool of Tammany and the saloon.

"Two weeks ago," said the man from Kansas, "Gov. Smith did me the honor to wallop me over a preacher's shoulder. He called the preacher, of whom I never heard, a liar and an 18 carat faker in the matter of Gov. Smith's assembly records. I am now ready to present his assembly record to Gov. Smith and to face him with his own votes on questions affecting the saloon and its two parasites—the gambler and the prostitute.

Challenges to Debate.

"I'm no debater, but I'll gladly forego my trip to Europe if Gov. Smith wants to discuss the matter further. And, more than that, if he questions any vote, a photostat of that page in the New York Assembly Journal will be presented. If Gov. Smith does not care to debate the matter, the photostat pages will be presented anyway.

Regarding Gov. Smith's activities in the assembly, Mr. White's statement read:

"These detailed record votes will show that he voted, or is so recorded, for nearly a dozen years on the big controversial measures with the most notorious saloon men in the Tammany delegation. He, with all his intelligence, with all his honesty, with all his courage—which no one questions—seems to have left his high, qualities in escrow with Charles Murphy when he went to Albany as assemblyman and there made a Tammany record on the saloon, the gambler and the prostitute. No klansman in a boob legislature, cringing before a kleagle or a wizard, was more subservient to the crack of the whip than Al Smith."

"Fine Citizen," He Admits.

The "sage of Emporia" leaned backward to give the man from the sidewalks of New York the praise that was due him.

"Gov. Smith has been a fine, busy, useful American citizen," his statement read, "since he left the assembly."

A little further along Mr. White points out that "this record is, of course, an old record of a young man. But the young man rose on this record. And today the issue is formed on the elements that made this old record—the return of the saloon which Gov. Smith as a young man defended so ably, so consistently, so loyally. But the Tammany system goes on today as it went on 100 years ago, and as it will go on in all of our American cities unless Gov. Smith and the sinister forces behind him are overthrown."

"Retriever for Tammany."

Mr. White explains that he has assembled this detailed data, proving his previous charges against the New York governor, "not because Smith is as wet as a collie dog coming out of the water with a stick in his mouth, but to prove that in the legislative pool Al Smith was in fact retrieving for Tammany.

Continuing, he declares:

"It is not the humidity of his votes, but the subserviency of them that should interest the American people. To see these long pages of votes on the record in which Smith's name is lined up with the plug uglies of Tammany is not an edifying spectacle for those who wish to make a President out of the governor of New York."

Insisting that he was not a "mudthrower," and that he respected the intelligence of Al Smith, Mr. White turned to the motives that prompted the governor to vote as the editor says the records show he voted.

A Victim of Tammany.

"I do not question his motives. To get where he is with his crowd he had to do what he did and from his standpoint it was probably worth the price. But the real point of interest in that record for the American people now—if Gov. Smith will defend it—is the picture of Tammany putting the pressure on fine, aspiring young men like Al Smith and forcing them to use their courage, not upon the evils of Tammany, but in behalf of the friends of Tammany.

"The records will show how Tammany demands that a man of Gov. Smith's intelligence twist that intelligence into a weapon for Tammany's use; how it overlays his conscience with Tammany psychology so that his loyalty is to Tammany when Tammany's interest clashes with that of his city, his state, or his country."

He's Sorry, But Firm.

In making his statement public White emphasized the fact that he made no claim that Gov. Smith now is a "Tammany plug ugly." He declined to enlarge on this phase of the matter, but the closing paragraph of his statement says:

"I realize and am saddened by the fact that this Tammany record faces a man who is a candidate of a major party for the highest office in the gift of the people. I honor him for having risen from the debasing subserviency of those who in the days of his youth sweated dimes from the poor through those that prey upon the poor—the saloonkeeper, the tout, and the prostitute."

The Kansan closed his statement with the following thought: "Tammany is indeed Tammany, and Smith is its major prophet."

OWEN RENEWS PRIVATE WAR WITH AL SMITH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 28.—[Special.]—Robert L. Owen, former Democratic senator from Oklahoma, renewed his private war with Gov. Al Smith of New York today in amplifying his reasons for deserting the Smith-Robinson ticket in favor of Herbert Hoover.

Following a call at Republican headquarters, the Democratic bolter asserted that neither Tammany nor Gov. Smith had any claim whatever to his loyalty. He asserted that Tammany has been disloyal to Democratic presidential candidates "since Gov. Smith became its employé 33 years ago." He asserted he never had approved the Tammany system.

Senator Owen flatly denied that he had left the Democratic party and asserted he had deserted Smith simply because of his Tammany environment and affiliations.

WHARTON'S PLEA FOR FREEDOM IS HEARD BY COURT

Judge to Rule Tomorrow on Defense Motion.

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson announced yesterday that he would give his decision tomorrow on the motion to take the case of Attorney Charles S. Wharton from the jury and quash the indictment which charges him with complicity in the Evergreen Park mail train robbery of Feb. 25.

Before State Senator James J. Barbour made the motion in behalf of Wharton, the government closed its case against the attorney and Charles [Limpy] Cleaver, co-defendants in the $122,000 robbery trial.

Decision to omit evidence obtained by tapping the telephone wires to Cleaver's home was made by Assistant District Attorney John E. Northup after Judge Wilkerson said he was doubtful that such evidence could be legally relied upon, though a Supreme court ruling was in favor of the admission under certain conditions.

Argue Last Three Counts.

The argument on the motion to free Wharton centered on the last three counts in the indictment against him. Seven counts are contained in the indictment, and the first four, charging the former congressman with the use of arms in the commission of the robbery and other specific charges in connection with it, were ruled out on an agreement by both sides.

The fifth count charges Wharton with robbing the mails, the sixth with unlawfully and knowingly having in his possession mail pouches belonging to the government, and the seventh with conspiring with others to commit robbery. Under the conspiracy charge the attorney is accused of permitting the mail robbers to use his home as a hiding place after the holdup.

"There is a state statute concerning a general charge of conspiracy to steal and if Wharton conspired to steal without knowledge that the crime was to be against the federal government the indictment charging conspiracy against the United States cannot hold," Senator Barbour declared in his argument. "The federal statutes do not cover such a charge."

"Evidence must be shown that the defendant had knowledge of what they were going to do," the court agreed. "But the point is, what is knowledge of a criminal act?"

Barbour Cites Evidence.

"Wharton knew nothing of any offense against the United States being committed," Senator Barbour continued. "A man comes to him and says 'I am going to pull off a little job and want to use your home as a hideout.'"

Precedents were read by Senator Barbour to support his arguments that the evidence was not sufficient to give Wharton's case to the jury.

"Wharton made no inquiry regarding the job to be done," Judge Wilkerson remarked. "If he had made inquiry when the request was made to use his house and he had been misled or deceived or if he wilfully closed his eyes, is he then at law charged with knowledge? I think that is the question in the case."

"No duty can be forced on him to inquire," Senator Barbour retorted. "There are things pulled off under the amendments called little jobs."

The judge then advanced this proposition:

"Even though Wharton enters into a conspiracy, thinking that the 'little job' to be pulled was to be committed in violation of a state law, but the members of the band commit an offense against the federal laws, is Wharton liable for that offense because of his foreknowledge that a crime was to be committed?

Holds Robbery Charge Possible.

"I can see," he continued, "why Wharton might not be guilty of a conspiracy to violate the federal laws if it were true that Wharton did not know the crime was to be against the United States, but the case could still go to the jury on the charge of robbing the mails, with which he is charged in the fifth count in the indictment."

The argument of Mr. Northup that Wharton had knowledge of the crime was centered on "significant incidents" which occurred during the alleged talk between Cleaver and Frank Meccia, one of the three bandits who have confessed to the robbery and taken the stand for the government. It was in this talk, on the night before the robbery, Meccia testified, that Cleaver told Wharton about the "little job" and asked permission to hide in the lawyer's home.

"Wharton led Cleaver and Meccia into the bedroom of his home instead of the room where Mrs. Wharton was," Mr. Northup stated. "There arises the suspicion there that Cleaver and Wharton had talked about this before. The fact that Wharton told them to 'kick in the window' is also significant in that the job was so important that they could not come in the regular way with a key."

Mr. Northup also contended that when Wharton read in the newspapers about the robbery in his neighborhood he should have known that Cleaver was connected with it and had used

IRENE PAVLOSKA HEARS MESIROW ALIMONY TRIAL

Blames His Wife; Calls Her Jealous.

Mme. Irene Pavloska of the Chicago Civic Opera company brought her attorney with her when she appeared yesterday in response to a subpoena before Circuit Judge Harry Fisher.

"I'm prepared to fight," she said. "I'll not be intimidated because of my friendship for Dr. Mesirow."

The soprano, well known in Chicago for her concert as well as her operatic work, was summoned by Mrs. Eda Mesirow, estranged wife of Dr. Maurice E. Mesirow, as a witness on his petition to reduce a temporary alimony order.

The hearing was continued until Monday before she was put on the stand to be questioned regarding her relations with the doctor.

"The doctor and I are good friends, nothing more," Mme. Pavloska, said to reporters. "His sister, you know, was my accompanist for a long time and now we hold recitals jointly.

"Mrs. Mesirow is jealous because the doctor is not interested in her and he is interested in me. She knows that his professional practice and his health as well have been ruined. She believes that my reputation cannot stand up under her attacks and I will pay an alimony order that Dr. Mesirow is not able to pay."

Mme. Pavloska smiled confidently at her lawyer, William Wilhartz. He intimated that he will seek redress for his client after the Mesirow separate maintenance suit has been heard on its merits at the fall term of court.

Dr. Mesirow, an eye, ear, nose, and throat specialist of 30 North Michigan avenue, was put on the witness stand by his attorney, Joseph Z. Willner, at the beginning of the alimony hearing. He told of spine trouble that made it impossible for him to keep up his professional earnings. His testimony will be resumed tomorrow.

German Invents Film Made Out of Paper

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 28.—Paper films are the newest German invention. It is asserted they will revolutionize the picture industry. A Berlin engineer announces that after years of tests he has succeeded in manufacturing paper which is as susceptible to light as celluloid. It is not inflammable and is cheaper than celluloid film. The Schwerin studios say the invention is a complete success.

COUNTY G. O. P. TREADS THORNY PATH TO UNION

Vote Trading Deals May Imperil Strength.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Sparks may fly next Wednesday and Thursday when Cook county Republican leaders start their expected effort to work out a campaign plan for their local nominees in the November battle against the Democrats.

The April primary resulted in a division of county and sanitary district nominations among hostile factions. The Deneen group won four major places, headed by the state's attorneyship. The Thompson-Crowe-Galpin organization landed seven places and aided in winning two for Brundage candidates, with whom it had a tenuous alliance.

In political values the Deneen places are considered worth more than the greater number of nominations held by the Thompson-Crowe people, but the latter have the advantage in this situation because of their control of a majority of the county committee to whose hands party rules and custom consign the conduct of the inter-party fight.

Difficult Path to Harmony.

It is recognized that party unification behind the national and state tickets aids county nominees and it is believed all local Republican chieftains want all the benefits they can get from the party circle to offset a heavy Chicago vote for Al Smith. But they admit the path even to surface harmony is a hard one.

Nobody who witnessed the April hostilities expects full coöperation between the Republican factions this fall, no matter what the arrangement for campaign management. One observer has summarized the situation by saying that the impending contest will be one between the traders and the scratchers. The former are the flophouse voters who can be delivered either way by bipartisan deals. The scratchers are the independent voters who, regardless of their votes on the top of the ticket, will vote for the best men for local office whether they are Republicans or Democrats.

Rival Tickets Presented.

A view of the factional makeup of the Republican ticket, showing the share each faction holds, paralleled by the Democratic ticket to give a glimpse of the opportunities for the bipartisan traders, is provided by the following tabulation, which in substance is a section of the November ballot. These are the nominees of the two parties:

STATE'S ATTORNEY.
Republican.	Democratic.
John A. Swanson [D]	William J. Lindsay
SANITARY DISTRICT [Full Term].
Oscar Nelson [T-C]	*T. J. Crowe
H. W. Elmore [D]	*J. M. Whalen
Morris Eller [T-C]	*Henry A. Berger
SANITARY DISTRICT [Vacancy].
E. F. Moore [T-C]	R. A. Woodhull
SHERIFF.
G. H. Weideling [D]	J. E. Traeger
RECORDER.
*J. W. Jaranowski [T-C]	Clayton Smith
CIRCUIT CLERK.
*T. O. Wallace [B]	T. J. Bowler
SUPERIOR CLERK.
Samuel Erickson [B]	M. S. Szymczak
CORONER.
*Oscar Wolff [T-C]	H. N. Bundesen
ASSESSOR.
E. L. Nusser [T-C]	*J. E. Conroy
BOARD OF REVIEW.
*E. R. Litsinger [D]	Thomas A. Nash
SURVEYOR.
*Fred Norlin [T-C]	U. H. Gray

B—Indicates Brundage; D—Deneen; T-C—Thompson-Crowe; *—Incumbent.

Mayor Reported Regular.

Under pressure from his associates, particularly those on the south side, Mayor Thompson has declared privately—and probably will announce publicly later—that he will be regular in every way and support every Republican nominee from President to county surveyor. This may go, say the cynics, for the distinctly Thompsonian element, but they know, they insist, that a number of Crowe-Galpin lieutenants will be working with the Democrats when it comes to the Deneen places on the ticket.

Heavy Trading Expected.

Inter-party trading to some extent has characterized every Chicago election in recent years. But the prophets say the Republicans who supported State's Attorney Crowe in the primary will set a new record this fall in throwing everything they can to the Democratic nominee, Judge William J. Lindsay, and against the Deneen winner in April, Judge John A. Swanson.

The offices of state's attorney and sheriff, both wrenched from the hands of the Thompson-Crowe combination in the primary, are the law enforcement power of the county. The power of those two offices, particularly that of the prosecutor, was the real keystone of the combination. The machine leaders know that power will be used for a different purpose if it comes into the hands of the Deneen nominees.

Therefore, it is said, they would much prefer to see victory come to the Democrats, Judge Lindsay and John E. Traeger. Both those men are considered less dangerous to the City hall and the Thompson-Crowe county and sanitary district officials, and to some of the judges charged with amenability to machine influence.

Sanitary Board Deal Seen.

It also is reported that the Thompson-Crowe leaders would not weep over the defeat of Edward R. Litsinger of the board of review by the Democratic nominee, Thomas A. Nash. And although these same Republicans, particularly Mayor Thompson, will concentrate on an effort to elect Oscar Nelson and Edward F. Moore as sanitary trustees and thereby gain control of that rich patronage field, they may be willing to support one Democratic candidate for the district as part of the deal. They are not expected to exert themselves for Howard W. Elmore, the Deneen nominee.

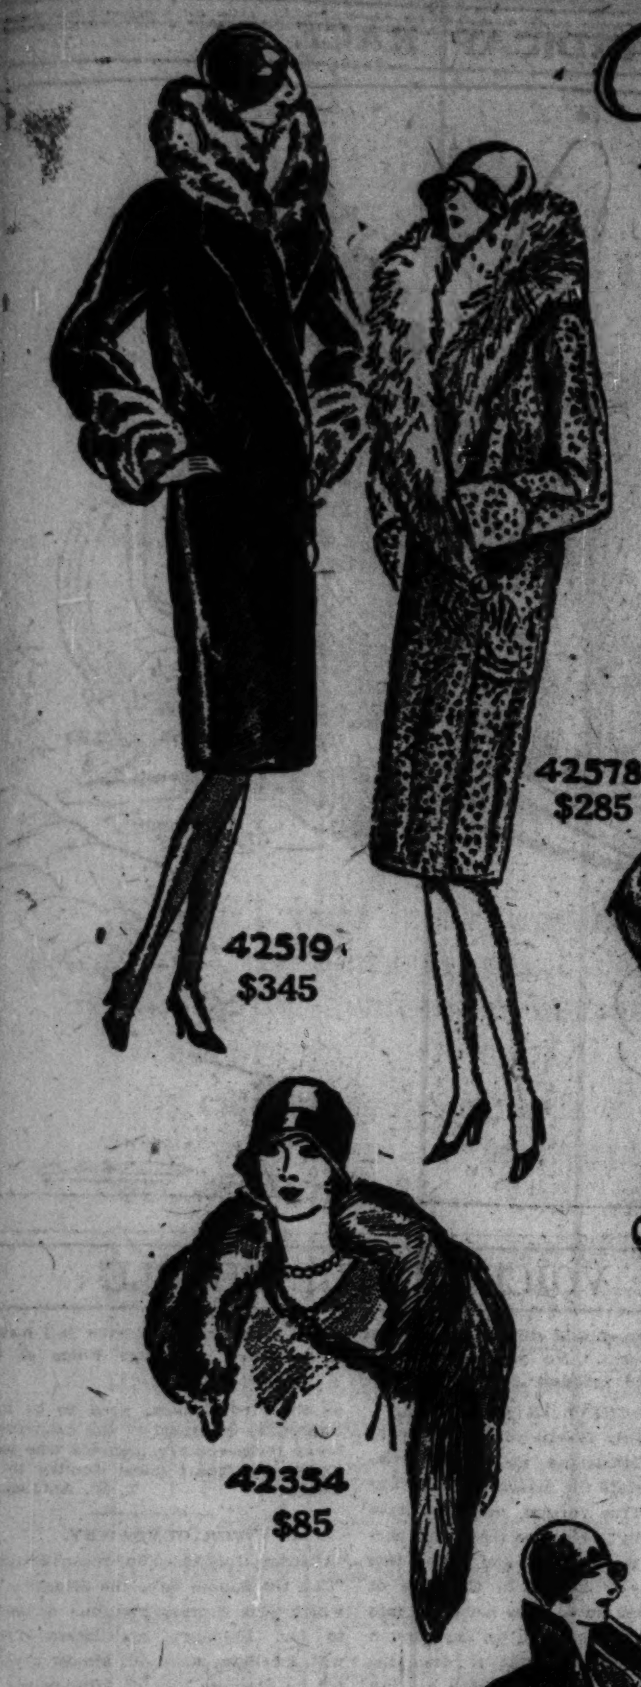
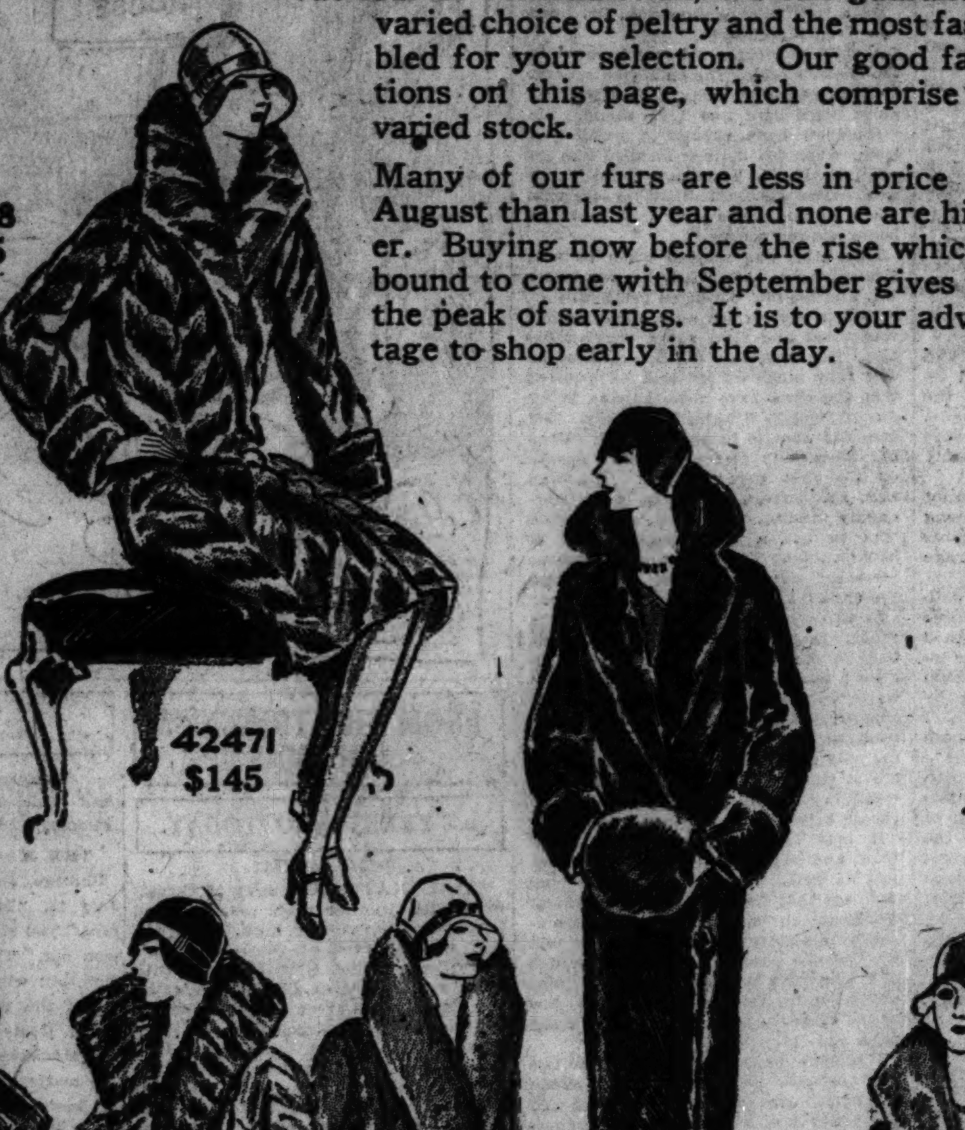
Bishop's August Fur Sale Now in Progress

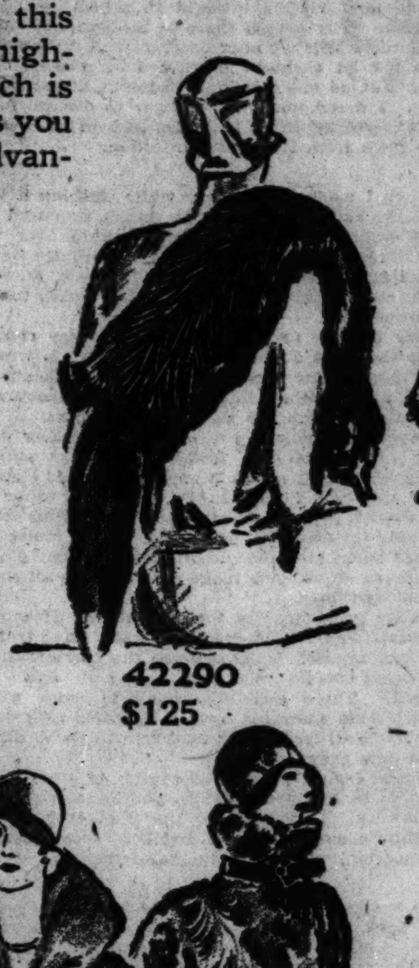
We had your fur needs in mind when early this year we began procuring peltry for our Fall and Winter stock of new fur coats.

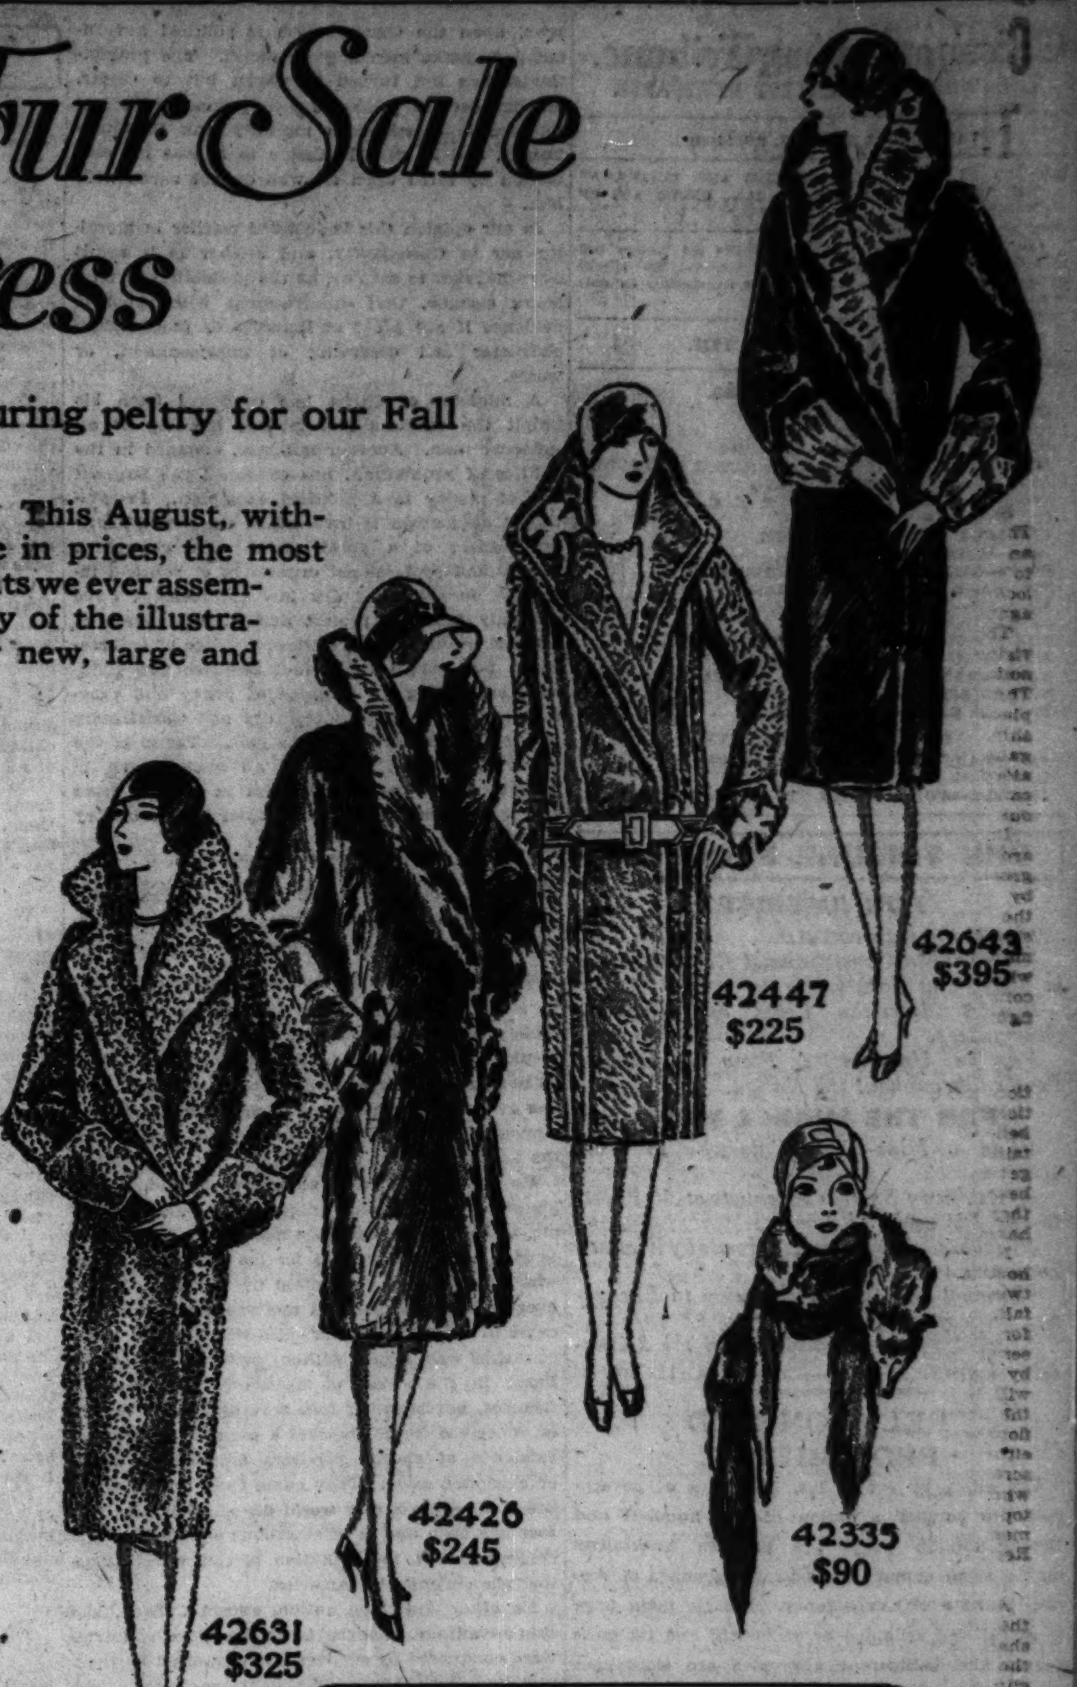
Since 1860 we have catered to Chicago's most critical fur buyers. This August, without fear of contradiction, we can guarantee you the widest range in prices, the most varied choice of peltry and the most fashionable styles in fur coats we ever assembled for your selection. Our good faith is evidenced by many of the illustrations on this page, which comprise but a small part of our new, large and varied stock.

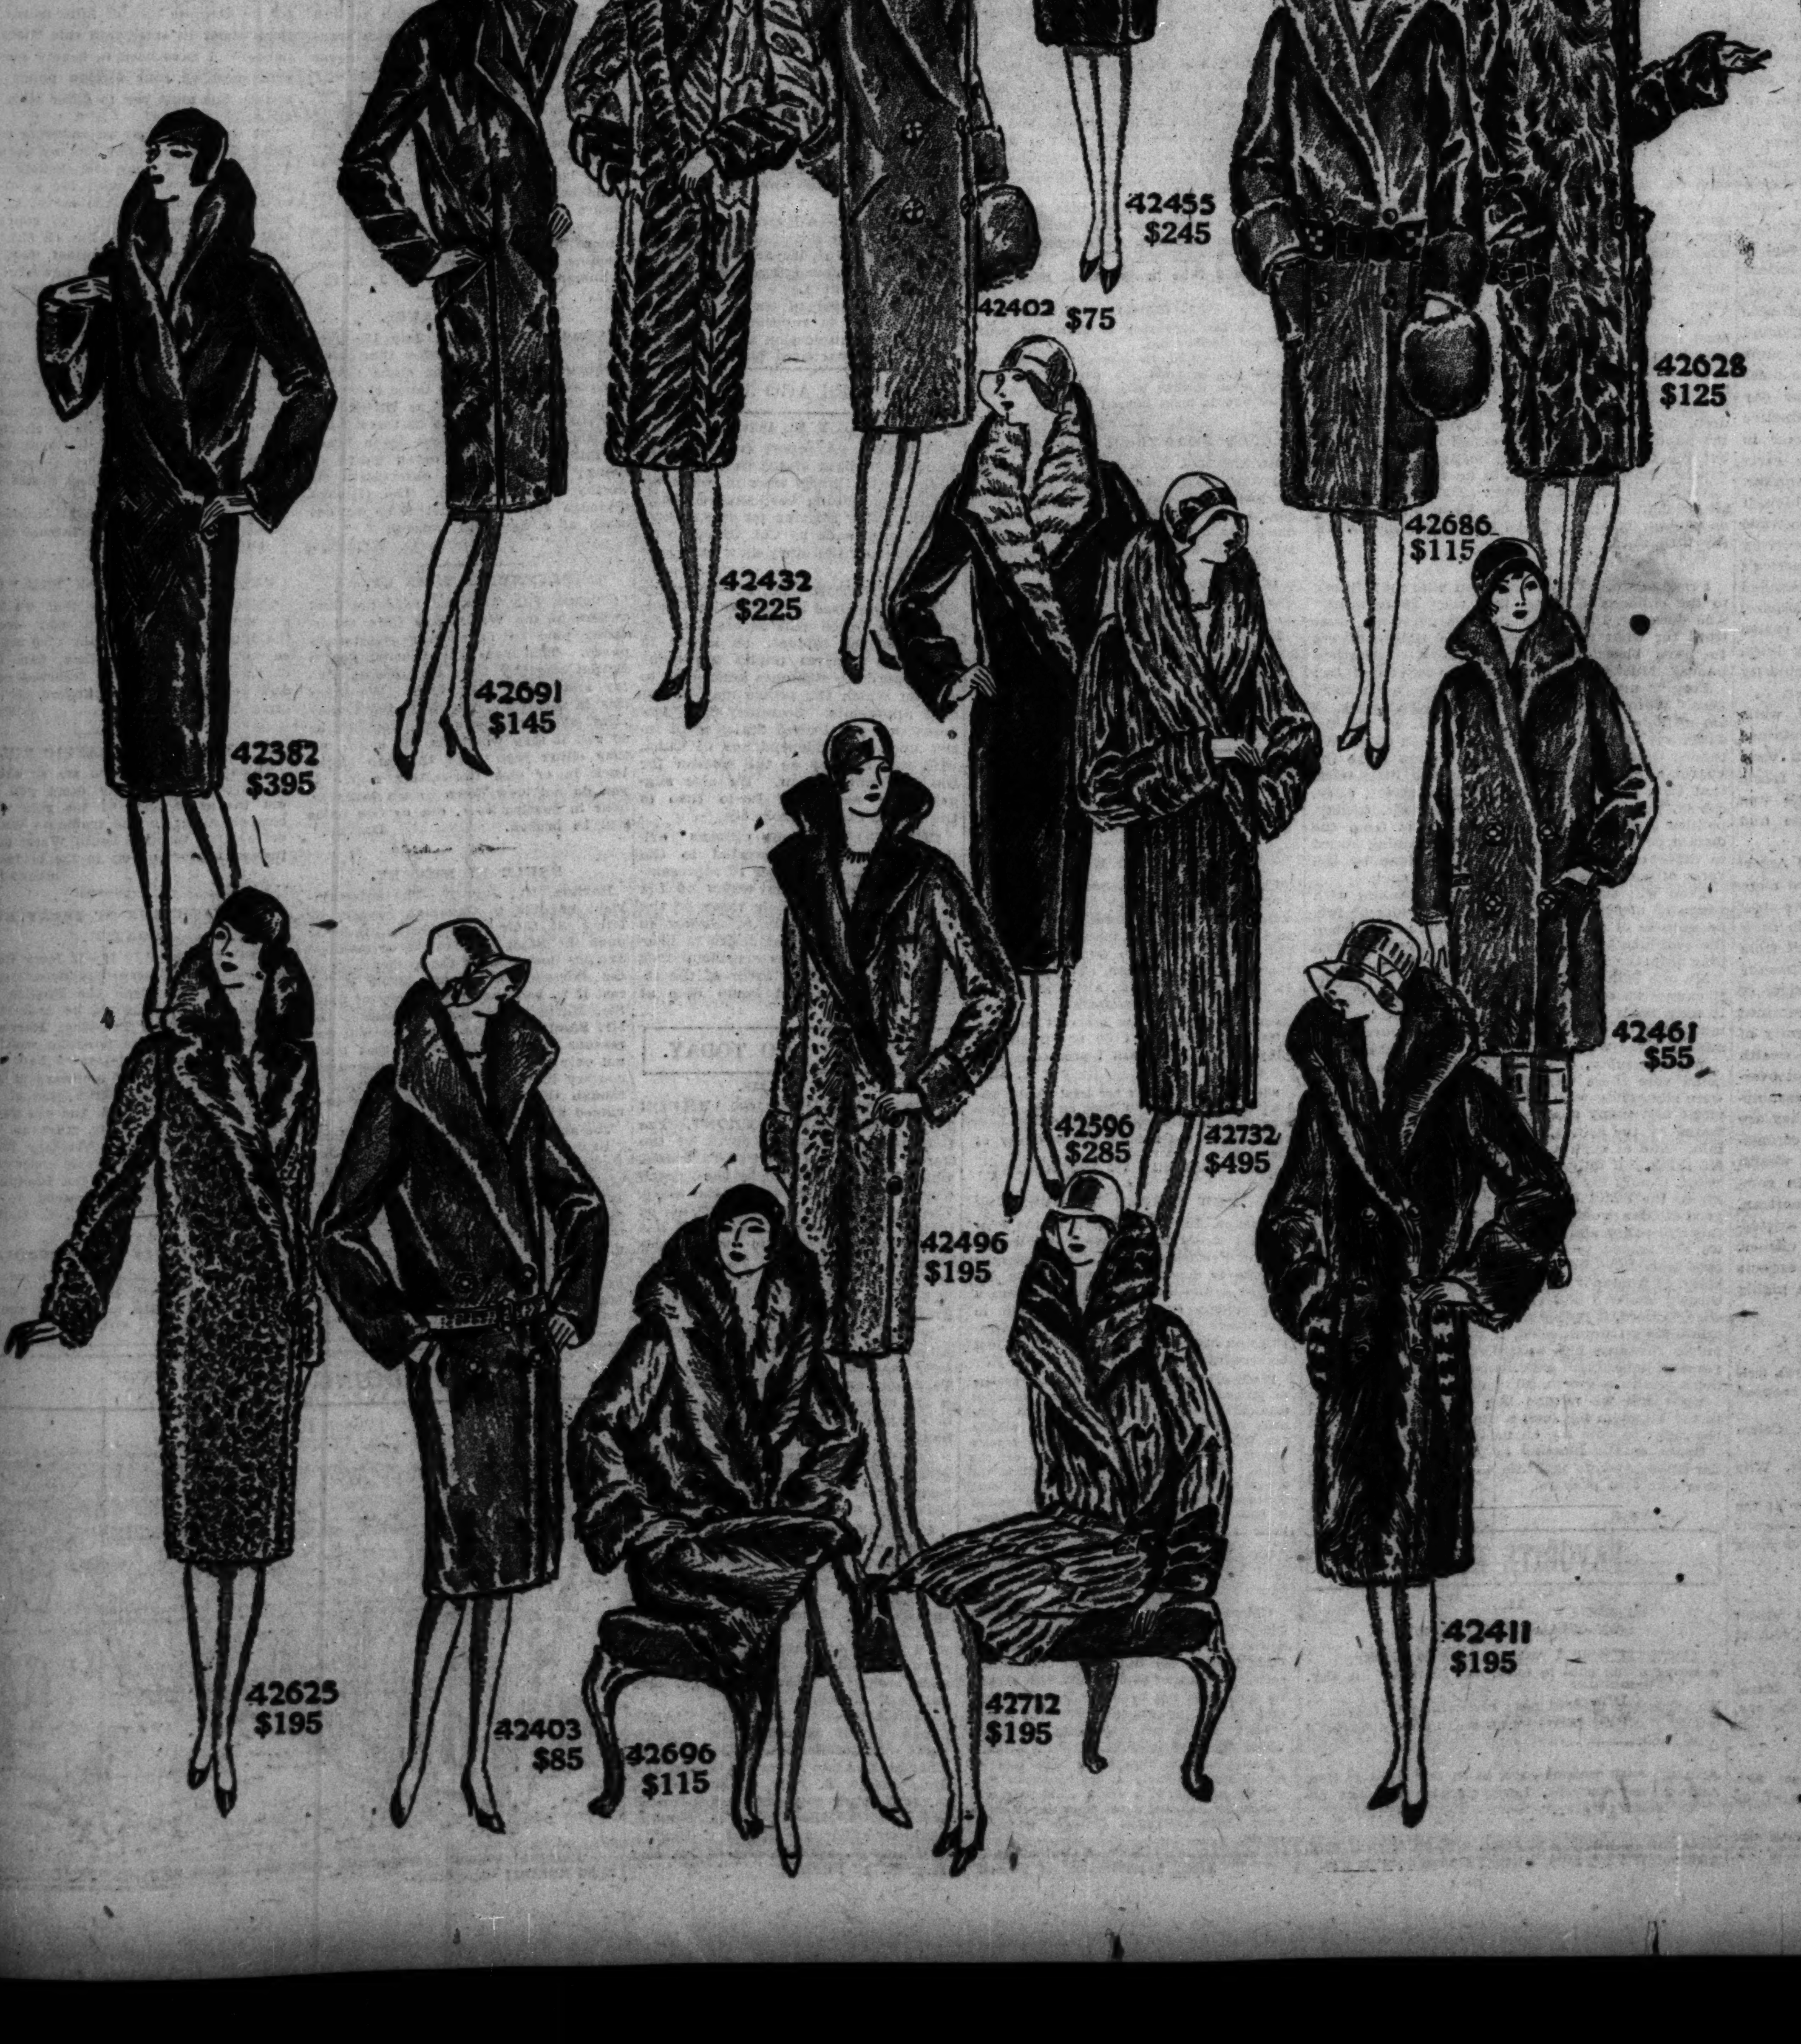
Many of our furs are less in price this August than last year and none are higher. Buying now before the rise which is bound to come with September gives you the peak of savings. It is to your advantage to shop early in the day.











Coats purchased on deposit or otherwise will be stored free for Fall delivery.

RELIGION AND PROHIBITION.

The effort by act of law and force of government to compel a nation of one hundred and twenty million people to practice teetotalism claims some support on arguable grounds of economic and social expediency. But its main urge is moral and religious or sectarian, and its most active and belligerent advocates are clergymen and organizations of clergymen or of church affiliation. The Anti-Saloon league is largely officered by ministers or ex-ministers. The Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals is headed by the Rev. Clarence True Wilson of that denomination and is supported formally as an agency of that church. In the platforms or statements of public policies put forth by Methodist, Baptist, and Congregational conventions, prohibition and Volsteadism have sweeping endorsement and many ministerial associations apparently make advocacy one of their chief concerns.

Other denominations and religious bodies are divided upon prohibition or opposed to it, but its religious or rather its denominational support is the chief element of its political strength and has had the effect of giving the issues involved a strong religious color. There is a very large number of citizens, we are confident, within the churches, even the militant prohibitionist churches, who are in effect bullied into silence and inaction by the assumption, openly and even violently advanced by clerical prohibitionists, that any failure to accept prohibition and its most drastic legal measures is religious heresy and a sign of moral delinquency. The odium theologicum is still effective with a large body of well meaning citizens who are not blind to the evil consequences of our experiment in law imposed teetotalism, but who fear to be thought irreligious or lacking in morality.

We think this situation is changing for the better and that the time is rapidly approaching when moderate men will no longer be frightened into tacit acquiescence in the policies of prohibitionist zealots. But that time should be hastened by more plain speaking. They believe and we believe not only that it is not essential in Christianity but that it is inconsistent with the character of Christianity and may be inimical to morality. St. Paul touched a profound moral truth and gave the essence of Christian ethical philosophy when he said: "If righteousness is by law, then Christ is dead in vain."

As for teetotalism, it was not only not deemed essential to religion and morality by Christ himself or by many if not most of the great leaders of Christian thought, but it was not even practiced by them. Among the most extreme prohibitionists are Methodist ministers, yet John Wesley held that abstinence from animal food and wine, from which he had tried abstaining for two years only, was not "required by Christianity," and he used wine thereafter until his death. He opposed the use of strong liquors, but advised "good small beer" and called wine "nature's noblest cordial." Rev. Thomas Coke, the first Methodist bishop, in his diary of 1793 expresses appreciation for the gift of a few bottles of "excellent old rum" for his sea voyage. Luther drank beer, and his wife brewed beer in their home. John Calvin received part payment of his salary in casks of wine, and he didn't pour it into the gutter.

As to the taking of beer, wine or rum there is rational difference of opinion from the viewpoint of individual habit, but when a Methodist or Presbyterian minister asserts or implies that teetotalism is essential to the religious or moral life he parts company with his own prophets.

But it would seem the miracle at Cana would make such a theory or even such an implication untenable by any Christian. The effort to show that Christ turned the water into unfermented grape juice rather than into veritable wine cannot deceive any one who is willing to think honestly on the subject. The word in the Bible, both in its Greek and its English form, does not mean unfermented grape juice, but wine. It cannot be found by any philologist or historian to mean anything but wine, the fermented juice of the grape, an intoxicating beverage.

There is a store of wisdom in the Bible on the subject of temperance: "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." But temperance is not teetotalism, and teetotalism is not temperance. As St. Paul's remark implies, Christ did not rely upon the laws, upon the Cæsar which is political government, to make men holy or moral. The prohibitionist has not turned to Christ but to Cæsar. He has decided upon his own grounds that teetotalism is essential to morality and to Christianity, and he calls in Cæsar to impose his conviction by force upon all who do not agree with him.

In our opinion this is justified neither in morality nor in Christianity, and neither is it moral nor Christian to assume, as the prohibitionist ministers assume, that disagreement with them is evidence if not proof of immoral or un-Christian character and deserving of imprisonment, or worse.

A minister of Christ has condoned from his pulpit the reckless and lawless blinding of an innocent man. Another minister, engaged in the politics of prohibition, has condoned the flagrant use of money in a political campaign. Prohibitionist clericalism is involved in the corrupt misgovernment of a great state. The clergymen zealots and professional organizers of political influence on behalf of dry law enforcement have not only failed to protest against the abuses of common right and the lawless violence of enforcement but have been in fact the strongest influence supporting its excesses of policy and practice. There is neither morality nor Christianity in the spirit shown by these men. Theirs is the spirit of tyranny which is an ancient evil in religion and which has written in human blood and misery many a tragic chapter in the history of religion.

A DEMOCRACY OF LABOR.

Clifford Raymond, writing in last Sunday's TRIBUNE on "the birth of a civilization," discussed the phenomenon known as the United States. He saw in it something novel in the human story, "a society of the average man successful in an economic state of the highest known development without a government of authority above him. He has evolved into this stage of self-dependence and responsibility, with profit to himself, against all the known rules of the game."

He has evolved, and, as we would add, it was his great good fortune, unique among modern people, to begin as an average man, meaning by that term a man who worked for his living. America was conquered and colonized by workers. Whatever religious or political motives moved him, he came in the main from a class which in the home countries was largely without privilege and ate its bread in the sweat of its brow. Shopkeepers, farmers, hardworking folk who had never known or conceived for themselves a state of leisure and existence of special privilege founded on social or economic caste. They came from an old world life of labor to a new world life of labor, and this fact has been and is of enormous significance and consequence in the evolution of this world amazing phenomenon of America.

No other American nation, except Canada, had this advantage. All the Latin American countries were conquered by soldiers and organized by them and by priests of an authoritarian church. The Spanish colonized for domination through a class and not for independent labor. The American people from the first has been a nation of producers, concerned not to escape labor but to achieve freedom to labor for themselves and not to create a foundation for the leisure of others.

The consequences of this fact in the formation of what is the American type of human being are obviously many, but we have in mind especially that of productive energy. It is perhaps the outstanding quality of the American, and it explains the American phenomenon in the aspect which most impresses the world at this time. Other nations are industrious, thrifty and able in practical affairs. But in none has individual energy and the gospel of work quite the same authority as they have with us. In all the older countries there are or have been till our day classes which were not justified by productive labor. There never has been such a class in America from the beginning. Even the early planter and colonist of the south was a worker, a manager of productive labor, sustaining himself by producing wealth. Modern Europe emerged out of feudalism with stratifications involving leisured or nonproductive classes. Even America's mother country, England, was socially classified and is today. England was conquered, like Mexico, by a military class which dominated the native masses and organized a state on military lines, created privilege for the governing alien minority and gave authority to the sword of the ruler.

The American left all that behind, and, while wealth and learning and even mere birth retained a certain distinction, it drew lines which were faint and fluctuating in the vast, strong fabric which the roaring loom of American life was weaving through generations of struggle and arduous achievement.

This is an underlying significance of the American phenomenon which, we think, deserves more consideration, especially in England. If we may venture to suggest it, the British people in their effort to compete in a world releasing itself from the bonds of class and the incubus of aristocracy are handicapped seriously. England, in spite of its progress in political democracy, has retained its social castes, its conception of the dignity of leisure, its theory that producing material wealth is a function of social inferiority. It is not overestimating the bearing of such ideas and assumptions upon the British effort to say that they are a serious restraint upon it. Peoples are competing more than ever upon the plane of wealth production, in science, in manufacture, in commerce. Other nations, not merely the American, are freeing themselves from the bonds of aristocracy and the burdens of nonproducing classes. England will have to do the same if she expects to retain her position and to progress in a highly competitive world of universal labor.

NOT HIS FAULT.

The car was crowded and the conductor was irritable. "Where's the fare for the boy?" he snapped as Mr. Cohen handed him 7 cents.

"De boy is only 6 years old," said Mr. Cohen placidly.

"Six years," sneered the conductor, "6 years. Why look at 'im. He's 10 years old if he's a day."

Mr. Cohen leaned over and gazed earnestly at the boy's countenance. Then he turned to the conductor. "Can I help it if he worries?" he asked.—True Story Magazine.

THE MOTHER'S PRAYER

BY CATHARINE WAUGH McCULLOCH.

[Lawyer, Member McCulloch & McCulloch; Member First Congregational Church, Evanston.]

Our Heavenly Father, I am a mother who earnestly tries to do her duty. While my children were in the safe shelter of my home, my heart was not burdened by the anxiety which now oppresses me.

But as they have grown in mind and body they are leaving this security for the dangers of the school out in the great world where I can no longer guard them. Who but thou canst protect them? Thou alone canst work the miracle which can save their souls and bodies.

Make the motormen on the swiftly moving cars be cautious when my little ones go by. Make the chauffeur, out on his joy ride, slacken up when my children cross the street. Dim the eyes of my little ones when they pass billboards covered with vulgar posters. Close their ears to blasphemy and indecency; make safe for them rotten sidewalks and sewage filled ditches, so that my darlings may pass along unharmed.

O, Father of all, follow my children into the ill lighted, poorly ventilated, overcrowded schoolroom; save their eyes from being injured as other children's are; direct some streams of fresh air to the needy lungs of my children. Keep their brains clear for study in the midst of others stupefied by lack of air. Save them from the contagious diseases and vermin brought to school by other children. Why cannot there be medical inspection of all those who sit near or play with my own?

Do not let them be corrupted by vicious children. Let no one distribute indecent literature to them. I dread, too, their danger to disease from foul expectorations in buildings and on sidewalks. Save them from tubercular infection.

When I made their dainty white clothing it was sanitary, but now they need things prepared by more skillful fingers. O Lord, watch over the sweatshops where my little ones' clothes are made. If underpaid, diseased workers sew there, miraculously sterilize every garment which comes to my little ones.

They are yet so young and weak, they cannot resist the child abductor, and my heart is wrung with anguish for fear that the mild punishments meted out to other child thieves may encourage one to steal mine. O keep these of mine.

I even fear now about their food. Other children eat adulterated food, poisonously colored candy, embalmed meats, ptomaine poisoned canned foods, and cold storage fowls; they drink water infected with typhoid germs; they breathe air from decaying garbage in alleys; they are stung by disease laden flies and mosquitoes, and they die. I ask divine alchemy to make safe to mine all these unhealthy things.

I have great anxiety for the future. How can my daughter be saved from the white slave traffic; how can my son be kept from the corruption of the drink traffic, the gambling hell, and the brothel? These evils are thick in some great cities. Send guardian angels by their side each hour, O Lord, for I, their mother, can do so little; I can only pray.

I dread for my son the corruption of some kinds of business life; the graft in politics and private immorality. I grieve over the possibility of my daughter's marriage to a drunken, cruel, stingy, domineering, wicked, or unchaste man.

No matter how old these children may grow, dear Lord, they will still be mine, and are they not thine, thine to be saved from all these imminent perils? Miraculous divine power alone can now help them, for I cannot do more. Surely I ask but little, only these to be cared for, no great number among the many.

Will not the prayer of this importunate mother bring miraculous help? Thou hast promised that when I ask I shall receive. Can I not find in thy holy word some assurance of help? "The voice of Rachel weeping for her children," and is it possible there are other mothers asking protection, each for her own? "No man liveth to himself," I read, and does it mean that all children have their fate bound up with mine? Are others as dear to thee? Thou wilt do no miracles for a few when human agencies can help the many?

How can I do this? All this means changing many laws and ordinances, and then enforcing them. But as to the matter of law, I am helpless.

What precious verse can guide me? Wilt thou send no flash of light to illumine my sorrowing perplexity? When Moses was distracted with doubt and modesty, God asked him, "What is that in thy hand?" Is there for me some weapon near at hand which I can seize to safeguard all children, my own included? Is there a weapon for the hand of every other troubled mother? What but the ballot can do these many things for all which I have prayed thee to do for mine?

Yes, Lord, I hear thy voice. Thou wouldst save all through us thy servants. Thou wouldst have us use our ballots to make safe conditions for all thy little ones.

I read again, "Why criest thou unto me? Speak to the children of Israel that they go forward." And does not that mean that we ourselves must work for what we need instead of lazily praying to have blessings dropped into our effortless hands? Must not we work out our own salvation?

Forgive my laziness, my ignorance, my selfishness. We mothers must work as well as pray. I am no longer hopeless. Now, indeed, we are the daughters of God, if we may work with thee. We rejoice that thou wilt make us women to be the guardian angels by the sides of our little ones; that thou dost call us to safeguard street, alley, school, public buildings, food, water, air, society, politics and business. Thou wilt send from the distant courts above no angel with flaming sword to drive out evil when it can be done by the votes of women who are right on the spot.

Thou wilt send no cherubim or seraphim with wings of mercy and healing, no chariots of fire, no miracle of fire, lightning or earthquake, when the still small voice of the mothers' ballots dropping into the ballot box can do thy work.

My one ballot is not almighty, but it is mighty. It cannot do everything, but it can do something. It may seem as small as a tiny snowflake, but multiplied by millions it may be the source of a mighty river which will make fruitful the earth.

We remember, O Lord, that before we women could vote there were brave, unselfish men who were struggling with the beasts of vice, graft, and crime and many a time they were crushingly defeated by the selfish, aggressive forces of corruption. And at such a time we remember that men did think, "if only my sainted mother could have voted, if only my noble wife could have gone with me to the ballot box, their votes and those of all good women would have helped us men overcome this evil policy and this unworthy candidate." And we are pained to remember that many of those good men have been sorely disappointed that the ballot in woman's hands has not immediately overthrown the evil and enthroned the good. We realize, O Lord, if judges are timid and obsequious, if criminals go unpunished, if officers take graft, if public revenues are wasted, if laws passed after years of debate and experience are flouted, if a nation's wealth is stolen, all of us must suffer.

Have not we women like Queen Esther come to the kingdom for such a time as this? Does not the right to vote lay on us the duty to do so?

Grant us thy blessing as we women rise from our knees and go into the world to help thee answer our own prayers.

FAVORITE HYMNS

BY CHARLES WESLEY.

A charge to keep I have, a God to glorify,
A never dying soul to save, and fit it for the sky.

To serve the present age, my calling to fulfill;
O may it all my powers engage, to do my master's will.

Arm me with jealous care, as in thy sight to live,
And O, thy servant, Lord, prepare a strict account to give.

Help me to watch and pray, and on thyself rely,
Assured, if I my trust betray, I shall forever die.

BANANAS TO CURE BABY OF SCURVY.

THE following is an experience which was under the observation of a New Orleans physician, Dr. Ludo von Mysenberg.

A child 19 months old was brought to the doctor's office. The child had scurvy. He was pale and pasty generally. His gums were sore and bled easily. He seemed to have rheumatic pains. At least, when his mother handled him he cried as if his bones and joints were sore. The doctor had X-ray pictures made of his arms and legs and the bones showed scurvy.

This baby was weaned when he was 4 months old. After that he was bottle fed, and his diet consisted principally of boiled or pasteurized milk. The mother was timid and slow about varying his diet. The physician did not change the diet very much except that he directed that the child have some banana every day so long as it agreed with him. The bananas were to be well ripened. None but those with plenty of brown specks on the peel were allowed. The well ripe, soft banana pulp was to be thoroughly mashed. The first day the child was to get a level tablespoonful of banana pulp. This allowance was to be increased one teaspoonful a day until the child was getting a banana a day.

In two weeks the mother returned to report that the child was eating its banana eagerly, that it was being digested, and that the symptoms of scurvy were disappearing. A little later these symptoms had wholly disappeared. No medicine was given. The banana was the only cure used in this case of scurvy and it worked. I imagine most children would cry for the banana if called on to choose between it and spoon medicine.

It may have been that other fresh fruit and vegetables would have done just as well. Sailors discovered a long time ago that fresh fruit and fresh meat would quickly cure scurvy. Count Luckner, in his story of the Seeadler as told by Thomas, describes several outbreaks of scurvy and beriberi among his crew, which outbreaks faded within a few weeks after the sailors got hold of fresh food.

I suppose banana was chosen in this case because it is eaten raw. When thoroughly ripe it is easily digested and the heavy peel keeps the inside reasonably free from dangerous germs.

WHAT T-B VICTIMS MAY DO.

Mrs. E. De B. writes: For the last seven months my husband, who is 26 years old, has had tuberculosis, and he has been in a sanitarium all this time. Now he wants me to go to a small lake in Michigan with him next month. Although his disease is active and he coughs a great deal, he does not spit up foreign matter as many patients do.

1. Would this trip be dangerous for him?

2. Would I be in danger of becoming infected?

REPLY.

1. Let the physicians in charge of your husband decide that.

2. There would be some danger but it would not be great. A patient who has lived seven months in a sanitarium should know how to make himself safe.

COLD SHOWERS FOR CHILD.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. F. write: We are a young married couple and have a little girl two years old. Do you think she is old enough to start having a daily cold shower? Of course, we would start with warm water and gradually let it get colder and colder. We both take a daily cold shower and we would like to start giving it to our little girl as soon as possible.

Do you think she is old enough to start dancing lessons, or would it be better to wait?

REPLY.

It is all right to start the showers but wait a little with the dancing lessons.

NO CHANCE TO BE CATTY.

Chicago, July 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I never knew until after my wife and I had a divorce that she was in love with another man. But within two weeks after the divorce she had married this other man. This happened in the state of Illinois, and I am told I could make it uncomfortable for her inasmuch as she has married so soon after the divorce. I do not think she played fair. How can I prosecute her? C. M.

She has acted within her legal rights. The laws now in effect in Illinois do not require a year's wait as previously, but the divorced persons may marry again the same day of the divorce if they wish.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NEW STREET NEEDED.

Chicago, July 20.—[Friend of the People.]—I would like to report the condition of Ferdinand street, from Lavergne avenue to Laramie avenue. Ruts are almost a foot deep. Can we not have a few cinders or at least ashes put in the holes? I have had $50 worth of repairs on my car in six months' time just because of these awful holes. M. H.

Ferdinand street from Lavergne avenue to Laramie avenue is an old and worn-out macadam paved street, beyond repair. Repairs to pavements charged to the vehicle tax fund exclude pavements where repairs exceed 15 per cent of the area of the block. Property owners should petition the alderman of the ward or the board of local improvements to have an ordinance passed to have the street repaved by special assessment at the earliest possible date.

P. J. DONOVAN,
Acting Superintendent of Streets.

TALL WEEDS.

Chicago, July 20.—[Friend of the People.]—The writer has suffered from hay fever for ten years and would appreciate having the tall weeds cut on the corner of Paxton avenue and 67th street, as they have not been cut for two years and as his apartment overlooks these weeds. There are also many such lots along East 67th street. F. A. R.

Report is made that weeds have been removed from parkway at the corner of Paxton avenue and 67th street. The city does not cut or remove weeds from vacant property. This obligation devolves upon the owner.

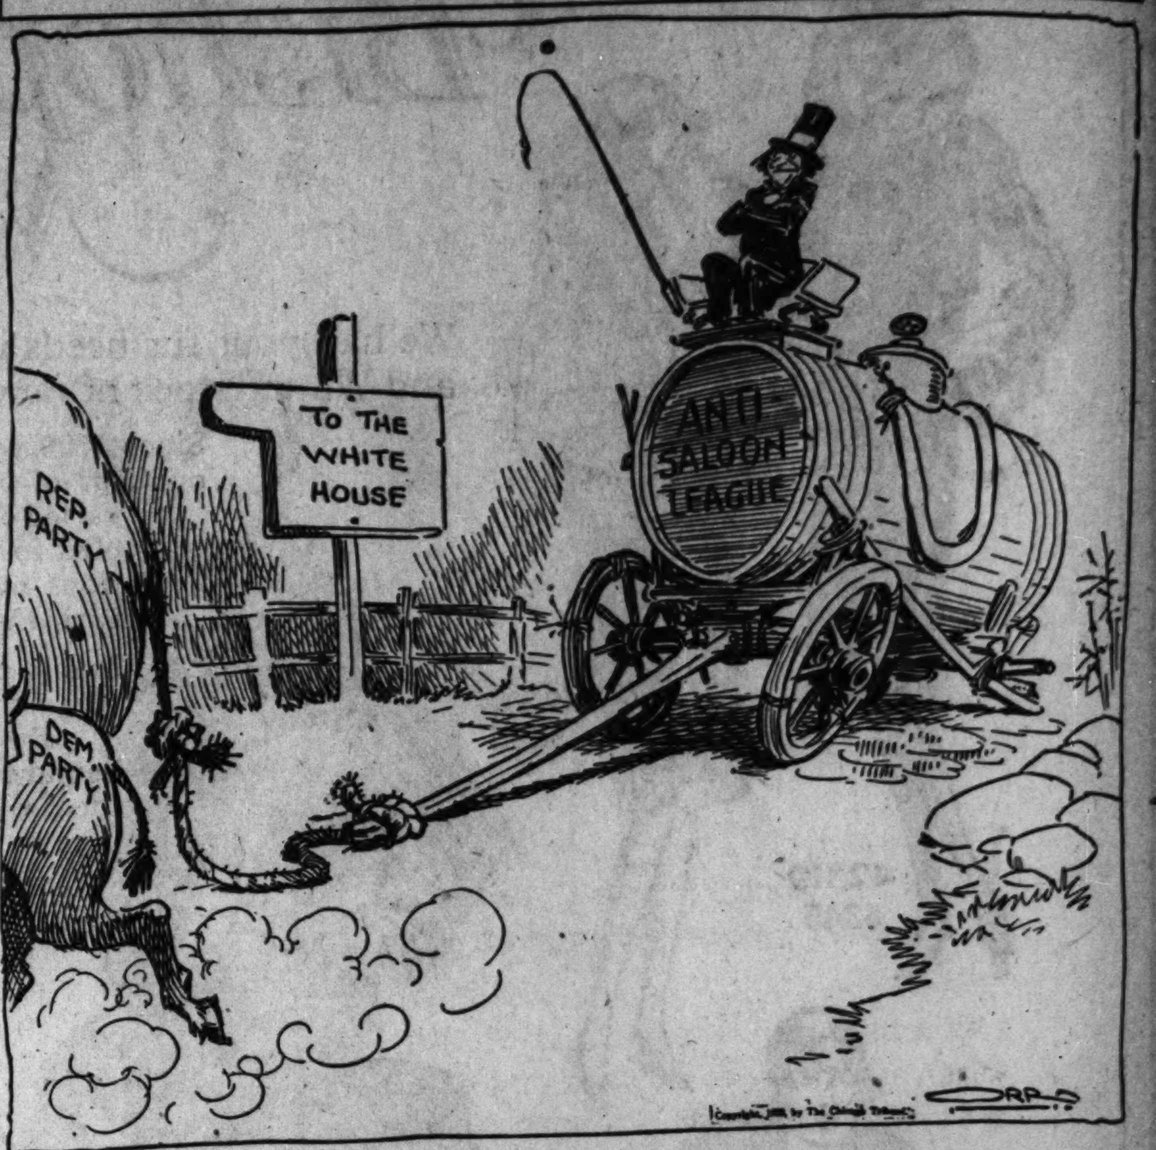
THE HANDICAP RACE



FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY.

JULY 29, 1863.

CINCINNATI.—Kentucky is threatened with another rebel invasion and excitement is running high. Information was received at Gen. Burnside's headquarters that Gen. Pegram, with a force estimated at 2,500, had crossed the Cumberland river and was marching north in the direction of Richmond, about fifteen miles from Lexington. A dispatch from Lexington says the rebels attacked our forces at Richmond, consisting of a small detachment under Col. Saunders. After an hour's severe fighting our troops were compelled to fall back to the Kentucky river, badly cut up.

ST. LOUIS.—The steamer Imperial, the first boat from New Orleans since federal victories reopened navigation on the Mississippi, arrived this morning. Large crowds of merchants and other citizens greeted the vessel and a national salute was fired in its honor.

NEW YORK.—A Harper's Ferry dispatch says that the results of the engagement on July 22 at Front Royal are highly encouraging. The intention was to cut Lee's army in two, and it succeeded to the extent that Ewell's corps is reported to be cut off from communication with Lee. The rebels have evacuated Martinsburg.

JULY 29, 1898.

CHICAGO.—A report from Chickamauga last night stated that the men of the Fifth Illinois were in revolt on account of having been ordered back to camp after starting for Porto Rico. Denial was made by Col. Culver, who characterized the story as a malicious falsehood.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Secretary Day has prepared an answer to Spain, which he hopes will secure the approval of the cabinet. It is not in line with general public sentiment and apparently stretches generosity to a point which the people may not at once appreciate. Secretary Day proposes that the United States shall insist upon the independence of Cuba, with this country as the sponsor for the new government. He also suggests the cession of Porto Rico to the United States absolutely.

CHICAGO.—Chicago citizens evidently are being converted to the colonial idea. A number of representative men in various walks of life were asked to give their views on the settlement of the war in answer to the President's evident desire to hear from the people. The sentiment was nearly unanimous in favor of the retention of Cuba and Porto Rico at least.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY.

JULY 29, 1918.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE AISNE-MARNE FRONT.—The German line is again north of the Ourcq river, and Fere-en-Tardenois, which has been entered by the French troops, is at the mercy of the allies. The line along the greater part of the bottom of Soissons-Reims salient has been pushed forward in some places as much as five miles. The Germans are bringing into play their artillery in force to check the plunges of the Franco-American troops.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES.—Allied patrols, making their way carefully ahead, reached both Ville-en-Tardenois and Fere-en-Tardenois, and it can be only a question of hours for both towns to be completely in their hands.

LONDON. — News received here gives the impression that the German retreat will be on a larger scale than first anticipated.

CHICAGO.—Confessions of jury fixing in the trial of Francis A. Becker, former Thompson leader in the Twenty-first ward, have been obtained by State's Attorney Hoyne following the arrest of three men. Becker was acquitted last May when he was tried on a charge of accepting bribes. The men arrested are Frederick T. Burgess, John G. [Doc] Message, and James Dempsey.

CHICAGO.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chapin Adsit announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth, to Charles McAlpin Pyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Pyle of Morristown, N. J. Another engagement announced was that of Miss Louise M. Buddig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Buddig, to Harry A. Fischer, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Fischer.

THE MACHINE IN THE ARTS.

Chicago, July 19.—In your editorial of July 18, "Musicians and the Movietone," you state the machine has always won out. True enough, machines have won, but why? Because they have produced the work better and with more speed than by hand. In the case of the Movietone speed does not enter into the matter, but can you by any stretch of imagination say that it does the work better, or even one-tenth as well as by human hands? Mechanical contrivances producing music can never take the place of musicians, else why would they not use phonographs in our hotels, restaurants, and dance halls to replace the orchestras? Phonographs and radios are all right in the home because we cannot bring the orchestras there, but where is the person who would rather listen to a symphony orchestra over the radio, than in person? Did you ever see a picture made by a camera hung in an art gallery? The machine cannot always take the place of humans. J. E. B.

UP GO THE LAKES.

Palisades Park, Mich., July 16.—Over here it is quite noticeable that Lake Michigan is higher. The shore line is much narrower. Inland lakes show the same effects. A resident at White Fish Bay, Lake Superior, told us three years ago that there was about seven years of falling level, and seven years of rising; evidently his observation is worthy of some credit. The Chicago drainage canal does not seem to cut much of a figure at present.

G. G. WILSON.

PAVEMENTS TORN UP.

Chicago, July 18.—Last year the land owners of the Washington park subdivision paid to have their streets repaved. This year the Commonwealth Edison company tears up huge gaps to lay and repair their lines. We know this is necessary, but why didn't they think of it last year? It wouldn't be so bad if they would fix the holes, but they either just throw the torn blocks back in or else tire-cutting rock. If you do not slow down to ten miles an hour in passing over, one or two axles will be broken. DRIVER.

BRULE IN HISTORY.

Ravinia, Ill., July 20.—The entertainment imputed to Canadian readers by Mr. J. St. Clair McQuilkin in his letter upon the Brule river might be modified and his doubt upon the authenticity of the existence of Etienne Brule set at rest if he had read the "Story of Sault Ste. Marie and Chippewa County," by Mr. Stanley Newton. In it he will find reasons advanced indicating that Brule not only lived but actually explored the country in which the Brule flows, even though the river may not have been named after him.

The authorities quoted are Butterfield's "Brule's Discoveries and Explorations," Benjamin Sulte's address before the Royal society in 1907, James Curran's articles in the Sault Ste. Marie Daily Star, and the recognition accorded in the "Dominion of Canada's Year Book" of Brule as the first white discoverer of Lake Superior and of the Bowating or Asticox rapids, or the Sault Ste. Marie, as we know them.

Citizens of the United States, as well as those of Canada, need to be more thoroughly informed of the existence of many more obscure pioneers who made known our great lakes country to the world. T. W. ALLINSON.

FOR OUTLAWRY.

Chicago, July 19.—Your recent editorial, "Can the Senate Save the Situation," in which you express vigorous opposition to Mr. Kellogg's multilateral treaty will, I believe, stand out almost uniquely for its absolute lack of faith in the nations about to enter into this "holy alliance." I have been in hearty accord with most of your foreign policy editorials, but must beg to differ with this one.

The world is nearer an enduring peace today than ever before, in my opinion. The names of Kellogg and Coolidge will go down in history with the gratitude of all the peoples of the earth, if this treaty becomes a reality. Of course it will not be a panacea for all ills, nor a positive guarantee against war, but it will undoubtedly be a powerful deterrent. It is the most practical step toward international peace that has yet been offered, and is certainly worth a tryout.

You say you hope the senate will be able to stop it. Heaven forbid that the old irreconcilables in congress, who have never awakened to the fact that modern science and invention have shortened the distances between national boundaries, may be able to "save the situation"! For once the United States does not want to be saved!

RESERVED SEATS ON THE "L."

Chicago, July 19.—Now that we have an increased "L" fare, why doesn't the Rapid Transit company also sell reserved seats? Maybe they can even charge an extra 1c for reserved seats, and rebate the straphangers 1c for strap hanging. FAY.

A MYSTERIOUS TRAFFIC RULE.

Chicago, July 20.—You are so skillful at investigations, why don't you find out [illegible] the rule which compels all eastbound traffic on Wacker drive to go through South Water street instead of turning up to the bridge? MOTORIST.

THE WITTICISMS OF JERRY RUSK (CONT'D).

Stanley, Wis., July 19.—If Jerry Rusk's grammar was somewhat defective, he could at least speak the English language so that he could be understood. As a member of President Harrison's cabinet he held the portfolio which at the time was the latest to have been created—viz.: that of secretary of agriculture. James G. Blaine was at that time secretary of state, and one day he jokingly referred to Mr. Rusk as "the tail of the cabinet." Secretary Rusk's quick retort that he "would endeavor to keep the flies off from the distinguished head" was equally appreciated by the "Plumed Knight." L. E. SCOTT.

THE NATIVES SAY "BROOL."

Chicago, July 20.—As one whose parental home is in the vicinity of the Brule river I wish to say that the natives pronounce it "Brool." G. I. B.

MUSSOLINI IS 45 TODAY; LAYS OFF TO SEE FAMILY

Spends Anniversary on Farm of Boyhood.

ROME, July 28.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini is 45 years old tomorrow. With typical thoroughness he threw off the heavy burden of official duties and sought the seclusion of the farm near Predappio, where he was born. Yesterday he was Italy's dictator but today he is Farmer Mussolini, inspecting his live stock and supervising agricutural work.

In scenes where he can recall his youth, the premier is giving the entire day to his wife, children, and near relatives, the only echo of official life to reach remote "Carpena," as his farm is called, consists of messages by the hundreds congratulating him.

One communication was signed "Your most affectionate cousin, Victor," being from King Victor Emmanuel. The premier is one of the wearers of the collar of Annunziata, the highest Italian decoration, ranking him as a cousin of the sovereign.

Churchmen Send Messages.

Most significent among all this flood of messages are those signed by priests and cardinals. Despite recent restrictions placed by Cardinal Gasparri on relations between the church and the Fascist government many high ranking persons in the Italian church sent messages.

At 45 the premier appears in perfect physical health. His regular habit is to rise at 7 o'clock in the morning and take a glass of milk for breakfast. He allows nothing to interfere with his morning exercises which vary according to weather and his personal whims. He is a guest this summer of Prince Torlonia in a sumptuous villa. In winter he choses to live in a small apartment near the center of the city where he requires only one servant.

After exercise, he usually goes directly to the Viminal palace, the home ministry, and works until one o'clock. He gives very little time to lunch and his principal dish is spaghetti. Before his serious illness three years ago he had a huge appetite but he eats sparingly today on the doctor's strict orders.

Works Until Late at Night.

In the afternoon he goes to the senate or chamber when they are in session. Otherwise he spends the rest of the day in his office at Palazzo Chigi, the ministry of foreign affairs, often working steadily until late at night.

From 5 to 7 in the evening he grants audiences to Italians and foreigners. Americans still predominate in numbers among visitors admitted to his office. Often on these occasions he is still dressed in riding breeches, not having had time during the day to change.

After 15 hours of exhausting labor he usually requires solitude or quiet conversation on some subject other than politics. His violin and his boyhood farm still furnish the most important part of his diversion.

HENRY J. BURT, ENGINEER, DIES SUDDENLY AT 55

Henry Jackson Burt, structural engineer, died suddenly of heart disease yesterday at his home, 416 Ellis avenue, Wheaton. Though he had been in failing health for some time, Mr. Burt had continued with his work as head of the structural department of Holabird & Root, architects. He was 55 years old.

Mr. Burt was past president of the Western Society of Engineers, a member of the American Society of Engineers, the Chicago Engineers' club, the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, and the American Society for Testing Materials. He served during the world war as a major in the construction division of the army.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Edith Burt, and five children, Henry Jackson Jr., Jesse, Morris, Luella, and Helen. Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. in the home. Burial will be in Wheaton cemetery.

Funeral Rites Tomorrow for Thomas J. Bolger

Thomas J. Bolger, Chicago broker and one of the founders of Mosser, Williaman & Co., will be buried tomorrow in Rosehill cemetery. Funeral services will be held in the residence, 824 Ingleside place, Evanston, at 2 p. m. Mr. Bolger died on Thursday. He was a leader in Baptist church activities in Chicago. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Florence Elworth and Mrs. Mary B. Mills, and four grandchildren.

Bulgar Aid Committee Asks Help for Suffering

An appeal for money, food, clothing and other necessities needed by the earthquake sufferers of Bulgaria was issued yesterday by the Chicago committee acting in the interest of 350,000 persons left destitute by the upheaval. Varna, the chief seaport of Bulgaria, and several other cities have been demolished, leaving the residents homeless and without sustenance the appeal states. Checks should be sent to Fred R. Rowson, treasurer, of the Union Trust company, 7 South Dearborn street.

E. B. Hatch, 63, Insurance Company Secretary, Dies

Edward B. Hatch, secretary of the Western Insurance union, died yesterday at his home, 433 Briar place, of heart disease. Mr. Hatch, who was 63 years old, had been engaged in the fire insurance business in Chicago since 1896. He had been ill for about two months. A widow, son, and daughter survive. Funeral services are to be held Tuesday afternoon at the Rosehill cemetery chapel.

Inquest Holds Physician Following Death of Girl

A coroner's jury yesterday recommended that Dr. Lester I. Ofner, 1608 West Madison street, be held to the grand jury on a charge of murder by abortion. Evidence at the inquest tended to show that Dr. Ofner performed an illegal operation on June 11 for Mrs. Rose Hanover, 31, of 2933 West Washington boulevard, who died at the University hospital.

PRESS OF ROME CALLS KELLOGG PACT HUMBUG

Italians Say Anti-War Treaty Is Toothless.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, July 28.—The Kellogg anti-war pact was lambasted again today by the Rome press. While Premier Benito Mussolini accepted the American proposal with alacrity, Italian opinion, so far as the press is an index, all along has spoken of it with irony.

Today the pact is called "a colossal humbug, which has no analogy outside the Wilsonian humbug," Italian papers say. Although drafted in language of impressive nebulousness, the pact is denuded of every precise stipulation, and therefore is useless.

The newspaper Lavora d'Italia, discussing the pact under the heading, "American Mentality," declares the only thing definite about the Kellogg proposals is the right of the United States to maintain the Monroe doctrine intact, and the right of Great Britain to maintain its imperialism intact.

"Deprived of Positive Value."

This paper thus defines the proposals:

"The Kellogg pact as an international document is deprived of every positive value. But, like all useless things, it is not cumbersome, and therefore may be better than if it did not exist."

The paper adds that, as in the case of the peace treaty, the United States senate may block the ratification of the pact. It recalls that some American objections were made to the pact, which might, for instance, compel the United States to give moral support on one side or the other on European questions, such as the Upper Adige (Tyrol) minorities.

"The characteristic of the American mentality is oddity, but oddity must not end in becoming impudence," concludes Lavora.

Kellogg Will Not Talk Debts.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 28.—The French ambassador to Washington, M. Paul Claudel, arrived in Paris today and immediately conferred with Foreign Minister Aristide Briand.

The ambassador, it is stated, told the foreign minister that Secretary of State Kellogg insists the question of war debts and other extraneous problems must be left unmentioned when he comes to sign the multilateral treaty outlawing war.

Secretary Kellogg, it is reported, informed M. Claudel that he is merely coming to sign the pact and will refuse to participate in any conversations on matters in his hands or in congress, or other international or political affairs, owing to the coming elections and because he intends to resign as secretary of state regardless of administration changes.

Mrs. Fannie Siegan, 102, Dies at Daughter's Home

Mrs. Fannie Siegan, 102 years old, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Rose Davis, 735 Independence boulevard. Mrs. Siegan was born in Russia. She had lived in Chicago for fifty years. She is survived by five sons, two daughters, thirty-two grandchildren, thirty-seven great grandchildren, and one great great grandchild. Funeral services will be held tomorrow at the Davis residence.

DENY U. S. ACTED TO CURB LIBERIA RUBBER TRADE

Officials Ridicule Report of League.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 28.—[Special.]—State department officials today ridiculed the charges, filed with the mandates commission of the league of nations, that the United States has forced on Liberia restrictive commercial concessions and has allowed Americans to exploit Liberian labor.

These officials were inclined to consider the report, which was filed by Henry A. Junod, president of the International Society for the Protection of Natives, as a part of the propaganda which has been circulated in an effort to handicap the efforts of Americans to develop an independent rubber supply.

Charge Coercion by Loan.

The charges are made in connection with the activities of the Firestone Rubber company, which has large rubber holdings in Liberia. It was asserted that the Negro republic, in order to obtain a $5,000,000 loan from the United States, has been compelled to grant concessions which establish a commercially closed door.

The state department not only denies the charges, but questions the authority of the league of nations to intervene in this case. It was pointed out that Liberia is a sovereign nation and therefore the mandates commission is powerless to act. Denial also was made that Herbert Hoover, the Republican presidential nominee, had anything to do with the obtaining of a Liberia concession by the Firestone company.

Wages Are Increased.

According to department officials, Firestone went to Liberia in an effort to break the Stevenson British rubber combine and to develop an independent rubber supply. He has paid Liberian labor slightly more than the standard wage, it was said today.

Before Mr. Firestone made the final arrangements for the concession, the Liberian government borrowed $5,000,000 from the National City bank of New York. The state department recommends an American financial advisor who is appointed by Liberia.

H. J. Walker, Manager of New York Theater, Is Dead

New York, July 28.—(AP)—Harry J. Walker, manager of the Belasco theater for the last 18 years, died at his home today. Hursen Is in Your Neighborhood

Draw a circle around Chicago for a distance of 15 miles from the loop. This is a tremendous territory. It takes in all of Chicago and many of its suburbs. In almost every neighborhood in this vast area you see funerals conducted by Hursen.

This means that Hursen belongs not merely to one neighborhood, but to every neighborhood. "Hursen's" is an all-Chicago institution. It has been so for years. There is no other institution of its kind that does so serve every part of Chicago and its suburbs. It stands alone!

Hursen's funeral automobiles, the finest in America—have eliminated the question of distance. Chicago has shown that it prefers the finer things at funerals. It prefers the Hursen cars, the Hursen elegance, the Hursen service, the Hursen chapels, and

Besides, Chicago knows that the charges for Hursen funerals are but a fraction of the charges made elsewhere. This is why Chicago brings Hursen into every neighborhood—into your neighborhood. This is why "Hursen's" is the greatest funeral establishment in America today. This is why Chicago always prefers to call Hursen, of course!

NORTH SHORE BEACH

The New $3,000,000 Development on Lake Michigan

LESS THAN ONE HOUR FROM THE LOOP~

A place for pleasure . . . a broad, smooth, clean-sanded beach that is not closed to Chicagoans by discriminatory ruling . . . a large pleasure pergola offers cool shade at the water's edge . . . a vast, paved parking plaza adjacent to the beach accommodates hundreds of cars.

A place to live . . . on the beautiful North Shore . . . handy to the Loop by fast trains from two stations at the property . . . homes of distinction typical of the best North Shore communities are now building.

A place to profit . . . vast improvement program includes miles of paved streets and sidewalks . . . lake shore location is the same type that made millions for many in the Clarendon, Wilson, Edgewater and Rogers Park beach districts . . . records prove Chicago's water front and the adjoining three or four blocks to be her most valuable property.

Knowing how little of Lake Michigan frontage remains available in the metropolitan district of Chicago, you surely must realize this opportunity merits your immediate investigation.

Special

LOW PRE-OPENING PRICES

Property of this character, in our opinion, cannot be had anywhere else in Metropolitan Chicago for so little money as will secure a holding at our special low price to first buyers.

LOWMAN STILL TRYING TO DAM UP CANADIAN RUM

Draws Stricter Rules on International Freight.

Washington, D. C., July 28.—[Special.]—Stringent regulations designed to reduce the huge amount of Canadian liquor now flowing into the United States over international railways were announced by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Seymour Lowman. The new customs rules provide for a more rigid inspection of freight cars.

Beginning Aug. 28, all freight cars traveling through Canada between American points will carry manifests and will be marked by blue seals issued by the customs service. By watching the numbers and dates on these seals, customs officials believe they will be able to stem much of the millions of gallons of liquor that now enters the United States from Canada.

Asks Facts on Dry Killing.

Simultaneously with the announcement regarding the new regulations, Mr. Lowman stated that he has ordered an investigation into the recent shooting to death of Leo Boice, a Hoboken stevedore, by a customs agent. It is anticipated that the federal courts, as usual, will act to protect the federal agent, James MacGuicken, from the state courts

It was noted here that the killing of Boise raised the death toll of citizens shot in the name of prohibition up to at least 127. This number is exclusive of the hundreds who have been maimed by prohibition bullets. Of this number only a very small percentage have been slain by customs personnel; most of the victims were killed by prohibition and coast guard personnel.

The new system of marking and inspection for freight traffic was reached following a series of conferences beween American and Canadian railroad and custom officials.

Canada Forced to Coöperate.

The railroads, it was pointed out, were glad to coöperate, as the treasury department had the power to stop every freight car after it crossed the border and subject it to a thorough search if it desired. The cost in such cases would be borne by the shipper and not by the government.

According to Mr. Lowman much of the liquor that reached this country from Canada last year came in freight cars. While seals were used on these cars, close inspection was not made of the freight until it reached its destination. In many cases cars of whiskey entered the United States with counterfeit seals and then were switched off into the bootleg traffic before reaching the port of destination where a search would have been made.

Mr. Lowman said today that while he did not believe any important railroad officials had been bribed to aid in the smuggling of whiskey, he had no doubt that a number of minor officials and railroad workers had connived with bootleggers to reroute rum loaded freight cars and in that way fool the border patrols.

as important a utility as the railway—a part of the commercial life of the country—and not lying within the realm of the political football field. I wish to reiterate what I said in the primary campaign: That if elected I shall complete the bond issue roadbuilding program regardless of the existing state of bond finances, and at this moment believe the widening work to be equally as important.

"Road development is no new enthusiasm with me. I have been engaged in this field during the twelve years I have been secretary of state.

"I believe that we are now in a new era of roadbuilding. The first concerned itself with pulling the state out of the mud; this era will be one of meeting the increase and congestion of traffic. And that does not mean that building of primary roads will be neglected."

Wealthy Henry M. Dixon Is Sued for a Divorce

Los Angeles, Cal., July 28.—(AP)—Henry M. Dixon of Chicago, wealthy publisher of religious books, was made defendant in a divorce suit filed today in Superior court today by Mrs. Cora H. Dixon. Mrs. Dixon quoted her husband in the complaint as saying that if he knew it was to cost so much to have a wife he would not have acquired one.

Farmer Receives $5,579 for 1 Shipment of Hogs

Springfield, Ill., July 28.—[U. P.]—W. S. Johnson, Bloomington, received $5,579 for 61 hogs at the Springfield live stock yards yesterday. It was the largest check ever made out for one shipment of live stock since the yards were established in 1925.

MOTHER FINDS "STOLEN CHILD" HELD AS THIEF

Over at the juvenile home yesterday sat little Miss Caroline Feldorn, 12 years old, a problem to social workers. Daughter of an ex-convict, she was sent out by a stepmother to sell candy on the streets and was arrested as a purse stealer.

Friday afternoon a woman rushed into the Town Hall station waving a newspaper containing the account of a girl taught by a "Fagin" to steal.

"Where is she?" the woman cried. "She's my daughter who was kidnaped from me in Missouri two years ago."

The father had been sent to prison for forgery, the mother said, and she divorced him and remarried, settling in Nevada, Mo., with her two daughters, Caroline and Catherine, who was two years older. When the father was released he came and kidnaped Caroline, the mother said.

Feldorn also remarried and came to Chicago with his wife and Caroline. They lived at 1400 Thorndale avenue. He had a job as a waiter for a time, but recently has been out of work. His wife made candy and sent Caroline out on the streets to sell it, and her daily sales averaged $10.

FARM WASTES AID INDUSTRY, CHEMISTS TOLD

Chemists and engineers at yesterday's session of the Chemical institute at Northwestern university pointed out great possibilities of increasing American industrial production by the utilization of farm waste, but they continued to warn against Utopian hopes from such production.

Dr. Harrison E. Howe, told how chemical intervention in agriculture is one farmer's meat and another farmer's poison. He pointed out that lard is being driven into the cheap export field, while hard fat from hydrogenated cotton seed and peanut oils conquers the higher priced domestic market. Vegetable fats have largely ousted tallow as a base for oleomargerine and oleo is now the formidable competitor of butter.

Mr. Ultimate Consumer cannot hope to profit much from the utilization of farm waste, as long as the majority of consumers prefer the sidewalks of New York to the banks of the Wabash, Dr. Howe intimated. "It costs as much," he said, "to take a box of oranges across the river from Jersey City to New York and place it in a retailer's hands as it does to pick the crop in California and ship it across the country."

WOMAN CHARGES PERSECUTION IN SUIT FOR $50,000

Julius Rosenheim, a deputy sheriff, and Arthur T. Hatch, a painting contractor of 6732 Ridgeland avenue, were sued for $50,000 yesterday by Mrs. Luella E. Walt, an elderly widow of 4519 Cottage Grove avenue. Hatch used the deputy to persecute her, according to Mrs. Walt's lawyer, Seymour N. Cohen.

Hatch is the father of Mrs. Thelma Hatch Walt, who obtained a divorce last May from Victor H. Walt, a son of the plaintiff.

Charges Raids on Home.

Victor became in arrears in alimony payments, his wife charged. An attachment was issued for him. Three times in March and again in April Hatch and Deputy Sheriff Rosenheim made early morning raids, searching the elder Mrs. Walt's home. They declared they were looking for her son, Attorney Cohen said.

Again, at 1 o'clock on the morning of June 9 Hatch and the deputy sheriff knocked at Mrs. Walt's door, it is charged. She refused to admit them.

Alleges Police Jailed Her.

Two squads of police were called by the deputy. They forced their way in and arrested Mrs. Walt, it is alleged. According to Attorney Cohen, they locked her in a police cell and the deputy sheriff told the police not to release her on any bail because she was held for contempt of court.

The deputy told her, it is charged, that she would have to pay her son's alimony. She was not released until more than twenty-four hours later, the lawyer said, and she then obtained the assurance of Superior Judge Joseph Sabath that there was no court order against her and never had been.

1929 MOON-Aerotype

OUT OF EVERY FIFTY AUTOMOBILES
IT MAKES FORTY-NINE OLD-FASHIONED, OUT-OF-DATE, OBSOLETE

IT's two full years ahead, the most daring, most radical, most advanced type automobile that has appeared since 1925. It's the all-new Moon-Aerotype with the very latest ideas in French bodies designed in Paris, style-capital of the world. Come, see this car, see the big bulged Belgian Fenders and the popular Franco-Italian Aerotype radiator. ¶ Here, indeed, is the last word in style. And here, also, is the most highly specialized chassis in all Motordom. The motor takes its design from aircraft engineering. It has lifted bodily many of the ideas that assisted Lindbergh and Chamberlin in their great flights across to Europe. Everywhere, you hear folks discussing Aerotype High Compression and its "White Flash Head", Anti-knock Construction, Twin-barrel Carburetion and the industry's first Self-lubricating Chassis. Everywhere the car's performance has proved a real sensation. Get the facts at the wheel. Get into an Aerotype and drive it. Out of every fifty cars Aerotype makes forty-nine of them obsolete.

RODEO CONTESTS FOR $33,000 IN PRIZES OPENED

Cowboys and Cowgirls Vie at Soldiers' Field.

Tex Austin's world's championship rodeo opened yesterday afternoon in Soldiers' field and will continue for nine days, afternoon and evening, to determine the championships in cowboy and cowgirl events. This year the contestants will compete for $33,000 in prizes.

The "yip, yip" of the cowboy, the shrill whinney of horses, the clashing of cattle horns, the whirr of the lariat, and the pounding of hoofs on the hard turf resounded at the opening contests.

In every event—for the first time in Chicago's rodeo history—a world's champion was entered to defend his title against a field determined to wrest the honors from him.

Movie Cowboy Introduced.

Hoot Gibson, the movie star, was introduced as he sat on his famous buckskin horse. Scenes from the rodeo are to be used in his new picture.

James Minotto, son-in-law of Louis Swift, the packer, tried his skill in the calf roping contest. Thrice Mr. Minotto missed with his lariat and the calf romped away to the cattle enclosure at the south end of the stadium. One of his competitors was Bob Dow, cowboy attorney general of New Mexico.

All Pay Own Expenses.

Rules of the rodeo provide that all contestants pay their expenses, both in traveling and during the rodeo. Their ability to compete and win some of the prize money is their only remuneration.

Champions entered in this year's rodeo include: Homer Ward, steer and bronk riding; Tad Lucas, cowgirl relay race; Ted Elder, trick and fancy riding; Florence Hughes, riding; and Ruth Roacj, cowgirl bronk riding.

The afternoon performances start at 2:30 p. m. and evening performances at 8:30 p. m.

HATLESS BANDIT ROBS STORE.

A hatless bandit sauntered into the United Hosiery store at 6739 Stony Island avenue yesterday, held up the manager, Mrs. F. J. Gariepy, 7209 Yates avenue, and escaped with $105.

Joliet Mayor Wed in Chicago

Mayor and Mrs. George Sehring of Joliet after wedding ceremony yesterday at the Holy Name cathedral. The bride was Josephine Barrett, a resident of Joliet all her life.

Two Youths Get Life for Abducting Marshal

Cambridge, Ill., July 28.—[Special.]—Two Peoria youths, Lloyd Prather, 22, and Theodore Bidleman, 23, were given a life sentence in the Henry county Circuit court here this morning on charges of abducting Marshal William Weise, who caught them in the act of robbing a dry goods store. Judge Leonard Telleen denied their petition for a new trial.

Married in Rectory

George F. Sehring, mayor of Joliet, Ill., for the past six years and present Democratic candidate for state auditor, and Miss Josephine Barrett of Joliet were married at noon yesterday in the rectory of Holy Name cathedral by the Rev. Francis Ryan. County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer personally issued the license to the couple a few hours before the marriage. The mayor, who is a widower, gave his age as 56. His bride gave her age as 35.

FORD WANTS PIPE ORGAN; SO DO OTHERS; FIGHT ON

And if It's the Berkeley Organ Ford Won't Get It

Providence, R. I., July 28.—(AP)—For the first time since he became one of the world's richest men Henry Ford is likely to find his desires thwarted. Rhode Island millionaires and a bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church are prepared to give him battle, with a little antiquated pipe organ, now in the Christian church at Portsmouth, as the casus belli.

If the organ in question proves to be the one that George Berkeley, lord bishop of Cloyne, presented Trinity church, Newport, in 1733, and which was removed from that church many years later to make way for a large and better one, Mr. Ford, who has entered into negotiations for its purchase, cannot have it, says Bishop Darlington of Pennsylvania, John Nicholas Brown, former Gov. R. Livingston Beeckman, and others.

May Get It and May Not.

If it proves not to be the Berkeley organ he will be allowed to take it away and thus add what undoubtedly is a treasure of its kind, even without definite historical connections, to his collection of antique musical instruments, now housed in Dearborn, Mich.

It is known that members of Trinity church were greatly interested in the Christian church, Portsmouth, at the time of its formation and for many years thereafter, and it is believed that the little old organ was sent there from Trinity. Mrs. Amonzo Borden, member of the church board for many years, says that when the organ now in use there was installed, the builders of the instrument stated that the old organ, removed to the church gallery, was one of the oldest they had seen.

And So the Fight Is On.

There are indications that the old Portsmouth organ has been recased, and it is known that the case of the original Berkeley organ was kept in Trinity church and new "works" and pipes placed inside and upon it.

It was the Rev. Russell Clem, pastor of Trinity church, who first told Mr. Ford of its existence and suggested to the Detroit man that he buy it. Agents of Mr. Ford then examined the instrument and began negotiations for its purchase.

Learning that Mr. Ford was after the organ, old Newport residents who knew more of Rhode Island church history than the automobile magnate, began to inquire into the history of the instrument and connect it in their minds with the noted Berkeley organ.

War Chief's Aid Falls in Plane, Breaks Collar Bone

Johnstown, Pa., July 28.—[U. P.]—Assistant Secretary of War Charles B. Robbins tripped and fell in a Fokker plane today, while climbing from the pilot's cockpit to the passenger cockpit, when the plane was 4,000 feet in the air. He broke his collar bone. The accident occurred while the plane was over Somerset, 30 miles from here. The pilot, Lieut. Quesada, made a landing a few miles from Somerset and Secretary Robbins was taken to a hospital.

It's so much fun to drive their "Clouds" they drive them far, far more

A Reo dealer recently reported on 400 Flying Clouds which he had watched in his territory for a year.

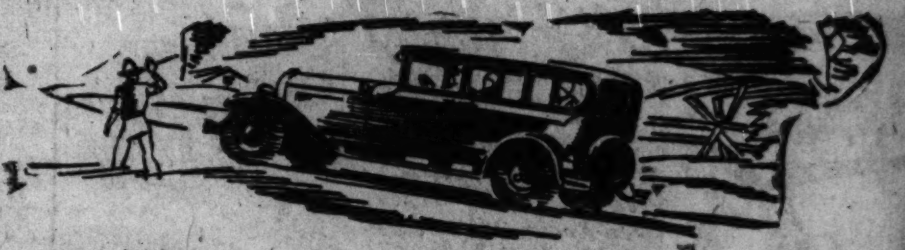
He wanted to know how the Flying Clouds stood up.

He found that buyers averaged 33⅓% more mileage on their Flying Clouds in a year than they had on their old cars. He asked them why. And the inevitable answer was that it was much more fun to drive a Flying Cloud than to drive any other car they ever owned because of the Flying Cloud's comfort, power, speed, and smoothness.

Cars driven for business showed the same excess of mileage. It was easier to make more calls; more comfortable to cover even a larger territory; more days on the road because of freedom from repairs.

Naturally, one would expect that the greater mileage of the Reo Flying Clouds would mean more repairs than usual. Not one broken spring. Not one broken steering arm or spindle. Not even a worn shackle, steering spindle, or tie rod bolt. No rebushing in any front end. Not a bad wheel bearing, front or rear.

No brakes to be relined—not even after 30,000 miles. Only twelve brake repairs for 1600 brakes.



Never a record of freedom from care such as this

Not a part replaced in a differential. Not a broken ring or pinion gear. Not a part replaced in a transmission. Not a grabbing clutch in the lot.

Never a Flying Cloud motor in with a burned bearing. Never a motor bearing that needed adjustment or showed signs of wear. Not a piston pin knock in the bunch. No water pump or fan belt troubles. An average of one exhaust valve replacement on each valve-grinding job. Not an intake valve replaced. Never a timing chain adjusted. Cars with the highest mileages are still running with the original piston rings in them.

Those are extracts from the record not of one car, but of four hundred. Not of factory drivers, but of 400 Flying Cloud owners and their families. Unusual for the ordinary car—but typical of Flying Clouds.

And now the 1929 Reo Flying Cloud

Handsomer, sturdier, faster, more powerful, the 1929 Flying Cloud offers you all the advantages that set the first Flying Clouds apart from the ordinary. It gives you all the dependability that enables records like the one above to be made. It goes farther in giving you extraordinary performance.

Be very sure before you pay your good money for any car, that you know what a 1929 Flying Cloud can do. We have one waiting for you. Try it out.

BONDSMEN NOT PAYING FAIR TAX, CHAMBERLIN SAYS

Sends List of Properties to Board of Review.

Among those not complaining about over taxation are the professional bondsmen, according to Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the Chicago crime commission. Mr. Chamberlin has prepared a list of properties scheduled as bail for persons charged with crimes, which he sent yesterday to Chairman Edward R. Litsinger of the board of review.

Letters and personal calls from owners of modest homes have become so numerous that assessors and reviewers are in a fight with time to complete a reassessment, as ordered by the state tax commission, and also to give individual attention to complaints.

"Not Paying Fair Amounts."

"But we hope the bondsmen will not be overlooked," said Mr. Chamberlin. "We find from their own sworn statements that they are not paying anything like the amount they should in taxes."

A survey has revealed that the tax valuation averages 40 per cent of the real valuation on all Cook county property, and that at the average tax rate of $5 per $100 assessed valuation, the average tax bill is equivalent to 2 per cent of the actual value of the property. On this basis the list supplied by the crime commission shows that the bondsmen are paying far less than they should. It was pointed out that professional bondsmen who aid prisoners usually have political influence.

Bondsmen's Taxes Listed.

The names supplied by Mr. Chamberlin may not be those of professionals, but in every instance, he said, their taxes were less than a fair one, on the 2 per cent average basis. The list follows:

Maurizio and Catarina Damasc, 837-9 North Kildare avenue. Claimed value, $15,000; taxes, $68.30; fair tax, $300.

Bella Rosenthal, 2609 Sunnyside avenue. Claimed value, $15,000; taxes, $118.83; fair tax, $300.

John F. James, southwest corner Waukegan road and Lake avenue. Claimed value, $75,000; taxes, $30; fair tax, $1,500.

Joseph S. and Anna Pytlik, 1457 Garfield boulevard. Claimed value, $40,000; taxes, $350; fair tax, $800.

John and Angeline Lucas, 1651 West 79th street. Claimed value, $55,000; taxes, $220.67; fair tax, $1,100.

Meyer and Philip Lapin and Sarah Hurwich, 832-8 South Halsted street. Claimed value, $90,000; taxes, $1,370.52; fair tax, $1,800.

Henry Marks, 549 Bunker street. Claimed value, $5,000; taxes, $38.88; fair tax, $100.

Henry Marks, 546-8 West Roosevelt road. Claimed value, $50,000; taxes, $874.82; fair tax, $1,000.

Louis Rosen, 1444-6 South Peoria street. Claimed value, $30,000; taxes, $175; fair tax, $600.

Louis Rosen, 1369-73 Blue Island avenue. Claimed value, $107,500; taxes, $1,020.60; fair tax, $2,150.

Clare Schneider, 2204-6 North Kedzie avenue. Claimed value, $55,000; taxes, $563.78; fair tax, $1,100.

Leah Schneider, 1213-15 Independence boulevard. Claimed value, $65,000; taxes, $602.84; fair tax, $1,300.

More Inequalities Shown.

A complaint was received from Herman Merker, 7838 South Loomis street, showing tax valuations for himself and his neighbors as follows:

Address, owner, building.	Tax val.
7826, Thomas B. Ryan, 6 flats	$7,000
7836 W. Gardner, 2 flats	5,800
7838, H. Merker, 2 flats	7,500
7840, P. Mulcahy, 2 flats	3,000

"This shows up the rotten system of taxation," said Mr. Merker. "I pay $200 a year more taxes than my neighbor who has the same kind of a building, and $25 more than my neighbor who has six flats to my two."

ARREST OF 4 CLEARS 20 ROBBERIES.

Terre Haute, Ind., July 28.—[U.P.]—Twenty robberies have been cleared up by the arrest of Charles and William Stevens, brothers, and Sam Jackson and James Warrick, Sheriff Ray Foncannon announced today. The confession of the Stevens brothers included robbery of the post offices at Catlin, Ill., and Lewis.

STREET REPAIRS AT STANDSTILL IN LEGAL TANGLE

Aldermen Seek Way Out of Contract Snarl.

The city administration yesterday found itself in a legal tangle as a result of its action last April in "farming out" street repair work north of Madison street to the White Paving company under a private contract system.

A taxpayer's suit, brought to block the contract on the ground that it was a scheme for the benefit of political favorites and that it specified "fraudulent prices," caused the predicament. Already the suit has stopped the north side repair work and now threatens to continue to do until the end of 1928, although both the city and the company, it was announced yesterday, are willing to cancel the contract and permit resumption of the work by the city.

History of the Situation.

Circumstances leading up to the present situation were these:

On March 5 the city council, by a vote of 30 to 11, passed an ordinance recommended by Commissioner of Public Works Richard W. Wolfe, removing the north side repair work from the city street department and turning it over to private contractors for 1928. The ordinance divided the $2,800,000 available in the vehicle tax fund for street repairs into two parts, appropriating $1,400,000 for the contract. Eleven minority aldermen put up a bitter fight against the measure, warning that it was fraught with trouble, but were overriden by the Thompson majority.

On April 12 Commissioner Wolfe let the contract to the White company, the lowest of four bidders, and the company started work.

Court Action Stops Work.

The taxpayer's suit, filed by Attorney Hayes McKinney in behalf of Miss Mertie N. Elsenau, was brought on June 1. According to the petition, prices specified in the contract are "more than twice" the amount at which the city itself did the repairing last year. On July 19 Circuit Judge Ira Ryner refused to issue a temporary injunction blocking the contract, but set the trial on the merits of the case for the September term of court.

Meanwhile, however, Mr. Wolfe had refused to honor vouchers in payment of the contract, fearing that he might be held liable should Miss Elsenau win. As a result the company ceased work the middle of June. Before that time it had done about $300,000 worth of work for which it has as yet received nothing.

Aldermen Start Inquiry.

Cessation of the repair work brought in a deluge of complaints to aldermen and the city council finance committee named a subcommittee, headed by Ald. Jacob Arvey [24th], to investigate the whole vehicle tax situation. The subcommittee, at its last meeting, directed Assistant Corporation Counsel James W. Breen to negotiate with the company with a view to cancelling the contract.

During the last week Mr. Breen has held four conferences with Charles Paquette, engineer for the concern, and yesterday announced that the company will agree to the cancellation if the city will pay the full amount due and purchase certain machinery valued at about $10,000.

Breen then asked Attorney McKinney if he would withdraw Miss Elsenau's suit and permit the total amount due the company, approximately $310,000, to be paid unchallenged. This McKinney refused to do unless the sum is cut down to "a reasonable figure." A reasonable figure, according to the McKinney petition, would be about $150,000, which Mr. Breen said he doubted the company would accept.

Street Repairing Tied Up.

Thus unless a compromise can be effected the contract apparently will remain in effect and street repairs on the north side will remain at a standstill indefinitely.

Mr. McKinney announced last night that he will send to Mr. Breen tomorrow a letter stating exactly on what terms Miss Elsenau will agree to a settlement. At 10:30 a. m. tomorrow Ald. Arvey's subcommittee is scheduled to meet and it is likely that the whole problem will be placed before the aldermen.

U. S. Delays Proceedings to Deport George Remus

Washington, D. C., July 28.—(AP)—George Remus, whose incarceration in Atlanta penitentiary for bootlegging was a prelude to his trial in Ohio last year on the charge of murdering his wife, has obtained from the immigration service a temporary stay of proceedings looking to his deportation.

Bandit Slugs Youth in Loop; Gets Pay Roll

Otto Nowack, 16, of 1040 South East avenue, Oak Park, was knocked down by a bandit and robbed of a payroll of $178 which he was taking into the Board of Trade building to pay the messenger boys employed by the firm of Jackson Brothers, Boesel & Co., for which Nowack is head messenger. The robbery occurred on the third floor of the Postal Telegraph building, South La Salle street.

LAVA AND QUAKE DESTROY LARGE PHILIPPINE AREA

Plant Life Exterminated; Populace Flees.

BY R. B. KIDD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MANILA, Philippine Islands, July 28.—The volcano Mayon, located about 180 miles south of Manila on the island of Luzon, broke into violent eruption early today. So far as has been learned no lives were lost.

The eruption was preceded by violent earthquakes. Huge columns of lava were thrown thousands of feet into the air from the summit of the great cone. Five hundred feet below the top of the crater lava broke forth in a huge flow, sweeping down the eastward slope over a wide area toward the town of Labog.

All the mountain streams were obliterated and watercourses 500 feet deep were filled with lava. The people within the path of the flow fled.

Plant Life Exterminated.

The Manila railroad and highway were endangered. The countryside for 9 miles about the base of the mountain was covered with ashes and dust, and practically all the plant life was exterminated by the heat of the shower of ashes.

The outburst occurred according to a prediction by the populace in the affected area, who disregarded the assurance of Father Selga, a noted seismologist, that there was no danger of an eruption. Practically all the towns about the base of the volcano were deserted several weeks ago, when Mayon first showed signs of activity.

The eruption today was the most violent since 1900. The situation is tense in the affected area, thousands of refugees having gone to the town of Legaspi and other sections distant from the immediate vicinity of the action. Clouds conceal the extent of the present lava flow. Women and children are parading the streets of Legaspi singing and praying.

Explorers Have Narrow Escape.

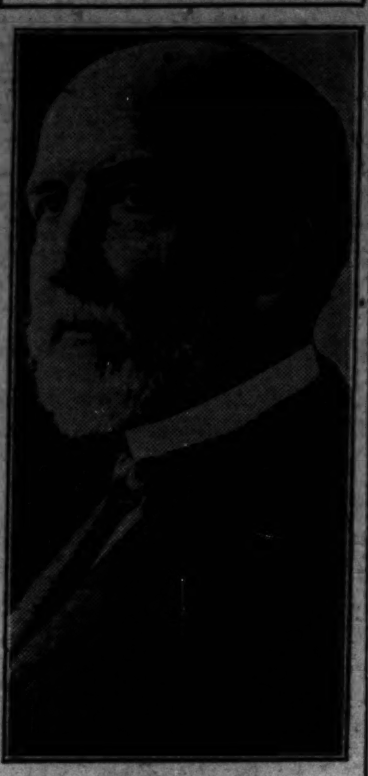
Gov. Gen. Henry L. Stimson has returned after a six days' personal inspection. He told the populace not to be afraid and that he did not advise them to return to their homes near the volcano.

A party of explorers, including Dr. H. Windsor Wade, head of the Culion leper settlement, climbed to the 2,500 foot level of Mayon last night. They were unable to reach the top. They were encamped when the eruption occurred, and narrowly escaped being trapped by streams of lava or killed by the showers of lava rocks.

UNLOADED PISTOL KILLS.

Decatur, Ill., July 28.—[U. P.]—Cecil Dickens, 14, killed himself here last night while toying with an "unloaded" revolver.

LUMBERMAN DIES



THOMAS B. WALKER.

MYSTERY VEILS LOOTING OF PARIS VANDERBILT HOME

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 28.—Mystery shrouds the looting of Mrs. William Kissam Vanderbilt's home, 10 Rue Leroux, facing the fashionable Avenue du Bois last night. The burglary was reported to the police this morning by Mme. Aimée Frenet, the Vanderbilt housekeeper, who said her mistress was away, although Mrs. Vanderbilt attended the Davis cup tennis matches yesterday.

Neither the police nor Mrs. Vanderbilt's domestic would state what loot was taken. The assistant police commissioner admitted that the thieves ripped thirteen valuable miniature paintings adorning the walls of the salon from their frames, but discarded them after examination. They were found strewn on the floor. A number of valuable pieces of art and furniture were smashed as the burglars apparently sought secret drawers where the Vanderbilt wealth and jewels were hidden.

The thieves carefully examined every article of furniture in Mrs. Vanderbilt's bedroom, even ripping open the mattress, pillows and spring coverings and dumping hats, robes, dresses, lingerie and other wearing apparel on the floor from the shelves of closets and armoires.

BOY HURT BY AUTO.

Springfield, Ill., July 28.—[U.P.]—Six year old Myron Layendecker of this city was in a serious condition in a hospital here as a result of injuries received when he was struck down by an automobile dirven by Irvin K. Gaitwood, Moline.

LUMBERMAN, ART PATRON, WORTH 100 MILLION, DIES

Death came peacefully at 5:40 this morning as Mr. Walker slept. His health has been known to be failing for several weeks, due mostly to advancing age.

With him at his death were four of his six children, Mrs. Julia Walker Smith, Archie D. Walker, and Gilbert M. Walker, all of Minneapolis, and Fletcher D. Walker of California. The remaining two sons, Clinton and Willis, are en route from California.

Mr. Walker, an outstanding figure in the business and civic life of the northwest for more than 60 years, was one of the 20 wealthiest men in the world, according to a survey published by the New York Times in 1927. The survey placed the value of his estate at $100,000,000. While frequently asked to give his own statement as to the value of his estate, he always declined to comment. "I do not think that can be taken as a measure of achievement," he once said.

The foundation of the Walker fortune was laid in the lumbering business as a partner in the firm of Butler, Mills & Walker. He withdrew from his partnership before the business depression in 1872-'73, later organizing the Red River Lumber company.

Part of Mr. Walker's timber holdings became valuable for its underlying iron ore deposits long before it had become valuable for its lumber, and yielded several million dollars when it was sold to the United States Steel corporation.

As his fortune grew so did his interest and passion for collecting works of art. His collection, comprising 8,000 pieces and valued at $5,000,000, was given to the city of Minneapolis several years ago.

During recent years Mr. Walker took his birthdays casually by observing his usual business routine. He always received hundreds of messages from friends in all parts of the world. President Coolidge was among those who sent birthday messages.

Dry Agent, Shot in Mistake for a Bootlegger, Dies

Leavenworth, Wash., July 28.—(AP)—Federal Prohibition Agent Ludwig P. Johnsen, who was wounded in a gun battle between federal and county officers here last Wednesday, died this afternoon.

Johnsen was shot five times by Ralph Hand, Chelan county deputy sheriff, who himself received minor wounds from Johnsen's gun when the two clashed in the dark. Hand and Sheriff Pete Wheeler, who was slightly wounded, are recovering.

The battle occurred when the county and federal forces mistook each other for a moonshiner.

NORTH CHINESE ARMIES BATTLE TO REWIN PEKING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEKING, July 28.—Peking is threatened anew by northern armies pushing down the Mukden railway. Heavy reinforcements of Nationalists have arrived and a desperate battle is being waged. Fifteen hundred casualties arrived in Peking today.

The Japanese minister to China will send a note to Nanking Monday declaring a strong attitude will be taken by Japan toward any attempt to bring about the abrogation of the treaty and application of Chinese laws to Japanese subjects. Separate negotiations then will be launched by the Japanese, who will offer complete treaty revision along the lines conducted with the late Marshal Chang Tso-lin's government.

Consuls of all nations will attend the funeral rites for Marshal Chang in Mukden Aug. 4 to 6, which will be the most magnificent since the funeral of the dowager empress.

ASKS EMPLOYERS TO GIVE WORK TO EX-SERVICE MEN

Lester R. Benston of the American Legion service department yesterday issued an appeal to employers in the city to help relieve the unemployment situation among former service men.

Mr. Benston declared that there are hundreds of former service men, many of them skilled in trades and professions, out of work. He said that service men have not been receiving the preference to which the law entitles them for civil service positions in the city, county and state. This is due, in part, he said, to temporary appointments handed out for political purposes.

Mr. Benson requests that employers able to provide employment for ex-service men communicate with the American Legion service department, which maintains a free employment bureau at 160 N. La Salle-st.

CANADA PLANS TO ASSUME HUGE RAILWAY DEBTS

Will Wipe Off Two and a Half Billions.

BY GEORGE SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, July 28.—After years of controversy, the Canadian government has decided to write off some of the two and one-half billions of dollars of debt of the Canadian National railways and add it to the national debt of the dominion. It won't make a dollar's difference to the Canadian taxpayer but, according to the contentions of public ownership supporters in Canada, it will enable the big publicly owned railway to demonstrate some real progress and show net income earnings.

Faced with Big Deficits.

Confronted with the proposition of a couple of score of privately owned roads which failed to do much else than pile up deficits for the dominion government to meet with advances from the national treasury, the Canadian National railways in Canada was constituted a decade or so back as a last desperate hope to get the dominion out of its railway tangle. The old Grand Trunk was taken into the public ownership venture, also the Canadian Northern, which was going to compete with the C. P. R. across continent, and dozens of smaller companies, including electric radials. The attitude at the time was that whatever happened under the new arrangement it couldn't be worse than the old.

Of course all the debt loads of these various decrepit railway ventures had to be dragged along to the Canadian capital and be chalked up against the new Canadian National's management, and when the total debt figures were added up they exceeded the national debt, even after the war. And the argument to which the government and the railway management has listened is that most of this debt load is not properly chargeable to Canadian National railways under public ownership at all, but to the predecessors of the federal government, which sanctioned all the wild railway expenditures of thirty years ago.

Hope to Increase Morale.

According to vigorous public ownership supporters like Thomas L. Church, Toronto Conservative, the benefits of financial reorganization to the morale of Canadian National staff will be immense. And the people of Canada, who constitute the shareholders of the National railways, it is declared, will not feel so despondent over the affairs of their railway when they see its balance sheets calculated on the decapitalized basis.

To run the Canadian National railways, the Canadian government secured the services of an American trained railway man, Sir Henry Thornton, and government and people credit Sir Henry with bringing the National a considerable distance out of the center of financial morass. In any event Canadian National operations in 1927, considered apart from this vast overload of debt which it is now proposed to lift, were deemed not so bad.

The gross earnings of 1927 were $253,472,649 and the total operating expenses $205,472,649. Gross income was $61,649,147. But the total reductions from gross income were $78,896,888, which left a net deficit of $17,247,740. But the big debt charges, which it is proposed to lift, were mainly responsible for the deductions from gross income. There were two huge items for interest, $29,119,380 interest on funded debt and $31,804,380 interest on money advanced in past years by the dominion government.

Owes Public Billion.

The company owes to the public in unmatured long term funded debt just about a billion dollars. The debt owing to Canada, including old loans, totals more than half a billion. Funded debt, unmatured, amounts to over $33,000,000. There is accrued unpaid interest owing the dominion of $226,000,000, and the appropriation account totals $226,142,000.

Calculating all the interest due on unpaid interest, the load of debt mounts up to nearly the two and a half billion mark—for a railway in a country inhabited by about ten millions of people. That is one of the reasons why Canada is crying out for increased population—so as to hasten the day when her railway will pay.

CLEAR SUSPECT OF GIVING GUN TO OBREGON KILLER

Special Congress to Meet Tomorrow.

MEXICO CITY, July 28.—(AP)—Manuel Trejo, who had been suspected of furnishing the pistol with which José De Leon Toral assassinated President-elect Gen. Alvaro Obregon, was absolved of that suspicion today.

Gen. Antonio Rios Zertuche, acting chief of police, said that Trejo had been found at Guadalajara. He was placed under arrest but was released when an examination showed that he had no connection with the crime.

Postpone Congress Meeting.

Leaders of the Mexican congress announced that a special session called for today has been postponed until late Monday afternoon and that even then it will remain in session for only two hours.

The change in the plan is part of a general effort being made to avoid political gatherings as much as possible until there is a further clearing of the uncertain atmosphere which has prevailed since the assassination of President-elect Obregon.

It also was announced from the Saltillo district that a labor convention called for today had been called off.

It was said the congress would consider the so-called Obregon amendments to the constitution reducing the number of deputies, establishing federal commissions for the municipal governments of Mexico City and towns in the federal districts and placing the appointment of judges in the hands of the President.

Dispatches from Cuervavaca today said a passenger train bound there from Mexico City had been attacked near the station of Tepoxtan. The engineer saved the train by speeding through a fusillade of bullets. There were no casualties. Troops are pursuing the attackers.

The remnants of the band of Vidal Tenorio, notorious bandit of Vera Cruz, who was killed recently in the mountains of that state, were scattered by federal troops Thursday. Newspaper dispatches relate that three of the bandits were killed in the fight, three others were captured and executed and that a number were wounded. The dead include the brother and two cousins of Tenorio.

New Church-Labor Theory.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, July 28.—No official indication has been given of the findings of the provisional inspector general of police, Gen. Antonio Rios Zertuche, in the investigation into the assassination of President Elect Obregon. It is learned, however, from other sources that the investigation has proven that the assassin, José de Leon Toral, was a member of the labor union and the Catholic organization for the protection of religion, and was worked upon by parties still unnamed, who belonged, it is said, to the labor union. It is said that playing upon the weak character of Toral, they persuaded him that in assassinating Gen. Obregon he would be doing a great service for the Catholic church, religion, morality, and labor unionism.

The police will turn Toral over to the civil authorities Monday for trial, together with the evidence collected by the police.

Miss Harvey Wins

Miss Sophie Glob of Harvey won the title of Miss Southern Cook County last night at the annual picnic of the Harvey fire department, held in Hazelcrest grove and attended by more than 10,000 persons. Miss Glob was sponsored by the Harvey fire department and won over eight other bathing beauties, each sponsored by a suburban fire department. The winner of second place is Miss Steger, and Miss Chicago Heights won third prize. The winners were given cash prizes and the losers also were awarded prizes by the Harvey department.

JAPANESE PLAN COSTLY EXHIBIT FOR 1933 FAIR

Assurance that Japan will have a large exhibit at Chicago's second world's fair in 1933 was given yesterday through communications from two Japanese business men who said the island empire is prepared to spend $3,000,000. The financiers are Noboru, Ohtani, managing director of a Japanese steamship company, and N. Kenei, president of an oriental life insurance company. The plans for the coming fair include the erection of a Japanese building. Lectures designed to interest American travelers and American capital will be delivered daily.

8,000 PRACTICE A SOLDIER'S DUTY AT CAMP GRANT

Electric Lights, Showers in Army Tents.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Camp Grant, Ill., July 28.—[Special.]—The Illinois National Guard, the state's peace time citizen army of 8,000, moved into Camp Grant today for the annual training encampment of the 33rd Division.

Bands blared and sharp orders rang out as the men detrained from the fourteen special trains that bore them from every part of the state. Forming orderly ranks they marched away to pitch their tents on the rolling plains that stretch for two miles along the Rock river.

By night fall all had reported and the guardsmen were ready to start the business of soldiering.

Face Intensive Training.

For two weeks the guardsmen will follow a program of intense training, instruction and recreation in order to better prepare themselves for this nation's defense.

The first train, arriving at daybreak, brought the 131st Infantry, Chicago troops, under the command of Col. Francis M. Allen. By noon their camp was in order and the men filed into mess. Later trains brought the other Chicago outfits. The 108th Infantry Division special troops, and the 66th Brigade, six airplanes, bearing the 108th Observation squadron, flew in from Chicago at noon.

The 8th Infantry (attached troops) and the 33rd Tank Company from Evanston, detrained tonight.

Keehn Inspects Camp.

Maj. Gen. Roy D. Keehn, in command of the camp, arrived late today and, accompanied by Col. Thomas R. Gowenlock, chief of staff, inspected the camp.

"With new facilities we hope to accomplish more during this camp period than ever before," he said.

Nearly $100,000 has been spent in improvements to the camp during the last year. New mess shacks and hot water showers have been installed and each tent is equipped with floors and electric lights.

Because of the growing importance of the airplane in modern warfare special emphasis will be given this year to training in ground defense against the operations of air craft, according to Col. Edgar A. Meyer, who is in charge of the National Guard affairs for the Sixth Corps area. Special maneuvers of the air squadron and the cavalry have been arranged.

Governor's Day Aug. 8.

A simulation of actual warfare which will bring into action all the organizations in the division, will be staged on Aug. 8, which is governor's day at the camp. The entire force of the camp and civilian visitors will assemble in the huge natural amphitheater to witness the special maneuvers of air and land forces.

Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the United States army, will address the assemblage. Awarding of trophies to the winners of the various training and athletic contests is part of the program for that day.

More intensive training of the men is planned for this year, according to Col. Gowenlock.

"It will become apparent as the men get into their work," he declared, "that their armory training since the last camp has been profitable.

"The division is in better condition from the standpoint of military preparedness than ever."

Youth Drowns in Creek as He Hunts for Clams

George Watson, 19, of 1737 Hartray avenue, Evanston, was drowned when he sank in a deep hole while searching for clams in a creek in the north end of Niles Center yesterday. Watson was accompanied by his brother in the search for clams. The former waded out toward the middle of the creek, where he stepped into a hole and sank. His body was later recovered.

ILLINOIS NATIONAL GUARD BEGINS DRILL AT CAMP GRANT

The 132d infantry, 33d division, marching into Camp Grant near Rockford yesterday after trip from Chicago on special train. This is one of the many outfits which comprise the Illinois National Guard division. Nearly 10,000 troops went into camp yesterday, all the units excepting the artillery, which has already trained.

SALTIS ELUDES POLICE 70 DAYS; U.S. READY TO ACT

Yesterday was the seventieth day since Joseph Saltis, the south side beer baron, was ordered by the Supreme court of the United States to start serving his sentence of sixty days in the Bridewell and pay a $50 fine for carrying concealed weapons. A police search, which has been declared by some to be less than half hearted, has been conducted during that period, but Saltis has never been found.

Hope was expressed by the searchers yesterday when it was learned the government authorities intended soon to set a date for his trial on an indictment charging him with transporting good beer from Waverly, N. Y., to Summit. He was first indicted for this crime two years ago, but the case failed to come to trial and a reindictment was made recently.

The federal people have no warrant out for the arrest of Saltis, prosecutors pointing out that the $1,000 bail he made on the original indictment still stands. If he fails to appear at the date set for trial this bond will be forfeited and a bench warrant issued.

KENOSHA STRIKE FIGHTS BAFFLE AND FRET POLICE

Kenosha, Wis., July 28.—[Special.]—The police investigation of the shooting of three Allen A knitters from ambush while on their way home Thursday night is at a standstill, and the city officials now are awaiting the next form of attack in the labor war which has now turned into guerrilla warfare between strikers and strikebreakers.

A search of hospitals in Kenosha and vicinity has failed to reveal any one wounded other than the three knitters. It was reported by Richard Kaphengst, one of the knitters caught in the ambush, that he may have shot one of the men hiding in the bushes. He emptied his gun in the direction from which the firing came, he said, and thought he heard an outcry.

The only other development in the labor war today was the report of three windows smashed. One of them was in a hotel in a room directly under that occupied by Louis Budenz, knitters' union leader.

Flames Cause $100,000 Loss in W. Randolph St.

Flames in a six story building at 728-30 West Randolph street, in the heart of the produce commission district, early this morning caused loss estimated by Fire Marshal Michael J. Corrigan at $100,000. Firemen called by a 4-11 alarm battled the flames for two hours.

Germany and Austria Union Certain to Come, Loebe Says

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

VIENNA, July 28.—The press of the Little Entente is "viewing with alarm" the agitation last week at the Schubert festival in Vienna for the anschluss (union between Austria and Germany).

Paul Loebe, president of the German reichstag, who has returned here after his triumphal reception in south Austria, today said: "The union between Austria and Germany is coming about naturally, gradually, and peacefully, and no politicians or country can reverse the natural process of history."

Herr Loebe emphasized the progress already made in eliminating the frontier which France and the Little Entente, fearing a stronger Germany, are insisting be maintained. He showed that because of the unification of laws, the constitution of the schools, and the exchange of officials, all of which is permitted by the peace treaties, coupled with the fact that the two countries are identical in race, culture, and language, the frontier is reduced to a mere formality.

Politicians, he said, for centuries had fought vainly against the union of ethnic groups, and there is no reason to believe that historical facts will be reversed at the present time.

Foreign Minister Eduard Benes of Czecho-Slovakia is one politician Dr. Loebe had in mind. M. Benes in a private conversation reiterated his belief that the anschluss is a war danger. Czecho-Slovakia's view is that the anschluss will threaten the sovereignty of Czecho-Slovakia.

5 Convicts May Die, 20 Are Hurt in Film Blaze

Houston, Tex., July 28.—(AP)—Five convicts at Blue Ridge state prison farm No. 2 near here probably were fatally burned, 20 others suffered severe burns, and a prison guard narrowly escaped death tonight when a box of moving picture films exploded in a dining room. Sixty-five convicts were watching the regular Saturday night show when one of them tossed a lighted cigaret into a box of films. Instantly there was a terrific explosion that threw the convicts into a state of panic.

HELD FOR KILLING OVER 25 CENTS.

Rolla, Mo., July 28.—[U. P.]—Daniel Merrill, 25, a farm hand, was arrested on a charge of first degree murder here today, after he confessed to the killing last night of his employer, James Porter, 58, a prosperous farmer, over a 25 cents difference in his wages.

FINLAND TURNS EYES TO U. S. FOR FINANCIAL AID

Gets Credits to Boost Foreign Trade.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

HELSINGFORS, Finland, July 28.—Finland is more and more turning its eyes financially westward. It is trying to cement closer trade and finance relations with the Anglo-American group of financiers, with a tendency to lean more on America than on England.

Risto Ryti, chairman of the Bank of Finland, who recently returned from a visit to America, were financial matters were discussed, told today of this new bend. Already $65,000,000 of American money has been invested in the Finnish stabilization loan, and large amounts are continually coming here to finance Finnish trade in the shape of short term credits. Little is going directly into Finnish investments.

Hurt by Russian Crash.

Credits are necessary for Finnish exporters and importers owing to the fact that Finland's financial system suffered through its Russian connections before the country obtained independence. The state bank was forced to base its currency on Russian bonds and rubles, and when these went to smash the Finnish currency went with them. It has been necessary, therefore, to create new capital, and while this slow process is going on credits are required.

Since Finland's separation from Russia also the Finns have had a hard task turning their industrial eyes from the east to the west. Before the separation 40 per cent of the country's exports went to Russia, including practically its entire output of newsprint, which is one of Finland's great industries. Now this paper is sold in England, America, China, and Australia. The United States took 25,000 tons last year, which the Finnish exporters look on as a promising beginning. A large quantity of pulp is exported to America. The Swedish strike last year gave a sharp fillip to the Finnish paper trade, removing temporarily from the market one of its keen competitors.

Lumber Is Biggest Industry.

Lumber is Finland's biggest industry; next is paper; third is butter, which has been worked up during the last five years through coöperatives and which has now taken an important part in Finnish national economy.

Chairman Ryti told of a most interesting experiment which is being worked out in Finland's industry with the best of results. The largest lumber factory, Enso Guts, and the largest spool factory, Tornator, are owned by the government, which holds more than 90 per cent of the capital, but are run as private companies and in no sense as a state enterprise. The same arrangements have been made with a new fertilizer plant and some smaller industries. All are producing revenue for the state.

The reason for the experiment in the first place was to prevent foreign control, but it has worked so well as to become a permanent feature of Finnish industry.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 28.—(AP)—A suit for $1,847,500, filed by Miss Alma Murrell, motion picture actress, against one of the most prominent of Hollywood's motion picture producers, Charles H. Christie, today provided film circles of that city with a choice topic of discussion.

The huge damage suits charged Christie with "seduction, breach of promise to marry, and breach of promise to employ." Attorneys for Christie and representatives at his studios in Hollywood scoffed at the claim and termed it a "simple case of blackmail."

In August, 1927, Miss Murrell's complaint said, the producer, who is a brother of Al Christie, film comedian, asked her to marry him. The actress agreed and quit her position in Hollywood. She informed friends of the forthcoming nuptials and prepared for the wedding, which was to have been held last January. She asks $1,000,000 for what she terms Christie's subsequent refusal to marry her.

A second claim asked for $97,500 on the ground that the film magnate had signed a contract to employ Miss Murrell at a salary of $150 a week for five years, but failed to do so.

In the other part of the suit Miss Murrell charged that Christie took advantage of her through "artifice, persuasion and misrepresentation, flattery and undue influence."

Later, the suit said, Christie threw her out of a car in which they were riding and she was forced to walk eight miles to her home. She had told him she expected to become a mother and asked him to marry her. Miss Murrell asked for $500,000 for seduction and $250,000 for loss of health.

RIVAL AIR-RAIL LINES TO LOP DAY OFF TRIP WEST

Pennsy Ready; New York Central Delayed.

New York, July 28.—(AP)—Reduction by one day of the travel time between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts appeared today to be an early possibility with two of the country's larger railroads making plans for transcontinental air service.

The Transcontinental Air Transport, built around the Pennsylvania railroad, already has announced plans to begin operation of an air-rail route about Aug. 15. Disclosure yesterday that the New York Central contemplates a similar service through the northwest led to information today that its plans have been delayed through inability to obtain planes.

No Definite Program.

New York Central officials today refused to confirm the details of yesterday's disclosure that air-rail service is planned by that road in coöperation with the Canadian Pacific, "Soo" lines, Boeing Airways corporation and the Mid-Lane Transit company of Minneapolis. It was said no definite conclusions had been reached and that the company was not in a position to announce plans.

It was learned, however, that the railroad has been negotiating for facilities to provide service which would compete with that planned by the Pennsylvania, Northern Pacific, Great Northern and other roads in the northwest.

The first New York Central routes would connect Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth, Detroit, Chicago and Winnipeg, but later would be extended to form a transcontinental route through a tie-up with other large railroads.

Pennsy's First Route.

The first route of the Pennsylvania Transcontinental Air transport will be between Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago. The objective of both projects appears ultimately to be cutting one day from coast-to-coast travel time.

It is understood also that the American Railway Express company plans to expand its airplane express service on a large scale after the railway express business is taken over by the railroads early next year.

Nearer consummation are plans for a trans-oceanic service in which the use of 50 passenger planes is proposed. As contemplated, routes will be opened between the mainland and Havana, later to be extended to greater overwater distances, probably between American and European ports.

AIR MAIL GROWING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 28.—[Special.]—A brilliant future for the air mail service was predicted by Postmaster General New in a radio address tonight. The postmaster general said the air mail has more than justified its existence and is in this country not only to stay, but to grow.

Mr. New called attention to the plans to extend the air mail service to Canada, to Cuba and most of the Central American countries. He asserted it soon will be possible to send mail from Chicago and New York to the Panama canal in less than three days. He mentioned also that on Aug. 1 the postage rate on air mail will be cut squarely in two, the first ounce costing five instead of ten cents.

Airplane Industry Grows.

In pointing out the tremendous strides the air mail service has taken, Mr. New emphasized the growing importance of the whole airplane industry. He declared the business of making and operating airplanes now has attained the proportions of a hundred million dollar industry in this country.

"Transportation by air is growing prodigiously and the facilities for making airplanes in the United States have grown tremendously," Mr. New said.

"It may surprise you to know that there is in the United States today a greater number of factories turning out airplanes than there is building automobiles.

23 Air Mail Lines.

"Six months ago I predicted that 3,500 airplanes would be made in the United States during the year 1928. I now believe that I underestimated the number."

In relating the success achieved by the air mail the postmaster general said there now are 32 regular air routes in operation, of which 23 hold contracts for carrying mail. He said the fourteen passenger carrying routes handled 8,679 passengers in 1927.

WISCONSIN PILOT WINS NATIONAL AIR TOUR HONORS

24 Planes in Detroit After 6,300 Mile Trip.

Detroit, Mich., July 28.—(AP)—Completing a 6,300 mile circle of the western half of the continent, 24 planes of the national air tour landed here late today, the point from which they started on June 30.

John P. Wood of Wausau, Wis., pilot who flew a Wright engined Waco biplane, was declared the winner of the Edsel Ford Reliability trophy, the major award for the tour winner. Wood also received a greater portion of the $12,000 prize awarded the first ten planes to finish the tour. The awards were based on reliability and efficiency of planes and pilots.

Ford Pilot Second.

Frank Hawkes, Ford Motor company pilot, flying a Ford tri-motored plane, finished second. Third place was won by Randolph Page Jr. in a Stinson-Detroiter Jr.

Mrs. Phoebe Fairgrave Omlie of Memphis, Tenn., who flew a tiny monocoupe and whose avowed purpose was "not to win, but to finish," ended the tour in last place after several minor mishaps. Mrs. Omlie was the only woman to pilot a plane.

The tour, which extended to 32 cities over 16 states and which was inaugurated to determine the reliability and efficiency of air travel, was announced as a success. Although the 24 planes flew in varying weather over desert, plain and mountain ranges, there was no accident of a serious nature during the month spent in touring the continent.

On Nonstop Flight to Pacific.

New York, July 28.—[Special.]—Flying a Buhl air sedan laden with 350 gallons of gasoline, Jack Knight, veteran air mail pilot, and Etienne Dornay, French airplane designer, took off from Roosevelt field today on an attempt to make a nonstop flight to Los Angeles. They expected to arrive there at 11 a. m. Sunday Pacific time.

The plane is of the Sesqui type, with small wings below the main wings, with a total wing area of 200 square feet. It weighed about 4,600 pounds, including 2,200 pounds of fuel, at the takeoff. The flyers faced bad weather as far as Cleveland, but beyond that point expected good flying conditions.

Slayer of Two in Aurora Ordered Held Without Bail

Alvino Parez, 28, of Aurora, was held to the grand jury there without bail yesterday on two charges of murder. He has confessed slaying James Chahez, 23, and Benito Diaz, 28, last Sunday night. He stabbed Diaz to death in an argument over a phonograph and hid his body in an abandoned cellar. An hour later he killed Chahez in a quarrel over $26.

Spafford and Wife Sail for Honolulu Celebration

San Francisco, Cal., July 28.—(AP)—Edward P. Spafford, national commander of the American Legion, sailed today for Honolulu, where he will attend the sesqui-centennial celebration in honor of the landing of Capt. Cook in the Hawaiian islands. He was accompanied by Mrs. Spafford.

COOLIDGE SPENDS DAY OF LEISURE BEFORE DEDICATING MONUMENT

Superior, Wis., July 28.—(AP)—President Coolidge spent a day of leisure today in expectation of tomorrow's trip to Cannon Falls, Minn., where he will speak at the unveiling of a monument to Col. William Colvill, who led the historic charge of the first Minnesota volunteer infantry at the battle of Gettysburg.

Leaving Superior early in the morning, the journey will take all day, Mr. Coolidge expecting to be back at Cedar Island lodge late tomorrow evening. Mrs. Coolidge and John Coolidge will accompany the chief executive.

Secretary Jardine will board the special train at Minneapolis on the return trip for an overnight stay at the summer White House, before resuming his journey to Alaska.

CROPS MAKING PROGRESS, U. S. REPORT REVEALS

Washington, D. C., July 28.—(AP)—The department of agriculture today noted rapid progress in nearly all crops. Haying is in full swing and the wheat harvest is moving northward, the monthly report said, except in the eastern part of the country where rains have interfered.

Corn prospects are more favorable than a year ago, the report said. The effect of an average or above average crop probably would be to make the corn-hog price ratio favorable to feeding after October, the department reported.

Says Miss Earhart's Plane Has Been Sold

Rochester, N. Y., July 28.—[U. P.]—The Rochester Times Union in a copyrighted story today said that Donald Woodward, millionaire sportsman and air enthusiast of Leroy, N. Y., had purchased the Friendship, trans-Atlantic plane of Amelia Earhart from Lady Guest, backer of Miss Earhart's flight to Europe. Woodward said he would sail Wednesday for Southampton to take delivery of the Friendship.

Chandler's $10,000,000 plant cannot build these marvelous cars fast enough

Four-Door Sedan..
Coupe $875

IT has been but a few days since Chandler beaconed far and wide the big news of a new Six "65" at $895 ▾ ▾ ▾ the sweetest, speediest and most powerful automobile ever built for less than twelve hundred dollars.

Only a few days ▾ ▾ ▾ and already, from coast to coast, people are calling this new Six "65" the most remarkable automobile value they ever have seen.

Only a few days ▾ ▾ ▾ and an avalanche of orders is pouring into the factory faster than Chandler's huge $10,000,000 plant can build the cars!

Such quick and overwhelming success reads more like an Arabian Nights story than a new epic of the motor car business.

But all you have to do is to see the car to see that it's an absolute knockout. It is lengthy and low. It's rich beyond its price. It's supremely powerful. Takes to the hills like a cat to catnip. Slips through traffic like an eel through a net. And does a sweet 65 and more on the open road!

Be sure to see and drive this amazing car before you commit yourself to anything else.

CHEVROLET

1st Choice of the Nation for 1928!

Over 750,000 Bigger and Better Chevrolets delivered since Jan. 1st!

Acclaimed by hundreds of thousands everywhere as the world's most luxurious low-priced car, the Bigger and Better Chevrolet has enjoyed such tremendous preference on the part of buyers that today it stands first choice of the nation for 1928!

Over 750,000 new Chevrolets delivered to owners since January 1st! The largest number of automobiles sold this year by any single manufacturer! Never has any Chevrolet enjoyed such overwhelming public endorsement—for never has any low-priced car combined such impressive performance, such delightful comfort and such distinctive style.

The power and smoothness of a famous valve-in-head motor equipped with "invar strut" constant clearance pistons . . . the riding ease assured by 107-inch wheelbase and semi-elliptic shock absorber springs . . . the safety and ease of handling afforded by big non-locking four-wheel brakes and a ball bearing worm-and-gear steering mechanism . . . the smartness and luxury of marvelously beautiful bodies by Fisher finished in modish colors—these are among the outstanding reasons why people everywhere have conferred leadership on today's Chevrolet!

Come in and inspect the car that has won such spectacular nation-wide approval. Take it out on the road and drive it. Note its comfort, its performance, its amazing handling ease.

FRIENDS SAY TUNNEY WILL QUIT RING

$13,500 STAKE AT CRETE WON BY KARL EITEL

Defeats Zacaweista by a Head.

BY FRENCH LANE.

There was great rejoicing and much celebrating in the First ward last night.

Karl Eitel's name was on every tongue. Karl is a sleek chestnut 2 year old which runs in the apple blossom silks of Ald. John J. Coughlin. He carried those colors to a brilliant victory in the Chicago Heights handicap, worth $13,500, at Lincoln Fields yesterday.

It was the two year old race engaging colts and fillies which was expected to clear up the western juvenile championship situation. As the First warders roared and made wild dashes for the cashier cages, Karl Eitel came up from behind in the stretch, put all the fleet youngsters in the field behind him and won by a head.

Zacaweista Finishes Second.

Zacaweista, which had the early speed and was from two to four lengths in front of his field all the way around until he hit the sixteenth post, was second. His stable mate, Vermajo, which also came from far back, got up in time to take down third money. Edward B. McLean's Mayor Walker was fourth and The Okah was fifth. Fleet footed Princess Edith, after trying to keep pace and running second most of the way, wound up in sixth place.

Karl Eitel's victory was in the nature of a surprise, for he had been overlooked in the betting as the crowd of 17,000 plunged on Belle of America, Plumbago, the Three D entry and almost every horse in the race. He ran the 6 furlongs in 1:12 3-5, and in the mutuels paid $26.92 to win $9.80 to place and $8.75 to show. The Three D entry was at $6.22 to place and $4.18 to show.

Ald. Coughlin was as hilarious as any of his First ward henchmen as the victory was rolled up. He has invested many thousands of dollars in thoroughbred horse flesh within the last three years. His stable is almost as large as those campaigned by the Whitneys, the Vanderbilts, the Sinclairs and the Riddles in the east.

Coughlin's Third Big Victory.

His stable so far have not won consistently. But it was the third great 2 year old stake his color bearers have accounted for in less than a year. Wacker Drive won the Kentucky Breeders' futurity for him last fall. His colt Roguish Eye won the Bashford Manor stake in Kentucky in the spring, and Karl Eitel accounted for this rich fixture which is one of the most important juvenile events decided during the summer in the west.

Karl Eitel had to have the heart of a real champion to score his triumph. It was a perfect start, with the field of 17 off in fine alignment, but in that first shuffle of flying legs and hoofs, Karl couldn't keep step with Zacaweista, nor was he up to the early pace of Princess Edith, Windy City or The Okah.

Karl Eitel was away eighth, and he was running sixth down the back stretch.

On the lower bend Jockey R. Jones moved up with Karl Eitel. He moved up so swiftly that by the time they reached the head of the stretch only Princess Edith and Zacaweista were in front of him. The Coughlin colt put on still more steam without much urging from Jockey Jones. It carried him past Princess Edith and he conquered her so decisively that she dropped all the way out of it.

Chicago Third in Oak Park Stake.

Then Karl Eitel, coming on the outside, went after Zacaweista. He stepped up in enormous strides and was soon on even terms. He sailed into the lead in ten more strides. It was all over then. Karl Eitel was going away from there until they passed the finish line.

The shock of Karl Eitel's victory, which was the third he scored in four starts, was hardly as great as the defeat of Chicago in the Oak Park stake. Sir Harry, a Coffroth handicap winner, returned to his best form and won the race by a neck from Dunmore. Chicago, crowded back

BY HARLAND ROHM.

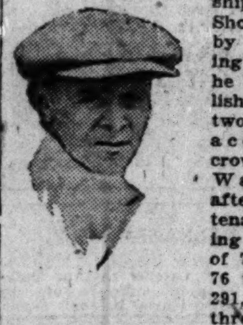
Abelard Espinosa, eldest and smallest of four brother golf professionals, won the Western open championship at North Shore yesterday by grimly hanging on to a lead he had established in the first two rounds. He acquired the crown vacated by Walter Hagen after a two year tenancy by shooting four rounds of 74, 69, 72, and 76 for a total of 291, winning by three strokes.



ABE ESPINOSA.

After the first couple of rounds the tournament seemed to be a battle between the two Espinosa brothers, Al and Abe, but at the finish along came Johnny Farrell, national open champion, with two fine rounds to slip into second place ahead of the second Espinosa. Farrell's total for second place was 294, and Al's third place score was 295.

Farrell Spurts Too Late.

Although Farrell's rush in the last two rounds, like the charge which brought him a tie for first and eventually the championship in the national

Who Said It?
When, Where, and Why

The Tribune will pay $5 for each snappy quotation printed and $5 for the best answer. Send your answers and quotations to the Who Said It editor, Chicago Tribune.

WHO SAID:

1. Damn the torpedoes; full speed ahead?—E. J. Murray, 7651 Stewart avenue, Chicago.

2. I'm from Missouri; you'll have to show me?—John E. Mullen, 325 West Edwards street, Springfield, Ill.

3. I have never allowed words to make me say what I did not wish to say? (This quotation was suggested in the office and the $5 award is given to THE TRIBUNE Free Ice Fund.)

Last Week's Answers

Quotation—So's Your Old Man.

Answer—This expression originated in THE TRIBUNE comic strip, "Moon Mullins," by Frank Willard. It occurred in an incident when Moon was thrown out of a friend's house. When the latter called him violent names (represented by stars, etc.) Mr. Mullins nonchalantly replied: "So's your old man." The saying became a popular one immediately.—Robert Weiss, 4918 Drexel boulevard, Chicago.

NOTE.—Moon has said this as reported, but according to Mr. Willard, Kayo Mullins, Moon's little brother, said it first. Early in 1924 the cartoon pictured Kayo being chastised by another kid's dad. As he departed the young Mullins hurled this final insult: "And so is your old man."

Answer—A few years ago a rather extravagant young man was attending college. His allowance ran short so he sent the following telegram home: "Dear dad, please send money. I'm broke." This wire came back: "So's your old man."—Viola Vaage, 1620 West 3d street, Dixon, Ill.

Answer—A young husband dashed into the office very late one morning, shouting: "I'm a father!" The boss looked at the clock disgustedly and replied: "So's your old man. Get to work!"—Miss Betty Hill, R. R. No. 1, Box 34, Waunakee, Wis.

Answer—Several years ago a stock company was playing in Kankakee. One afternoon the manager drank too much beer and was assisted to his room by the leading man, who also had imbibed too freely. The matinée began, and the star, who was the manager's daughter, enraged by the leading man's erratic behavior, angrily exclaimed in an audible aside: "You're drunk!" "So's your old man," yelled the maddened lead.—Jessie M. Vassar, Kankakee, Ill.

Quotation—Hell, Heaven or Hoboken by Christmas.

Answer—Spoken by Gen. John J. Pershing, commander in chief of the A. E. F. in France, during the summer of 1918, by which he meant that the Americans would do or die to end the war and be home by Christmas.—L. A. Kruse, care John Rehm, R. R. No. 5, Galena, Ill.

Quotation—Hold 'Em, Yale.

[This one is still unanswered. Are there any Yale men in the audience?]

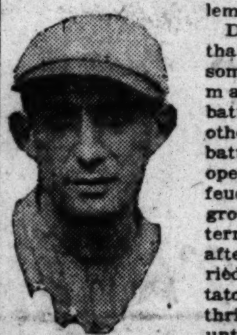
BY IRVING VAUGHN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 28.—The Cubs and Giants still are carrying on like two foes whose problem is eternal.



ART NEHF.

Drawn along by that peculiar something which makes them battle as no two other teams can battle, they reopened their old feud on the Polo grounds this afternoon. Round after round carried 20,000 spectators through thrill after thrill, until the thirteenth when a single off Pat Malone, who had dashed to the rescue of Old Art Nehf, sent the deciding tally clattering over the counter.

That last run let the Giants have the struggle by 3 to 2, but it might have been vastly different in fewer innings if the arrogant Ump Bill Klem hadn't changed his mind and bellowed foul after first ruling fair on a drive that Kiki Cuyler sailed over the left field roof with a man on in the tenth. And to make himself additionally aggravating, Klem rushed Chief McCarthy out of the picture for protesting.

Fast Fielding Saves Nehf.

It was only sensational fielding behind Nehf that let him almost duplicate the thirteen rounds he buried against his old mates exactly a week ago. He was hit hard all the way and in trouble continually, but his defense, especially three double plays, let him hold off the Giants with two runs for twelve innings. One of these slipped over in the third and the other went home in the seventh, thereby establishing a deadlock and offsetting two runs the Cubs had grabbed off in the second round, when what might have been a brilliantly pitched game on the part of Joe Genewich was ruined by a Giant error.

When the Giant thirteenth pulled around, Andy Cohen leaned into the first pitch and lined it over third for a double. O'Doul bunted a hit to the right of Nehf and the veteran hesitated a moment about making the play to first. Then he threw, but the peg was late. With runners on third and first and none out, McCarthy, watching from his place of banishment in the club house, decided there was only one thing to do. It was to summon Malone and trust that the big Irishman could blind the Giants with his speed. Pat almost did it, but couldn't hurdle Jim Welsh, who already had slashed the atmosphere with three singles.

The first man Malone had to pitch to was O'Farrell. Bob slapped a fast hopper to Maguire and Cohen was nipped trying to get home. Genewich

TUNNEY HAS FOUGHT HIS LAST FIGHT?

Just before the battle. Gene Tunney (left), the champion, meets Tom Heeney in the Madison Square Garden ring. Eleven rounds later Tunney had battered the New Zealander into submission and the referee stopped the fight. Reports are rife that Gentleman Gene has fought his last battle and will retire to the private life, a millionaire after less than two years as king of the heavyweights. Sox Continue Losing Ways; Fall Before Griffs, 8-5, 4-2

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Gala homecoming week at Comiskey park came to a close yesterday with the Sox maintaining their perfect record. They lost two games to Washington, 8 to 5 and 4 to 2, and lifted their losing streak to a well rounded half dozen.

CARL REYNOLDS.

It has come to pass that a mere lead of three or five runs means nothing to our nine. In three of six games they've lost, the boy's at intervals, have possessed plump margins. In each case they wasted no time fiddling around to lose the advantage. In each they blew the works in one terrible inning. The first game yesterday was a typical fadeout.

At the end of the fifth inning Red Faber was startled to find himself the possessor of a 5 to 2 edge. In the Washington sixth Red allowed six hits and a walk, and McCurdy tolerated a double steal. These things produced five runs, which just about took care of that game. In the second game Bob Burke of Joliet held the Sox to four hits, two each in the third and seventh, which saved the Sox the trouble of dissipating a lead, because they never had one.

Reynolds Does His Bit.

The only refreshing thing that happened during the chill afternoon, from the Chicago point of view, was the pinch hitting of the crippled Carl Reynolds. In the first game Carl batted for Crouse when the bases were full and drove in two runs with a single. In the second game he batted for Falk and tripled with Kamm on base. Lyons, who relieved him at third, scored on a sacrifice fly.

The Sox trailed 2 to 0 in the first game at the opening of the fourth. Then Metzler started things with a single to right and stopped at second when Kamm singled to left. Falk bunted and Metzler was forced at third. Cissell was safe on Bluege's boot, filling the bases. Reynolds batted for Crouse and singled to left, scoring Kamm and Falk. Faber singled to center and Cissel counted, but Lyons, running for Reynolds, was out when he overran second.

In the fifth, after Clancy and Mostil had struck out, Metzler singled and stole second. He came in when Kamm doubled to left. Falk lifted a high fly in front of the pitcher's box and it went for a hit when the Griff's got their signals mixed, Kamm scoring. Cissell then grounded out. The score was Sox, 5; Senators 2.

Sixth Inning Ruins Faber.

Then that sixth, in which Faber was nicked for five runs. Another marker, added by Cronin after two were down in the ninth, brought the score to its final status.

In the second game, with Blankenship pitching, two walks, a single and a sacrifice netted a run for the Senators in the fourth; four singles gained another in the fifth and a third was produced in the sixth on two singles and a double. Cox yielded the fourth run in the ninth. In the third, fourth, fifth and sixth innings further damage was averted by double plays.

YALE ATHLETIC REPORT SHOWS $215,000 PROFIT

New Haven, Conn., July 28.—(AP)—Athletics at Yale university are on a high plane of sportsmanship, in the opinion of Prof. George H. Nettleton who, as chairman of the board of control of the Athletic association, has given his annual report to the Yale corporation.

The report made public tonight showed that finances, the non-scouting agreement in football and friendly relations with Harvard and Princeton through the dual agreements made up the greater part of the text. As a whole the athletic year was outstanding above all others. In general operating expenses the profit balance was about $215,000 which will be applied to debt reduction or writing off items in new capital investment.

The twenty-three crews of intrepid sailors, clad in sou'westers and oilskins, faced a sloppy night on the first tack of what the weather may turn into a 500 mile journey instead of the 331 miles of straight sailing from Chicago to the head of the lake.

A breeze, almost directly north northeast, beat into the faces of the starters, straight down the true course to Point Betsie, the first objective on the Michigan shore. As a result most of the skippers laid a course east northeast toward Saugatuck, on the eastern shore of the lake, from where they will switch to a west by north course early this morning in the northeast wind still holds.

Josephine First Over Line.

Sailing in two divisions, racing and cruising, the first contingent was sent over the starting line at 4 o'clock. The bigger members of the cruising division followed five minutes later. The smaller racers started that division out at 4:30.

H. P. Burger's Josephine, a 35 foot Seawanhaka sloop from the Milwaukee Yacht club, was the first of the smaller cruising class members to cross the line after the starting gun. Half a length behind was a second member of the 35 foot Seawanhaka class, Dick Elliott's Audax, a Chicago Yacht club entry. Comet and Blanca Flor, yawls from the Chicago and Milwaukee yacht clubs; Stormy Petrel, a yacht from Jackson park, and Valdora, a Chicago Yacht club ketch followed over the line in rapid order.

Joyant and Dorello Lead.

At 4:35 p. m. the best matched entries of the race broke past the line. Baxter's "P" class sloop, Joyant, and Dwight's huge "N" class loop, Dorello, a Milwaukee Yacht club entry, were first across, followed by Purtelle's "P" class sloop, Vagabond, a newcomer to Mackinac racing. Julian Armstrong's Tecumseh, the only racing division schooner, crossed fourth in weather precisely to its liking, while Ben Carpenter's "P" class sloop Freya, and Don and Andy Smith's "Q" class sloop, Nabob, followed in order.

While Chicago and Milwaukee boats started the Chicago to Mackinac race yesterday, members of the Bay View Yacht club of Detroit started on a similar journey to Mackinac Island from Bay City, at the foot of Lake Huron. The fleets will reach the finish line about the same time.

CHAMP PLANS TO MARRY SOON, NEW YORK HEARS

Promises 'Important Announcement.'

Cutting the Deficit

NEWARK, N. J., July 28.—(AP)—Two holders of "radio ringside seats" at the Tunney-Heeney fight Thursday night, reduced Tex Rickard's loss to $155,719 by $10 today.

Leonard J. Reinhardt of East Orange, who styled himself "one of the numerous knothole spectators," mailed a check for $3.

The other was Thomas F. Burley Jr., executive secretary of the Asbury Park chamber of commerce. "That millions should be entertained at your expense is unfair, and, therefore, I enclose a check for $7 in payment for my seat, which, although located on my front porch, was in reality a good substitute for a ringside position," he wrote the promoter.

New York, July 28.—[Special.]—Rumors that Gene Tunney, world's heavyweight champion, soon will retire gained credence in boxing circles today. The titleholder is to meet newspaper men formally Monday morning at his quarters in the Hotel Biltmore, when, it is understood, he will make known his plan to forsake the ring. Reasonably safe indication of this came today from two sources close to the champion.

In this city one of Tunney's closest associates declared the champion would announce his retirement, adding that the titleholder was looking forward to an early marriage. The name of Tunney's bride-to-be was not revealed. In Greenwich, Conn., Sam Pryor, friend of Tunney, told the Associated Press that Tunney would make an announcement "of the greatest importance" next week, strengthening the belief that Tunney will quit the prize ring.

No Financial Worries.

That Tunney was planning to enter the priesthood was one report circulated. This was pointedly denied by the local friend of the champion, who reiterated that the latter plans to get married and to get away from boxing now that he has enough money to live on comfortably for the rest of his life.

Efforts to communicate with Tunney were unsuccessful. The champion was at the home of Mr. Pryor at Indian Field road, Greenwich, early in the day and in the afternoon was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard F. Gimbel at the Stamford horse show.

Billy Gibson, the champion's manager, could not or would not reveal any definite information. He indicated that Tunney would retire, yet pointed out that no one but Tunney ever really knew what Tunney would do or say from day to day.

Rickard Believes Report Is True.

Promoter Tex Rickard admitted he had heard the reports and expressed his personal belief that there was truth in them, but said he was in no position to make an official announcement because he had not heard direct from Tunney.

"I am to see Tunney tomorrow in the country, but my understanding of this meeting is that it is purely social or recreational, and not to be identified with business in any way," said Rickard. "We are to have a business meeting Monday, when Tunney may acquaint me definitely with his future plans.

"If he is to retire I don't know what will happen. Jack Dempsey could come back and reclaim the title as the previous champion, but he would have to fight the rest of the boys in a heavyweight elimination. Jack Sharkey, Paulino, Tom Heeney, Johnny Risko, Knute Hansen, and possibly Tommy Loughran are the outstanding contenders for the title, and there may be some new young fellows coming along who will command attention."

TUNNEY FIGHT FILMS SEIZED BY FEDERAL MEN

Detroit, July 28.—(AP)—John Fisher, New York aviator, surrendered to federal authorities here today after transporting films of the Heeney-Tunney fight to Detroit from New York in an airplane. Fisher turned over to authorities the film negatives. Officials were of the opinion scores of copies of the negatives had been made for local motion picture houses before Fisher surrendered them.

The flyer was released under $1,000 bonds by United States Commissioner William Hurd, who said the maximum penalty for interstate transportation of prize fight films is a $1,000 fine and one year in prison. In previous cases the government has been unable to obtain a conviction in Detroit, owing to the fact that the original film transported is not exhibited but instead the copies made after arrival.

Leo Diegel Captures Canadian Golf Title

Toronto, Ont., July 28.—(AP)—Leo Diegel, New York professional, today won the Canadian Open Golf championship for the third time. He held the title in 1924 and 1925.

Genewich Baffles Bruins After Second Inning.

died when Capt. Grimm, running desperately toward the stand, pulled in a low pop foul. Then Welsh got one that he liked and lined it to center for a single. There was an outside chance to cut down the winning run, but Wilson failed to come up with the ball in his first grab at it, so O'Doul scored unmolested.

Stephenson Starts Rally.

The Cubs started their only scoring sortie of the day when Stephenson singled to left after one was gone in the second inning. Grimm bounced to Terry and the latter figured he'd pull a corking play by whipping the ball to second to force Steve, but the throw was slightly out of line and when the ball was recaptured in left field Stephenson was on third and Grimm on second. Hartnett turned loose a single to center, Steve and Grimm running home. Beck also singled, Hartnett taking third and Beck second on the return throw, but no more runs materialized because Nehf bounced out by way of short and English flied to right.

McGraw's notables cut down the Cub lead by half in the third mainly because of the short fences that prevail close to the foul lines. Hogan opened the inning with what would have been an every day fly in the average park, but a fence only 260 feet away converted it into a triple. Genewich grounded out by way of short and Hogan hugged third. But when Welsh dumped a single in center, Hogan's 210 pounds of beef and bone rumbled across the plate. Nehf retired the next two batters without trouble.

In the fourth Lindstrom led off with a hit past third, but some deft fielding avoided complications. It was well for Nehf that his defense again came to the rescue in the sixth, when a double play averted trouble.

The Giants had to burn up three hits in the seventh to get the run that placed the argument in a 2 to 2 deadlock. Hogan pried open the chapter by singling to left. Hogan moves with the speed of a loaded truck, so O'Farrell was put on first to run for him. Genewich sacrificed. Welsh shot a single into center and O'Farrell crossed the plate. Reese also singled to center. Further trouble was side tracked only because of the agility of Maguire. Mann lifted a Texas leaguer into short right and it had the makings of a sure-fire single, but Maguire dashed back and smothered the ball. Then he whipped it to English to double Welsh, who already had rounded third.

Stephenson gave the Cubs a chance to break the tie by singling with one gone in the ninth and English offered another opening when he hit safely with one out in the tenth. This was where the Cubs laid down the verbal barrage against Ump Klem. After English had hit, Maguire shoved him up with a bunt. Cuyler stepped up and drove the first pitch high over the roof of the stand in left field. Klem crouched down and made a lot of motions indicating the drive was fair. Then, with Cuyler already around first base, Klem suddenly straightened up and bellowed that the ball was foul. After the howling of the Cubs had subsided and Boss McCarthy had gone away, Cuyler was walked and Wilson tapped to Genewich to close the inning.

Robins Outhit Reds, but Drop 7 to 3 Decision

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 28.—(AP)—Cincinnati turned back the Robins, 7 to 3, in the opening game of the series here today despite Brooklyn's advantage of 13 to 11 in hits. Both starting pitchers failed to go the limit. Bill Doak was knocked out in the seventh, while Adolfo Luque succumbed in the following frame. Cincinnati made two double plays and increased its season's total to 125. Score:

Zodiac Reaches Santander in Ocean Yacht Race

SANTANDER, Spain, July 28.—(AP)—The American yacht Zodiac, one of the two yachts unreported in the trans-Atlantic race for the king of Spain's cup, arrived here at 20 minutes and 41 seconds past 3 o'clock this afternoon. The yacht Azara, which has not finished, is reported to be dismasted.

(The yachts Guinevere, Elena, and Atlantic, racing for the King's cup, as well as the Mohawk, Nina, and Pinta, smaller craft entered for the cup given by the queen of Spain, were all in port at Santander by the night of July 25.)

CARDINALS PICK ON LOWLY PHILS; WIN TWO GAMES

Take Opener in 12th, 7-6—Cop Second, 12-2.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 28.—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals took a double-header from the Phillies today, winning the first game in twelve innings, 7 to 6, and the second by the easy margin of 12 to 2.

Chick Hafey broke up the first game with a home run in the twelfth inning and went through the second contest with five hits and a walk that gave him a record of six hits in a row.

INDIANS LOSE TO YANKS, 6-2; THEN PILE UP 9-4 WIN

Pennock and Hudlin Are Winning Pitchers.

Cleveland, O., July 28.—[Special.]—The Indians split a doubleheader with the Yankees here today, dropping the first to Herb Pennock, 6 to 2, but battering three New York pitchers for nineteen hits and a 9 to 4 victory in the second.

The teams were tied going into the ninth inning of the first game, but then the Yanks, who had managed to get only seven hits off George Uhle in the first eight innings, broke out with a four run assault.

Walberg Allows 4 Hits as Macks Get 18.

St. Louis, July 28.—(AP)—Three hurlers failed to halt the Philadelphia Athletics here today and the St. Louis Browns dropped the series opener, 13 to 4. While Crowder, Beck and Coffman were being punished for 18 hits, Walberg permitted the Browns to get only four. Five double plays by the losing nine slowed down the Athletics' pace. Score:

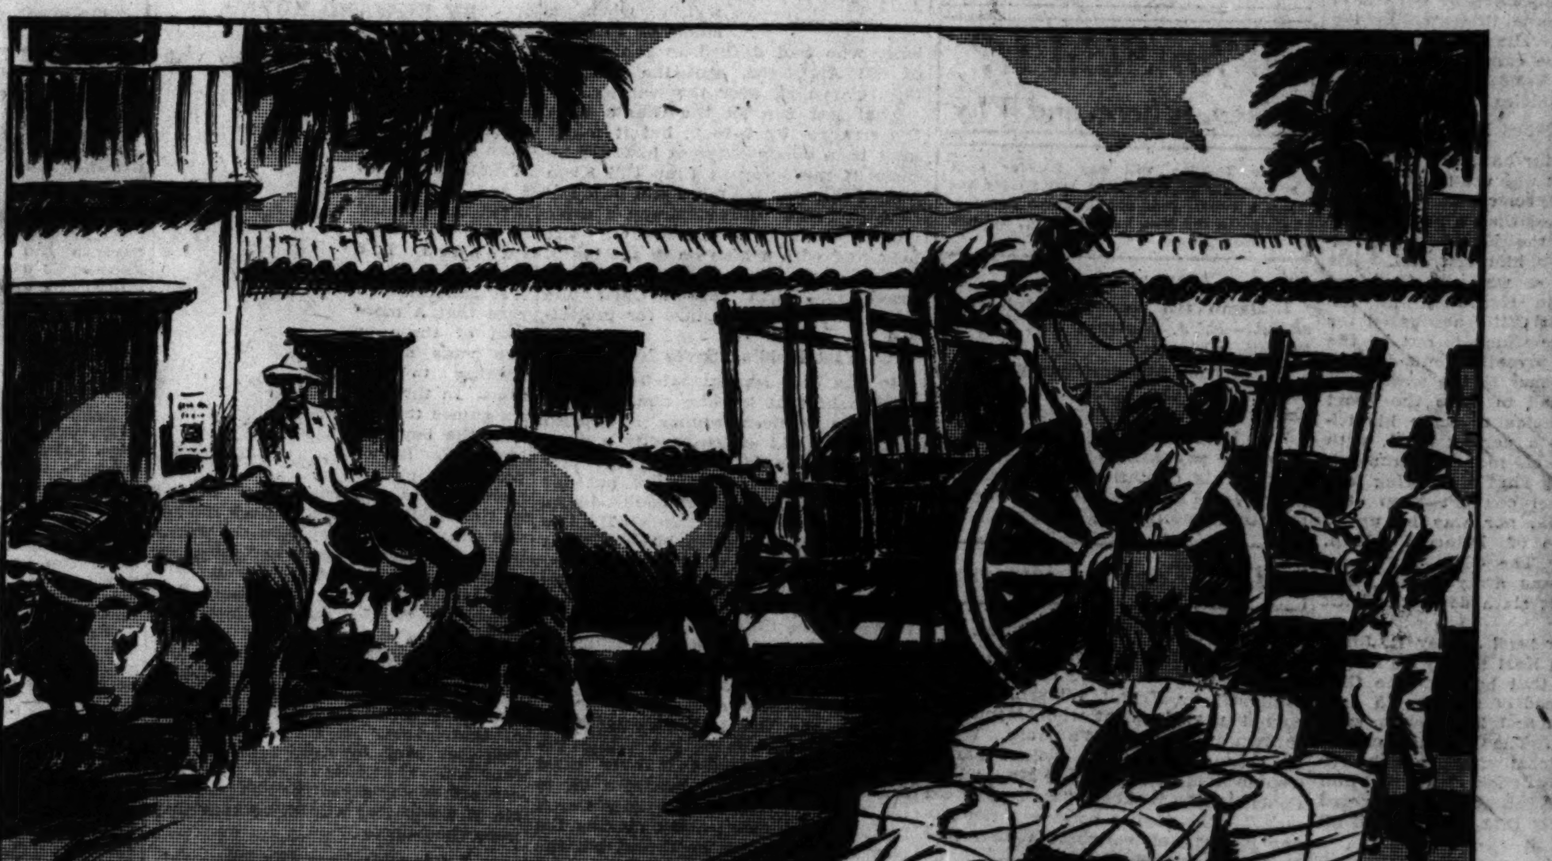
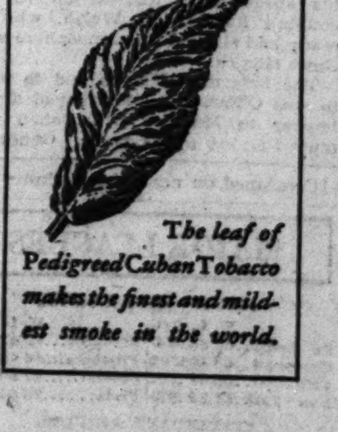
Infected Spike Wound Puts Dressen in Hospital

Cincinnati, O., July 28.—(AP)—Charles Dressen, third baseman for the Cincinnati Reds, was sent to Bethesda hospital here today with an infection of the toes and was given treatment to prevent tetanus. He will be in the hospital for several days and out of the game for two weeks or more. Dressen was spiked in a game at Philadelphia.

BIRMINGHAM NIPS GIANTS, 3-2.

The Birmingham Black Barons copped the first of a five game series from the American Giants, 3 to 2, in 11 innings yesterday. Owens scored the winning run on Salmon's single. The same teams play a twin bill today with Foster opposing Poindexter in the first game. Poindexter recently held the Giants to a no hit no run game.





Selected leaf the market never sees

Good tobacco goes to market from Cuban plantations—but the best has been already purchased. The Robt Burns fieldmen have spoken for it—men who have watched over the crop from seed-time to harvesting. They know the history of every leaf they buy—they bring to you the choice of the year's yield. You can count on a satisfying smoke with any Robt Burns—Perfecto Grande, Staples or Panatela. For in every Robt Burns there is a full Havana filler of selected—pedigreed—Cuban leaf—the finest and mildest tobacco in the world.

NATIONAL PUBLIC PARKS GOLFERS MEET TOMORROW

Annual Tourney Carded for Philadelphia.

Lacking the background of other golf championships, but the essential tournament to half of the golfers of the United States, the seventh annual national public links championship meet begins tomorrow over the Cobb's Creek park course in Philadelphia. To the millions of golfers who pay as they play it is their championship.

The national open has its parade of golfers famed from St. Andrews to Singapore, the national amateur its scores of fine golfers who don't accept money openly for their golf, but this championship has its bookkeepers and taxi drivers, mail carriers and foundry laborers to whom golf is solely a game. Few of those who play in it can do more than get up early in the morning or rush home from work at night to get in their game, to say nothing of rising at 2 or 3 o'clock Sunday morning to sign up for time at some public park.

The financial status of the players is indicated by the speed with which several of the victors have turned professional immediately after winning, but it is certain there is no more truly amateur tournament played.

As usual the course this year is rather short for championship play and depends almost entirely on natural hazards, which is proper in that it is the type of course on which most of the contestants are accustomed to play. Cobb's Creek is 6,152 yards in length with a par of 71.

At least six of the holes are "a drive and a pitch," while only two of the two shot holes demand a long iron or spoon second. The four short holes promise more in that they vary nicely in length, from the 130 yard twelfth to the 205 yard tenth, with the others 150 and 180 yards. Of the three par fives the first is easy, 462 yards, while the two on the second nine are 517 and 543 yards, not too difficult as fives and possible fours.

Douglas Park Wins Senior Track Title

Track championships of the West Chicago park commissioners' playground department were decided yesterday at Douglas park, where the home athletes won the senior championship and Holstein park captured the junior title. ARCHERS DRAW BOWS IN MIDWEST TITLE TOURNEY

The second annual midwest archery contest, being sponsored by the Chicago Archery club, opened at Washington park yesterday. Seventy-five contestants from midwestern states participated.

ILLINOIS NINE LEAVES TODAY FOR YOKOHAMA

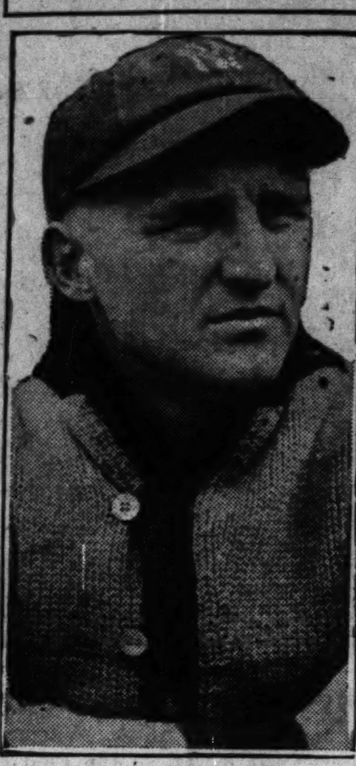
Starting on its trip to Japan, the longest journey ever taken by a University of Illinois athletic team, the Illini baseball squad will leave Chicago tonight.

Coach Carl Lundgren will bring the 15 players who have been selected to travel to the orient, to Chicago. The party will depart at 8:45 p. m. on the Burlington for St. Paul, where the first of 13 games en route to the coast will be played.

Pennock Ranks as No. 1 in Majors' List of Southpaws

Irving Vaughan, veteran major league baseball writer, has handed bouquets to the greats and condemned the misplays of others. He knows all the angles there are to the great American pastime, just who is the leading hitter, who can field the best, and which moundsmen are most effective. Mr. Vaughan is using this knowledge and his experience as a reporter of baseball to pick the ten greatest baseball players in the game today. His first article last Sunday named Gabby Hartnett, Cubs' catcher, and today he chooses the greatest southpaw and tells why. The other eight players will be named on successive Sundays in The Tribune.

BEST SOUTHPAW



HERB PENNOCK.
Yankee pitcher.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 28.—A bit better than sixteen years ago Herbert J. Pennock, fresh from the campus, came into the big league without brass bands to herald his arrival. He was just one of those many Connie Mack was daily grinding through the baseball mill in hopes of finding the one in a hundred. A frail, retiring youth with no apparent competitive spirit, he seemed destined to go nowhere. Mr. Pennock has since covered lots of ground and is still traveling at a rate that, in the writer's opinion, entitles him to be placed as No. 1 in the list of southpaw pitchers performing in the majors today.

Pennock, merely by his pitching form and aside from his effectiveness, is what can be termed the perfect southpaw. He always appears to be throwing not pitching. There is no apparent strain. He merely winds up with willowly grace and brings the ball overhand without a hitch in the entire movement. The ball just seems to roll off the ends of his fingers. No snapping of the arm to get a little more hop or hook on the ball. With few exceptions most of the real left handers of modern baseball have had these same rhythmatic characteristics. How many recalled the ease with which old Dr. White pitched.

Made Study of Pitching.

Had Pennock come into the majors placing his sole dependence on his physical attainments he probably would have gone back just as many said he'd go. But the lad whose arm didn't seem heavy enough to last nine innings made a study of pitching and he still studies. He studies every batter that faces him, not especially to learn a weakness, but to watch for some indication of the batter's intention to outsmart the man on the hill. A smart batter if bothered by a certain pitcher will frequently try some little thing such as a slight change in stance, a different grip on the bat, etc. Pennock is resourceful against such tactics.

Hitting against Pennock is not conducted with much success because he never will give you a good ball to hit at. If the batter likes 'em outside Pennock will see that he gets them inside. Or high if the batter happens to be a low ball clouter. This, of course, is a matter of control which in the last analysis is 75 per cent of pitching. All pitchers, except those who just bowl the ball through by brute strength, aim to do the same as Pennock has been doing and still does, but few can aim a ball as he can aim it and still fewer are as crafty as he at his work.

Pennock has three annoying items to link up his control. He can heave a fast ball that still has quite a hop for a man of his years. He can throw a slow curve that seems to sweep around and come from the direction of first base. And quite frequently he will toss you a change of pace ball that, coming up to the batter looks almost the same as his curve, but it isn't. It's a "screw ball" that breaks away from a right handed hitter. It is the same ball that in the days of Christy Mathewson was known as the "fadeaway."

Pennock, in his fifteen years in major league baseball, has pitched for four teams, winning 173 games and losing 122. His major league record:

Year.	Club.	League.	W.	L.
1912	Philadelphia	American	1	2
1913	Philadelphia	American	1	1
1914	Philadelphia	American	11	4

ABE ESPINOSA WINS WESTERN OPEN GOLF MEET

Scores 291; Farrell 2d by 3 Strokes.

open tournament a few weeks ago, picked up four of the seven strokes he had been in arrears to Abe, he was out of it almost before he started. For Abe refused to run up a score near the 80s as did the leaders in the national. The real duel was between the brothers Espinosa.

Abe started in the morning with a one shot advantage over his brother, and he increased it to four strokes on the third round by turning in a perfect 72. Al still held second place, three shots better than Farrell, who had turned in another par 72 in the morning, which moved him into third place but failed to gain him a stroke on little Abe.

At one time the diminutive Abe appeared as if he might slip was on the first few holes in the afternoon when he lost three shots to par on the first four holes. He made up one of them with a birdie on the ninth, but Al, who had started some time after the Columbian pro, was playing steady golf and reached the turn in 36. That was even par and he had picked up two of the four strokes he needed to tie.

Al Slips on Last Nine.

But on the home nine the pace was reversed because it was Abe who kept steadily plugging along and Al who tossed shots to the wind. He kept even with Abe's card for three holes, lost one shot on the thirteenth and two on the fourteenth. Five shots behind with four holes to go meant his chances had vanished.

Of the others who were close up at the end of 36 holes, Harry Hampton had slipped with a 79 on the third round, Jim Foulis dropped by the wayside with 78, and R. W. Treacy of Milwaukee had 77.

Farrell's golf was the best of the day, though Francis Gallett of Milwaukee galloped in among the last of the finishers with a round of 34—37—71 for the day's low card. Johnny was steadily knocking in pars, with enough birdies to counteract his few mistakes, but the big lead Abe Espinosa had taken with his 74 and course record 69 in the first two rounds, combined with his par 72 in the third round, were too much to overcome. Leading scores follow:

Jackson Park Woman Wins County Golf

Putting superlatively when there was a premium on accurate greenswork, Mrs. F. S. Fitz-Gibbon yesterday won the women's county open golf championship. She defeated her Jackson Park club sister, Mrs. Edith Wallace, 1 up, in an 18 hole match over their home course.

Although Mrs. Fitz-Gibbon wasn't able to win a hole until the ninth, her superior putting won her four holes and the match on the home nine. At other times, however, her putting was spotty.

Mrs. Wallace won three of the first eight holes and dropped the ninth to lead, 2 up, at the turn. She won the second with good iron shots, took the fifth when her opponent three-putted the greens, and won the seventh with a long putt for a birdie four. A fine spoon effort and a 20 foot putt gave Mrs. Fitz-Gibbon the ninth.

Coming in, Mrs. Wallace drove two balls into the water at the eleventh and picked up. She also lost the twelfth and fourteenth when Mrs. Fitz-Gibbon sank long putts and won the fifteenth when Mrs. Fitz-Gibbon three-putted, and the match was all even.

Another long putt gave the latter her winning margin at the sixteenth as the final two holes were halved. Their cards:

MRS. FITZ-GIBBON: Out—4 6 4 5 6 4 5 4 3—42.
MRS. WALLACE: Out—5 5 4 5 5 4 4 4—40.
MRS. FITZ-GIBBON: In—4 6 4 5 5 7 5 4 5—44—86.
MRS. WALLACE: In—4 x 5 5 4 5 4 6 5—xx—xx.

ON LOCAL LINKS

SOME snappy golf featured the club championship play at Calumet yesterday, all of the matches being brilliantly and bitterly fought and two of them going to extra greens. Lee M. Thiltges defeated Elmer A. Eulass, two up, and Joe Bour defeated W. A. Burns, 4 and 3. Thomas A. Smoot edged out J. E. Rowland, one up, at the nineteenth, and Oscar Van Wormer defeated A. W. Bristol at the twentieth green. In the ball sweepstakes R. Jacobsen, 82—5—77, led class A; B. R. Wagner, 91—16—75, led class B, and L. R. Hayes, 103—29—74, topped class C.

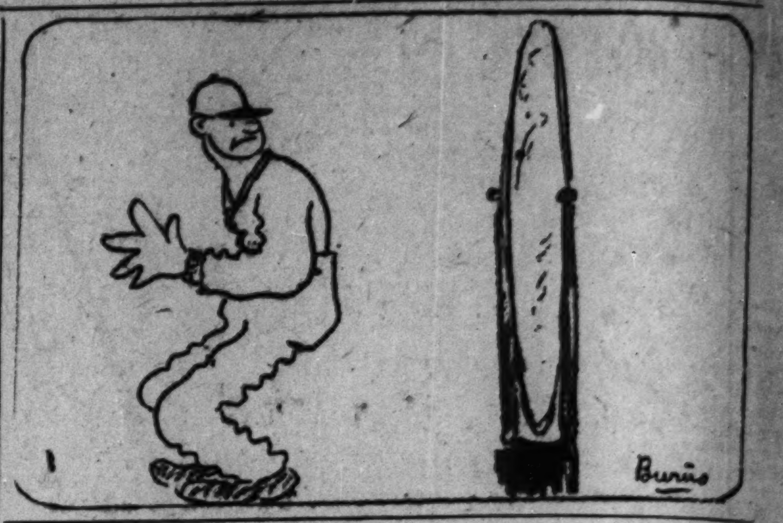
Here's a Tip, Girls—Knitted Undershirt Might Tickle Baseball Player's Fancy

BY EDWARD BURNS.



We always hate to disappoint the writer of a worthy letter when the writer shows he or she has a heart of gold and wants to do something big for ball players. But there are times when we just have to sprinkle ice water. There's the case of "Dolly," for instance. Here's Dolly's letter:

"Mister: A bunch of us girls have been noticing the red undershirts affected on the field by Fredide Lindstrom, Harry McCurdy, Mark Koenig, Louie Durocher and several others and the idea occurred to us that we would like to knit nice new red shirts for these boys and others in the baseball business.

"I was a mere slip of a girl when the world war was raging, but I remember some of the cunning things we knitted and sewed for soldiers. It struck me as a sweet sentiment that should not have died with the armistice, and we want you to help us get started on similar work for ball players. There would be no need of knitting war helmets, as we did in war times, but practically everything else—underclothes, night shirts, bathrobes, socks, etc.—would be useful.

"It would not be necessary for you to furnish us with specific sizes for individual athletes, as we girls like to knit at random—so, you see, the boys could pick their stuff after they get it. Whatdyesay, mister?

[Signed] "Dolly."

Do you know, Dolly, ball players have the funniest notions about their undershirts! They consider them more as good luck charms than garments, and I am afraid you'd have a hard time getting athletes to shed the harness which ofttimes will be found to have been in their possession since they had their first glass of beer in the minor leagues.

You remember Slim Sallee, don't you, Dolly? Well, Slim never would pitch a crucial game without his favorite full length union suit. No matter how hot the day, Slim could not do his best work without those long drawers clinging affectionately to his nether limbs.

There are other players who have worn their undershirts, which, in addition to becoming a bit stiff, became tattered and torn till they hardly were recognizable as clothing. And do you think these players bury such shirts? Not on your life. They sew shreds of the old garments on the new. How's that for superstition, Dolly?

So you see, young woman, what you have to contend with in so far as undershirts are concerned. But we're going to help you just the same.

Now, most ball players don't work in the winter time—just hunt and fish. Why don't you girls knit mittens for all the fellows, leaving a hole for the trigger finger? And you were wrong when you said no ball player would want a nice warm helmet. You wouldn't have to make helmets for everybody, though. There's Alex Metzler and Art Nehf, for instance. Alex lives in Fresno and Art in Phoenix. We believe both of these places are below sea level. Anyhow, folks don't wear helmets or ear muffs there.

$5,000 PURSE ON OPENING CARD AT HAWTHORNE OVAL

Racing Shifts to West Side Tomorrow.

This is another moving day for the Chicago turf colony.

The summer season ended at Lincoln Fields yesterday. When the fields are sent away tomorrow afternoon the Hawthorne track, transformed and better equipped to handle the crowd than ever before, will be the scene of activity.

With the $5,000 Speed handicap as the feature and two other high class allowance races on the program the Hawthorne opening will likely attract one of the largest crowds that ever has packed its way into the old west side track.

President John C. Schank of the Chicago Business Men's Racing association, and his associates believe the Hawthorne meeting will, in the point of paid attendance, be the largest ever held in the Chicago district.

Many Improvements Made.

The stands and lawns have been enlarged to handle the increased crowds, a new clubhouse has sprung up since last year, the paddock has been enlarged, and a paddock sun pavilion added to the track for the fans who like to be half way down the stretch as the fields thunder home.

In tomorrow's Speed handicap 26 were named in the overnight entries. The E. B. McLean entry of Prince of Wales, Greenock, Algol, and Sunny Cloud was made the favorite, although there will be much support for the Camden pair of Oh Susanna and Nor' Easter. The Stuyvesant Peabody entry of T. S. Jordan and Mino also will come up for much backing.

In the Greater Chicago purse at a mile and a sixteenth such noted performers as Flat Iron, Sir Harry, Chicago, Crystal Pennant, and Hydromel were named. The other allowance race engages 2 year olds, including some of the best that have been racing in the west this year.

Saratoga Opens Tomorrow.

While the scene of the Chicago racing shifts to Hawthorne tomorrow, there will also come an opening in New York that will hold much interest in this section.

The Saratoga Springs season opens in New York, and as it is at this meeting that Reigh Count, the Chicago winner of the Kentucky Derby, expects to stage his comeback, all eyes will be turned toward the east for news of the showing he makes.

Post time at Hawthorne each afternoon will be at 2:30 o'clock and there will be the usual seven races on each day's program.

and shuffled about, was a nose back in third place, the finish being one of the real thrillers of the summer season at Lincoln Fields, which came to a close with the running of today's card.

Jockey Pichon rode Sir Harry to victory and engaged in so much rough riding coming down the stretch in which he crowded and pinched off Chicago that he drew a ten day suspension from the stewards, but the official placing was allowed to stand.

In the early part of the battle Sir Harry was running last in the small field of five, with Golden Racket in the lead and Chicago second. The real struggle came as they headed into the stretch. Sir Harry came with a brilliant rush on the outside. It carried him to the lead and as he raced up he cut across in front of Chicago and Dunmore, making it impossible for either to come on and head him.

Sir Harry was a long shot, paying $16.88 to win, while Chicago had been made the favorite at almost even money. Sir Harry broke the track record when he ran the mile and a furlong in 1:50 flat.

Long Shot Triumphs.

Houston paying $121.70 for each two dollars invested galloped home the winner in the six furlongs third race. He beat Two Dans owned by J. J. Coughlin by half a length in a furious drive down the stretch in which MacMaxim was also close up and in third place.

DETROIT EXPECTS RECORD CROWD AT M'LARNIN FIGHT

Detroit, Mich., July 28.—With Jimmy McLarnin and Stanislaus Loayza, principals in the lightweight battle to be staged at Olympia here Thursday night, both on the scene and hard at work in their outdoor training camps, predictions were made today that all records for fight attendance in Detroit will be smashed when the two title contenders meet.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK, July 28.—Observing many of the financiers and journeymen fighters of the uplift profession going about in golf bloomers these days, I am reminded that it was only a few years ago that one of the pioneer golfers of the cauliflower trade explained the game of golf in this manner:

"Well," he said, "this golf idea is like this. You take a thing like a cane and you take a sock at a little ball about half the size of a pool ball. You sock it at a hole about the size of a pool pocket, about two furlongs away. And the guy that takes the most socks, why the other guy wins."

Since then Mr. Jack Kearns has been measured for bloomers and has turned in cards of 80 or less; Mr. Leo P. Flynn has scarred the verdure of many meadows conquering the nineties and golf has been shot with varying proficiency by George L. Rickard, Gene Tunney, William H. Dempsey, Jack Delaney, and Billy Wallace, the lightweight, which last named gladiator, in fact, has neglected his prize fighting in futile thrashings intended to improve a very terrible game of golf.

The leg-of-mutton pants of the fairway, formerly regarded as the uniform of senility or, anyway, of effeteness, have become de rigeur in the prize fighters' training camps and there is talk of mashie niblicks now where formerly there was only talk of cauliflowers.

I do not know precisely what I am getting at, but I have an idea that an era has dawned, as the orators say, either in pugilism or in golf, or both. I was not in circulation at the time when John L. Sullivan, Robert Fitzsimmons, Tom Sharkey and others of their blunt and sturdy kind were training for their prize fights, but from what I have read I derive a suspicion that anybody who showed up wearing short pants would have been looked upon in a certain way.

Rugged men, they were, and extremely HE, who wore firemen's suspenders outside of striped sweaters stuffed into their pants and they took their rum neat from the jug, hid lizards in the beds and tore meat with their fingers.

But at Dempsey's latter camps, at Tunney's and at Delaney's, golf pants have been the uniform of the day and the rattle of the irons in the quivver has largely superceded the rattle and click of the ivory chips and the ivory cubes.

At Speculator, N. Y., when Tunney was preparing for the affair with Thomas Heeney, there was a portable practice green on the verandah where Will Gibson, Billy Wallace and the sparring partners putted for quarters in the evening. There were nice ladies sitting by in the wicker rockers, smoking their cigarets and the scene and the conversation were quite elegant, suggesting tea time at the country club rather than the pause in the day's occupations in the training joint of a heavyweight champion.

As it does not appear that the prize fighters have lowered the social tone of golf it must be that golf has elevated the social tone of prize fighting. Shakespeare has been given conspicuous credit for this, but I would give St. Andrew credit for an assist on the play.

OLYMPIC GAMES OPENED; FRENCH, DUTCH WRANGLE

in and Consul General Charles L. Hoover were among the American officials present, and the maharajah of Kashmir and Nawab Sahib of Palanpur were there, too.

Herman Fischer, superintendent of playgrounds in Chicago, arrived today to present Chicago's invitation to European athletes to participate in the 1933 world's fair athletic events. It developed that Mayor Thompson's handsomely engraved invitation was addressed to the wrong man, so Mr. Fischer and THE TRIBUNE correspondent spent the day trying to get a Dutch engraver to scratch in the correct name. It will be presented formally to the International Olympic committee Thursday.

Speculation today favored the Americans to win the track and field championship. Finland was chosen to capture the runnerup position, with third place a toss up between France, Germany, and Sweden. The games will continue through to the end of the week, starting tomorrow.

Hahn Faces Opposition.

The Germans are expected to press the Yanks the hardest in the two dashes. Corts equaled the world's record of 10 2-5 seconds at Dusseldorf a few weeks ago for the 100 meters [109.36 yards], while Houben and Kornig trailed a fifth of a second slower. Legge of South Africa is another contender who has done it in 10 3-5.

E. Morgan Taylor, United States entry, appears to be in a class by himself in the 400 meters [437.45 yards] hurdles, though Petterson, Burghley and Facelli of Italy have done the distance recently in 53.9 seconds.

Lloyd Hahn, the Boston A. A. runner, will meet great competition in the 800 meter event. Seraphin Martin, the Frenchman, who a fortnight ago hung up a world record of 1 minute 50 3-5 seconds, Paul Martin, the Swiss, who had done it in 1 minute 52 seconds, and Lowe, the 1924 champion, will be there to give him trouble.

Dr. Peltzer seemed definitely out, but Finland has Borg and Larva, who defeated Paavo Nurmi in the Finnish trials in close to world record time. Nurmi should win the 5,000 meter [5,468.11 yards] event, with Willie Ritola second, and this order probably will be reversed in the 10,000 meter [10,936.23 yards] run.

U. S. Favored in Jumps.

In the field events the United States is generally conceded the vault and the broad and high jumps, though Menard of France did 6 feet 5 inches in the high jump recently.

Houser will have difficulty repeating his double win in the Paris Olympics. Hirschfeld of Germany, who was just awarded the new world mark of 51 feet 9⅝ inches for the shot put, tossed it 52 feet in the German tryouts the other day, and Hoffmeister of Germany, threw the discus 160 feet, which is 2 feet better than Houser's mark.

Awarding of the Olympic winter sports to the United States in 1932 was announced by the international committee today. The scene of the winter sports, it was understood, will be the Tahoe mountains of northern California or Lake Placid, N. Y. The other Olympic competitions for 1932 were awarded to Los Angeles some time ago. Gen. Charles H. Sherrill, U. S. representative, strongly urged the awarding of the winter sports to America before the committee and it was following his argument that the action was taken.

Horsemen Play Cantigny Polo Quartet Today

Cantigny and the Four Horsemen of Oak Brook will play for the polo championship of Du Page county and the Tin Can polo trophy this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Oak Brook field, West Twenty-second street and York road. These two teams, which are the fastest polo aggregations in this section of the country, have met three times this year. In the first battle the Four Horsemen won, 10 goals to 6. The second contest was won by Cantigny, 9 to 6, and the third, played last Thursday, was a 7 to 7 tie.

The teams are well matched in handicaps. As they line up this afternoon they will be thirteen goal teams. Col. R. R. McCormick, back on the Four Horsemen, will not start the contest, as he has an injured wrist, but probably will get into the game for several periods.

The field is in better condition than any in the country, as heavy rains have prevented the playing of all but three games scheduled for it this season. If the weather permits, the series of games scheduled by the Oak Brook club will be run off on week days and Sundays until the first of October. The lineup:

Carl Crawford	No. 2	M.Corning [C.]

TANFORAN TRACK TO REOPEN OCT. 13 FOR 20 DAY MEET

San Francisco, Cal., July 28.—(AP)—Tanforan track, famed in the early days as the center of horse racing in California, again is to resound to the beat of ponies' hoofs.

Announcement was made today that the track, near the city limits of San Francisco, will be opened next fall under the direction of James "Sunny Jim" Coffroth, former San Francisco boxing promoter and, since 1916, part owner and director general of the race track at Tia Juana, Mex.

The Tanforan meet will be of twenty days duration, from Oct. 13 to Nov. 3, and will be a non-betting proposition. Betting is illegal in California.

AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question T. A. Day, 423 Wisconsin avenue, Oak Park, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Did the United States Lawn Tennis association act wisely in reinstating Bill Tilden for the Davis cup matches?

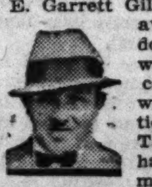
The Answers.

Arthur Cluett, 6820 Indiana avenue, credit insurance — Yes, inasmuch as France requested that he be reinstated, I feel it will tend to increase good will between France and this country. The amateur rules seem too severe and Tilden, as our leading player, is the chief entry when he skates too near the border line.

Arthur Frank, 35 East Wacker drive, salesman — I believe so. I do not believe that writing for a newspaper should be considered as infringing upon a man's career as an amateur tennis player, for by this work he is not receiving money directly for playing tennis. That is drawing the line too fine. Amateur athletes should be allowed to make money on the side once they become famous enough to do so.

Ray Brennan, 360 North Michigan avenue, engineer — Yes, they did, but after all the association did not reinstate him. One certain member of the commission took it upon himself to reinstate him. In my opinion the lawn tennis association always has been unfairly severe with Tilden.

Leonard Unson, 8146 Harvard avenue, painter — Yes. As I understand it, all that Tilden did was to write a series of articles about tennis. Writing articles tennis is not playing about tennis is not playing professional tennis, so I do not see where he violated amateur tennis rules. The lawn tennis association seems too dictatorial with the players. Amateur athletes have to make a living in some manner.



E. Garrett Gill, 4520 North Clifton avenue, decorator — I do not see any reason why they should have condemned Tilden for writing instructive articles about tennis. They might better have voted him a medal for the good publicity tennis received through him. The association should permit the players to earn an honest dollar by any side work they may find desirable.

ARGENTINES NIP YANKS, 11 TO 9, IN HARD POLO TILT

Rumson, N. J., July 28.—[Special.]—Argentina's polo team ran into some hard, aggressive polo here on the part of a 22 goal American team and had something of a fight on its hands before it managed to win out in its final game of the Rumson training period.

The South Americans, after trailing at as wide a margin as 4 goals to 0 in the middle of the third period, came back to pull out a victory over a Rumson team, 11 to 9.

Lined up against the Argentines was Capt. Charles A. Wilkinson, the brilliant Army No. 1 and seven goal player. Behind him were three five goal players, who all played well up to their handicaps throughout the match. They were Harold E. Talbott Jr., Gerald Balding, and Benjamin Gatins, playing in that order.

Annual Western Net Open Starts at Kewanee Aug. 22

Kewanee, Ill., July 28.—[Special.]—The annual western Illinois open tennis tournament will be held at the Midland country club here Aug. 22, 23, and 24, it was announced today.

Rain Halts Doubles Play for Davis Cup

Davis Raps Tilden

DENVER, Colo., July 28—(AP)—Dwight F. Davis, secretary of war and donor of the historic Davis cup, said here today that in his opinion William T. Tilden II., captain of the Davis cup team now in France, "probably is guilty of professionalism and should be barred from amateur competition."

PARIS, July 28.—A sudden rain squall caused the postponement of the Davis cup doubles at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon after the crowd waited through the downpour for two hours and a half for play to resume.

France was leading, 3-2, in the first set when the match was abandoned until tomorrow, and from the ten minutes play this afternoon the French seem to hold a decided advantage.

Big Bill Tilden and Francis Hunter were substituted for Johnny Hennessy and George Lott after the former's defeat by Henri Cochet yesterday, and Cochet paired with Jean Borotra instead of Jacques Brugnon, originally named on the French team.

Borotra was the particularly bright star in today's play, and the bounding Basque performed miraculous shots all over the courts and was ably backed up by Cochet.

Miss Ryan and Partner Trim German Doubles Team

PFORZHEIM, Germany, July 28.—(AP)—Paired with Mrs. Partridge of England, Miss Elizabeth Ryan of California defeated Frau Jakobini and Fraulein Dommenda in the woman's doubles of the international tennis tournament here today. The scores were 6—0, 6—1.

COLLEGE GRID STARS CLASH IN RING THURSDAY

Marriner - Warren Bout Tops Week's Schedule.

LES MARRINER.

Two former university football players, Les Marriner of Illinois and Ad Warren of North Carolina, will clash in the windup of Promoter James C. Mullen's boxing show at the Mills stadium on Thursday night. The fight will be the feature of the four ring shows listed for Chicago this week.

Promoter Mique Malloy has postponed the Shuffle Callahan-Haakon Hansen fight scheduled for Midway Gardens tomorrow night and in its place will stage ten bouts of four rounds each. Promoter Art has arranged a double windup for his show at the Hippodrome on Tuesday night.

Warren and Marriner frequently have been mentioned as probable opponents for Gene Tunney within another year. Each has been well handled by his managers. Neither has been overmatched and in most cases has been sent against inferior fighters. This "build-up" process brought Dempsey, Berlenbach, Firpo and many others into the fistic spotlight.

Marriner Has Perfect Record.

Marriner and Warren have won most of their fights by knockouts. Les has stopped every opponent he has met since he entered the professional ranks. Ad has engaged in a dozen pro fights and has won nine by knockouts. He won the decisions in the other three.

Both played at tackle on their football teams. In addition to playing football at North Carolina, Warren was captain of his school's boxing team, and was a member of the wrestling team. Marriner is in active training here, and Warren will arrive today.

Marty Gallagher, Washington, D. C., heavyweight, will meet Tom Simonich of Cleveland in the five round semi-windup. The other fights will be between Jimmy Bean and Jimmy Darrah, Buzz Griffiths, a brother of Tuffy, and Marshall Leach, Owen Phelps and K. O. White, Red Vickery and Mickey McFarland, and Mike Terry and Jackie Moore.

Showers to Fight Sherrod.

Roger O'Brien, west side lightweight who stopped Jackie London in one round at the Mills stadium last Thursday, will be one of the headliners at the Midway Gardens tomorrow night.

MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

POOR MANNERS CROP OUT WHERE THE WEST BEGINS

Traffic Discourtesy Seems to Rise in Alleghenies.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.

An approximation of good manners and courtesy among automobile drivers can be achieved.

The basis of this rather bold statement is the fact that in some localities it has been achieved.

Experience in driving several thousand miles both east and west in the last month, leads to a sound conclusion that such a thing as good manners in automobile traffic exists.

Evidence of the existence of a general courteous deportment among drivers, both passenger car and truck, in the Chicago area, is lacking. In fact it is widely conceded that bad manners and discourtesy in traffic in this region is one of the most noticeably characteristics of Chicago motoring circles.

During a fortnight of continuous driving through every conceivable phase of motor traffic in the New York area, in New England and in lower Canada, breaches of ordinary courtesy observed between drivers were so few as to be startling when, occasionally, they occurred.

Helps Speed Up Traffic.

Orderly procedure in traffic, with due regard to the rights of others, has not had the effect of slowing traffic. On the other hand traffic officials state that careful checking indicates that the automobile movement is more rapid. It is also much less dangerous. On the side of safety it may be said that so far as observation goes, fender smashing, front and rear colliding and side swiping, as a general practice, have gone into the discard in the heaviest traffic area of the United States.

In the eastern cities and states the various agencies of agitation have been pounding away at the idea of good manners for years, and the campaigns have finally achieved results. The results are not 100 per cent elimination of bad manners, but discourteous conduct is becoming more infrequent, and the curve of preventable accidents in automobile traffic perceptibly is bent downward.

When it is considered that New York's traffic movement involves a million automobiles a day to something like 600,000 in Chicago, and that Chicago's area of movement is many times the size of that existing in New York, the results of the good manners movement may be appreciated. The same holds good in the Boston area so far as this instance of observation is concerned.

Not a Wild Scramble.

"In the course of time we have apparently altered the status of motoring from something bordering on the characteristics of the rush attending a farmers' picnic or a hog calling contest, to a calm, reasonable transportation activity," Phil Hoyt, secretary of the New York traffic bureau, observed.

"The driver who cuts in and out habitually and pokes the nose of his car ahead of his neighbor to save a second of time, which he loses at the next light, gradually is becoming extinct.

"In city traffic the movement is becoming more orderly each year. That quality is helping to speed the movement and it is reducing traffic accidents. It has resulted in traffic separating itself into the lines that hurry and the lines which plug along. Our checks have shown that little difference in time, actually, exists between the time of the hurrier and the time of the plugger, when destinations are considered.

Speed Without Offense.

"There are units of traffic which, in the nature of their functions, must be energetic and aggressive in their movements. These units look for 'breaks' of a favorable nature and take advantage of them. But units of this type function without offending unnecessarily the other units of traffic, and do not cause accidents because the drivers are competent and expert. All is not yet perfect, but good manners are becoming more widely prevalent."

From all observations made, it is apparent that the brusque, inconsiderate, and sometimes insolent driver begins to make his appearance to a westbound traveler, in the region of Pittsburgh. From this point westward the objectionable type seems to multiply, until it seems as if he were in the majority by the time the sector between South Bend and Chicago is reached.

Narrow roads and lack of more nearly perfect traffic facilities may have something to do with the situation. Some attribute the condition to the crudeness and roughness commonly attributed to the westerner as a class, but this could not apply to Chicago, Cleveland, Toledo, and similar centers of the region.

"Just plain carelessness and thoughtlessness," was the comment of Walter Funnel, secretary of the Long Island chamber of commerce, who discussed improvement of manners in Long Island traffic, as compared with the impulsive and inconsiderate characteristics manifested in the west.

"The automobile, as a mass problem, is newer in western areas. Time will bring about wonders. The driving public there is bound to learn that it doesn't have to do all its driving in one day or one week. It will realize, eventually, that time goes on and on and on, and that miles will yet be ahead of us when we are grandfathers."

Removal of Snowdrifts Regular Minnesota Job

Year around travel on Minnesota's highways has placed the snow banks alongside the mudhole as a major problem in road work, according to D. L. Motl, assistant maintenance engineer, state highway department. "However," Mr. Motl said, "the mudhole has been quite largely conquered and in comparison to it the snowbank is insignificant."

After years of delay the ribbon of concrete to the northwest has reached out to a distance which makes a circle tour into mid-southern Wisconsin possible. Badger route 83, an extension of the Milwaukee avenue road, now is complete to Burlington, Wis., which permits travel from Chicago to that city to have another way back. From Burlington the week-ender may go east to Racine and down the lake shore, or he may turn south on the Waukegan road extension and come in by way of Glenview.

SENTIMENT FOR WIDER RADIALS SHOWN IN STATE

McHenry Inidcated as Active Co-Worker.

The proposal that seven of the main traveled radial roads out of Chicago be widened to 40 feet for a distance of 100 miles, is meeting with general approval throughout the region which would be served by such facilities.

From Peoria, Dixon, Milwaukee, Rock Island, and other points included in the prospectus come articulate expressions on the subject, and it appears that far from being an enterprise in which Chicago and Cook county alone are interested, it is one in which the balance of the state feels there is immediate importance.

Although no movement by the sponsor of the plan, the Chicago Motor club, has reached out along the ribbon of concrete known as state highway No. 19, interest is being expressed by Harvard citizens and the Herald discusses it editorially. In an article recently published it says:

"Planners of the improved highways," it says, "suggest that McHenry county lend all possible assistance in the road building program.

County a Neighbor.

"The fact that McHenry county is a near neighbor of Cook county and Chicago should actuate the citizenry of this county to coöperate in the road widening undertaking which means much to McHenry county. Naturally supervisors and mayors and aldermen will be sought for coöperation first.

"In any event McHenry county should not lose sight of the importance of the wider state highway. The vast population of Chicago is demanding wider pavements and it will get them in due time. The superhighway as it is termed is developing in all parts of the country.

Narrow Roads Obsolete.

"Under modern traffic conditions, the 18 foot concrete highway is already obsolete.

"Motorists find no pleasure in risking their lives and property while bucking trucks and busses on narrow pavements. With motorists keen for wider highways, it will be easy to bring about favorable action in McHenry county toward this great improvement, which means that within a short time a portion of McHenry county at least will become a part of this great Chicago so far as housing many of its citizens.

"Residents of the metropolis will come to McHenry county, buy farms and in time enroll as citizens of the county. The marvelous growth of Chicago spells no other word than the taking over of a considerable part of this county.

Still Wider Highways.

"Instead of 40 foot state highways, the time is not far distant when Chicago will require highways 200 feet wide to care for the immense traffic in and out of that growing city. The development of trucking and the handling of a vast tonnage of building and other supplies by motor suggest no other method of transportation than superhighways.

"No county is any greater than its facilities for moving persons and freight. McHenry county is entirely within the 100 mile radius of Chicago which is stressing its energies for a wider highways program. This will mean everything to McHenry county in the way of transportation and closer proximity to Chicago, destined to be the largest city in the United States."

EXHIBIT BUICK'S NEW MODELS AT SEVEN HOTELS

Simultaneously with the unveiling of the new Buick Silver anniversary models in dealers' salesrooms in Chicago and suburbs, displays arranged by the Chicago branch and associated dealers will be opened in seven hotel lobbies throughout the city.

Showings of the Buick five passenger brougham will be held in the Stevens, Drake, Sherman and Edgewater Beach hotels. The seven passenger sedan will be shown in the Congress, Palmer House and Sheridan-Plaza hotels, and a larger exhibit comprising the seven passenger sedan, five passenger sedan and the special coupe will be held at Guyon's Paradise ballroom.

The hotel exhibits opened yesterday morning and will continue through the week.

In order to handle the demands of the Chicago branch territory for automobiles and service Buick has opened, C. F. Yonkers, branch manager announced, a modern warehouse and parts service depot that is one of the finest buildings for the purpose in the country. It is located at West 65th street and Lavergne avenue and is equipped for receiving and distribution, and storing and handling of parts.

PARKING SPACE FOR 10,000 CARS READY AT RODEO

Free parking space for 10,000 automobiles is available adjoining Soldiers' field stadium, it was announced yesterday for the benefit of motorists who will drive to the Chicago Rodeo between now and Aug. 5.

The big parking spaces are in Grant park immediately south and east of the stadium in which the cowboy contests are to be held. These parking spaces are conveniently near the main entrance which will be at the south end of the stadium during the rodeo.

This accommodation is particularly beneficial for the spectators from out of town. At last year's Chicago rodeo there were 50,000 spectators who motored in from other states and communities. With improved motor drives this year a larger crowd is expected to drive to the rodeo.

Parking and protection of the cars will be under the charge of the South Park police. All viaducts between Randolph and Twenty-second streets give access to the park motor highways passing the stadium.

ALASKA FINDS LITTLE GRIEF IN MOTOR TRAFFIC

Motoring in Nome, Alaska, has its limitations.

There are only 100 miles of highway and roads in the vicinity and for six months of the year it is too cold to enjoy automobiling.

Nevertheless there are some delightful features about even the winter, for the rivers freeze over solid and make endless miles of highways for the Nome citizens and there are no traffic problems to worry those who skid around on the slippery ice of the river roads.

At least this is the report of F. H. G. Gibson, assistant United States attorney at Nome, who recently came to the States to purchase a superheated car.

According to Gibson there are eighty cars in Nome to a population of about 800. There are only 100 miles of roadways, but there also are few reckless drivers and no hampering stop signal systems.

ELEVATED MOTOR HIGHWAY LATEST N.Y. ACHIEVEMENT

Plan Similar to Proposed Roosevelt Road.

New York, July 28.—[Special.]—A job comparable to the proposed building of an elevated motorway from the lake to the west suburban limits over Roosevelt road in Chicago is approaching a construction stage in New York City.

This is the building of an elevated motor road along the west shore of Manhattan, above the New York Central tracks, from the foot of Riverside drive at 72d street to the lower end of the island—at least as far as Canal street, to connect with the entrance to the vehicular tunnel under the Hudson connecting with New Jersey.

The project has been given some acceleration by the reports of the traffic handled by the tunnel despite congested and crowded approaches on the New York side. These reports show that the tunnel handled 3,650,918 vehicles in the six months just past at a substantial toll charge. The volume is more than double the estimates used in the promotion of the project.

Chicago's Job Easier.

The Roosevelt road improvement has been proposed as a means for providing Chicago with one high speed, unintersected motorway from east to west at a minimum of expense and effort.

Elmer Rich, president of the South Central association, first advanced this plan as a start for the traffic development which must be accomplished before the world's fair in 1933, if Chicago hopes to achieve the best results from such an enterprise.

Through the South Central association and allied civic organizations in all parts of the city, as well as through the official chanels of city and county government, this project is being whipped into shape for definite plans and construction. Strangely, just at its inception, the city of New York has undertaken a project similar in many ways, though fraught with obstacles and problems of such persistent character that the Roosevelt road enterprise seems like child's play in comparison.

Many Problems Exist.

For the 11th avenue project in New York involves air rights, rights of way, destruction of building improvements of great value, and the conflicting powers of several units of government.

Borough President Julius Miller of Manhattan, however, has presented the board of estimate his final plans for the elevated express highway. It will cost approximately $13,000,000, and will be paid for by local assessments.

Engineers figure it will take about two and a half years to complete the project. Mr. Miller submitted his plan in two sections as follows: Section 1 will be 70 feet wide, with two 30 foot roadways, located substantially in the center of the waterfront streets from Canal to West 59th street. This will be accessible by ramps with 10 foot roadways. A minimum clearance of 14 feet above the street surface has been provided, except where steam railroads are encountered, and there the clearance ranges between 18 and 22 feet.

Borne by Three Columns.

The columns have been so located in the street as to interfere as little as practicable with street traffic and the operation of the railroads. The longitudinal spans run from fifty to sixty feet, except opposite cross streets, where the spans have been lengthened so as to span entirely the cross traffic from the side streets. The highway is to be a three column structure, the columns being spaced thirty-four feet, center to center, leaving room for six lines of traffic beneath the structure—three north and three south bound.

Section 2 of the plan carries the highway over the 60th street yard of the New York Central to a connection with 72d street at Riverside drive and locates it partly within the lines of old 12th avenue and partly over land of the New York Central.

The type of structure proposed in this section is a two column structure with a portion of the roadway cantilevered over the railroad yard so as to minimize the occupation of the railroad property and to interfere as little as possible with the existing yard tracks and their operation and at the same time adapt it to the proposed rearrangement and enlargement of the 60th street yard.

The highway over the 60th street yard will be approximately 45 feet above the surface of the ground and lends itself to all the improvements which the Central railroad has in mind.

The financing is partly provided for. A recent law passed by the state legislature allots 50 per cent of the cost of grade crossing elimination to the railroad, 40 per cent to the state and 10 per cent to the city. The city had to pay 25 per cent under the old law.

The railroad and city are agreed on the grade-crossing elimination plan, but the matter of financing the architectural and landscape features has yet to be settled.

News and Views of the Auto Trade

Buick's twenty-fifth anniversary was ushered in yesterday by the launching of an entirely new line of silver anniversary models. The principal features of the new Buick are body design, longer wheel base, lower suspension, smaller wheels and larger tires, increased power and speed [105 miles an hour being claimed for some models, and the speedometer dials show up to 90 miles], and beauty of colorings. There are eighteen models in the new offering. As to power there has been an increase of 11 and 12 per cent in piston displacement, and fuel is now injected by a mechanical device. The new Buick is swung lower than predecessors, and the body is of a sweeping and graceful design. All refinements of former series are exceeded by the new accommodations for drivers and passengers. The public is invited to visit the various displays, which will be continued until the end of the week.

A seven passenger sedan has been added to the models of the Moon Motor company, an eight cylinder vehicle with increased wheel base. The new model will be ready for delivery in a few days.

Packed is entertaining six "master salesmen" from the Chicago organization at the Detroit plant, where Gov. Alvan Fuller of Massachusetts, also a Packard dealer, is to be a principal speaker this week. The sales champs from the Chicago office are J. H. Linn, R. Crawford, J. W. Greeneltch, A. L. Powell, F. A. Shadel, and F. H. Gorgen. One of them will be given a new car by the company to drive back home.

Studebaker reports increase of nearly 50 per cent in retail deliveries of cars since the new models were introduced recently.

Hudson Motor Car company of Illinois held its semi-annual dealers' meeting and outing last Tuesday, at which time the dealers were introduced to Walt Evans, who has recently been appointed general sales manager, and Rob Somerville, wholesale sales manager. Two hundred and fifty dealers and associate dealers were entertained on a lake trip.

Iowa Experts Advise Pruning of Rose Canes

Horticulturists at the Iowa State college advise the pruning away of all the canes of climbing roses which bloomed this season, as soon as they are through blooming. This will induce new canes to grow, and it is these new canes which will produce next year's blooms.

HOLLAND TUNNEL TRAFFIC EXCEEDS ALL ESTIMATES

The estimated total vehicles using Holland tunnel in the first year will be 10,000,000, against the estimate at the start of 5,372,000. In the first seven months 4,334,295 vehicles passed through the tunnel.

It is believed that approximately 3,000,000 cars and trucks will use the tunnel during June, July and August.

May traffic was 24,384 vehicles daily, against the maximum capacity of 46,000. Nine years ago it was estimated 15,800,000 vehicles would use the tunnel in 1939 and it is now predicted 16,113,345 vehicles will use it next year.

LEATHER NEEDS ATTENTION.

Leather upholstery in the open car requires periodic cleaning and dressing if it is to look its best and wear reasonably well.

COMPLETE LINK CONNECTING UP TOLEDO'S U.S. 20

Chicago-Lake Erie Route to Open Thursday.

An important link in transcontinental motor traffic will be opened on United States highway 20 on next Thursday. The occasion will mark completion of the first paved cross-state highway in northern Indiana.

The section now ready for traffic is nine miles in length and extends from La Grange, Ind., to the Ohio state line, on the direct road between Chicago and Toledo.

It was built in two months and the last concrete was poured July 7. It has required until this time to complete approaches and shoulder work sufficiently to make travel safe.

Does Away with Detour.

In southern Indiana the federal highway from Richmond to Indianapolis, now completely paved, gives cross state service by using western connections to the Illinois state line.

Up to this time the traffic between Lake Erie points and Chicago, which is heavy at all times of the year, has been routed down to Bryan, O., and through Kendallville, over gravel, at a material increase in mileage.

Route 20 now is practically a continous pavement between Chicago and Toledo. Four or five miles of gravel west of Fayette, constitute the only break according to highway officials. By switching to Ohio Route 2, east of Angola, the pavement is continuous.

New Route to Detroit.

The expanded Route 20 will serve much Detroit traffic also, as the widened roadway between Toledo and Detroit offers the chance of greater safety and higher speed than federal Route 112, which is Michigan avenue from the Link bridge to Woodward avenue.

A celebration is to be held Thursday at La Grange and Angola, Ind., to mark the opening of the highway. In the evening there will be a program at Potawatomi inn, at Pokagon state park.

PURCHASE OF AUTO PROVED EXPENSIVE, EVEN AT $20 COST

A man who bought a motorcar for $20 did not get much of a bargain after all. He took his wife for a ride and here is what happened:

He drove the car a few blocks and knocked down a lamp post.

A policeman told him to appear in court for driving without a road license.

He decided to give up motoring and sold the car for $3.75.

The police court fined him $5 for driving without a license.

Canadians Insist Tires Be Properly Inflated

Autoists in Jasper National park are to be compelled to keep their tires at proper inflation, according to an announcement by the parks branch of the Canadian government.

It has been found, the statement reads, that under-inflated balloon tires tend to make the car "roll" on curves, while at the same time a suction is created which tears gravel out of the road.

The regulation, therefore, is designed as protection to the motorists and as a measure of preserving the uniform surfaces of the mountain roads.

OBEY THE LAWS.

Obey the traffic laws. The man who makes them probably owns a car and has studied the requirements.

NEW CAR DEMAND SUSTAINS MOTOR INDUSTRY IN JULY

Shortage of Used Autos Also Is Reported.

Detroit, July 28.—[Special.]—Compared with the preceding weeks of July, the present one showed no important change in production for the major branch of the automobile industry. Figures obtainable from week to week indicate an increase of approximately 40 per cent over the corresponding period of one year ago, and indications are that the present summer period is on a par with the best that the industry has ever known.

Contrary to expectations, the schedules of the leading plants indicate continued activity for at least the next few weeks, and possibly longer, the result of a demand for cars well above the normal.

This, apparently, is the result of the unfavorable situation which existed throughout the closing months of 1927, which led to the belief that the industry would be stimulated during the early months of 1928 to a point where the market would be fairly well satisfied before the arrival of the second half.

This failed to develop and the opinion most generally expressed is that production and demand will be well above the normal throughout the remainder of the year.

Old Records Stand.

A new production record will not be hung out for the year, due to the fact that the Ford output has been unable, as yet, to get into anything better than 25 per cent capacity production with indications that it will be some time yet before the plant will reach 50 per cent. The output is increasing daily, but not by leaps and bounds.

Dealers throughout the country are reporting sales above the average with a steady demand continuing for cars in all price classes, and especially in the new models which already have been announced.

Celebrating its sixteenth anniversary Chandler-Cleveland has announced an entirely new line of cars, including a new low priced six, and a new low priced eight.

Shortage of Used Cars.

Dealers throughout the country are in better position than they have been for the last several months, with showroom stock low. In some localities reports indicate a used car shortage. This branch of the business is the most favorable it has been since the beginning of the year.

Production of automobiles and trucks in the United States and Canada in June showed an increase of 19 per cent over the figures for June last year, according to official figures. The June figures showed a decline from the May, but are still high enough to make the first six months of 1928 the largest in the history of the industry, with the exception of 1926. A total of 357,087 passenger cars and trucks were produced by members of the association during June. Ford figures are not included in the total.

THERE'S PRACTICALLY NO PAVED ROADS IN NEBRASKA OUTSIDE OF THE CITIES. BUT OH BOY, HOW THOSE MOTORCOPS CAN TRAVEL OVER THE GRAVEL ON THE LINCOLN HI. BETWEEN NORTH PLATTE AND FREMONT.
H. K. SHAW, JR.

The trip from Chicago to Cody was made between Sunday noon and the following Saturday evening. Rapid City was reached on Wednesday forenoon. A steep mountain grade between Buffalo and Ten Sleep may be avoided by detouring south at Custer in the Black Hills and over the A. Y. P. to Casper, Wyo. The preferred route to Salt Lake City is via the west Yellowstone park entrance, but the roads are dust or gumbo, according to existing rain conditions, and a mountain grade of 8,500 feet intervenes. There are 300 miles of desert between Provo and Grand Junction. The circle via Salt Lake City requires three weeks. By cutting from Moran to Cheyenne one may accomplish it in a little more than two weeks. If it rains in Iowa it is wise to leave the route at Des Moines and cross to the concrete at Ames.

STEPS ARE TAKEN TO BEAUTIFY LINE OF STATE ROADS

Plans have been adopted for the beautification of all state highways in Winnebago county. T. G. Lindquist, county forester, will have charge of the improvements.

Shrubbery will be planted and grass grown at points where bare patches now exist. Unsightly undergrowth will be removed. Trees will be planted and all junction points will be landscaped.

The Blackhawk trail will be the first to be given attention. Others will then be improved in turn. It is expected that four years will be required before the undertaking is completed. The state highway department has agreed to coöperate.

Unsightly billboards, dead trees, and other unattractive objects will be removed and steps taken to make concrete boulevards more attractive. Committees will urge adjacent counties to take similar action in relation to connecting roads and ultimately, it is hoped, the movement may spread to the entire state.

Deny Story Concerning Vertical Automobile Tags

A denial of the report that automobile license plates were to be vertical next year has just been issued by the state division of motor vehicles of California.

The plates again are to have the same shape as in recent years, although they will be slightly larger.

The size will be six and one-quarter inches by 16 in length, and the colors for 1929 will be shiny orange figures embossed on a dull black background with no borders to the plates. This is expected to greatly increase the visibility of the licenses.

SEAT MANY PASSENGERS.

America's railroad cars can seat 2,300,000 people. Automobiles can seat 60,000,000—over twenty-six times as many.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

WRONG STREET SELECTED.

Chicago, July 25.—Hamlin avenue from North avenue to Lake street, would make a wonderful through street, for the reason that it is wide and in good condition, and majority of the motorists going north or south use this section of Hamlin.

Going to work, I ride on Hamlin from North avenue south to Lake street, thence through Garfield park. This street being wide and in first class condition, I cannot understand how they overlooked Hamlin, and made Homan a through street, as the latter is full of holes and very few use it.

The reason I am bringing this to your attention is that Hamlin avenue south is a through street, making a route from Hamlin and North, south to Lake street, thence through Garfield park to Independence boulevard and then back again on Hamlin avenue to Thirty-first street.

ELMER W. SOLLER.

AN OFFICER AND GENTLEMAN?

Chicago, July 19.—Last night while driving north on Sheridan road a United States army car, No. 378, with license 1,087,158, was hogging the road to such an extent that it was impossible to pass on either side. The time was about 11:30. We finally managed to get to his left near Lawrence avenue, only to have this officer, with a young lady reclining on his shoulder, run us to the curb. This was done deliberately. The car kept sole possession of the road as far as Bryn Mawr avenue, where we turned off. This officer evidently believed that since he wore a uniform of the army, everyone would have to put up with his idea of cleverness in the presence of his lady friend.

M. C. GRIFFIN.

THE STALLING PLACE.

Chicago, July 24.—I wonder why the section from the detour on the Dunes highway coming toward Gary is the favorite stalling place for motorists. It seems that just as soon as the railroad at Miller is crossed then one could make good time. The traffic men could, if they would, speed traffic along. It took us an hour and a half to get through Miller last Sunday. A motorcycle officer at Indiana Harbor led a procession through Guthrie street at a pace of fifteen miles an hour. That's helping traffic speed up, isn't it?

A. ROBINOVITZ.

THE EXAMPLES OF A JUDGE.

Chicago, July 14.—Why should not a judge, as well as a private citizen, obey the law? This morning a sedan licensed as 11411 Illinois, with a star lettered, "Judge, City of Chicago," was parked for at least thirty minutes between 10 and 11 a. m. on the north side of Monroe street, between La Salle and Clark streets. This car had no city license tag. During the time the car was parked there a policeman chased several others who wanted to park for a minute or so, and at least one motorist was stopped for failure to have a license tag. How can a judge expect others to obey the law when he does not do so himself?

FAIR PLAY.

GET YOUR LOOKING GLASS.

Chicago, July 18.—It is time that the public uses a looking glass to get a proper view of highway courtesy and the need is greater each day, for the time of enormous congestion is here and too many two lane roads. From my observation four out of five or nine out of ten drivers are plain hogs. You will find them in the center of a narrow road and you can sound your horn by the hour before they even begin to yield. I am going to get an extra horn with an infernal sound, to use on occasion. When I get the first signal to move over I do it within a second's time. What can be done about it except to call them hogs in print? WM. F. WHITMAN.

A THOUSAND CARS NEEDED TO CARRY ORPHANS TO PARK

More than a thousand cars will be needed to transport 5,000 inmates of Chicago orphan asylums and old people's homes from institutions to Lincoln park and back for the annual outing to be held on Thursday, Aug. [illegible]

The Orphans' Automobile Day association of Chicago, under whose auspices the event has been held annually for twenty-three years, makes an appeal to motorists to donate their cars for the occasion.

Those who wish to contribute in this manner to the success of the outing are asked to communicate with Robert K. Sloan, Chicago Motor Liverymen's association, 326 West Madison street, by mail or telephone State 4852.

"We have always been able to muster sufficient cars in the past, but this year we are facing a greater task as we have added some new homes to our list," said President John C. Emery. "Kind hearted motorists will find this a worthy cause and will take as much delight in the undertaking as the unfortunates themselves. The outing is nonsectarian and includes homes of all denominations. We are now including more than fifty institutions in our annual work."

Official Closing Date at Park Announced

The official opening and closing dates of Glacier National Park are June 15 and Sept. 15. While there is no road through the park there are many that penetrate it some distance. Several hotels are located in the park and nearby, as well as various camp grounds. In going from one side of the park to the other it is necessary to ship the car by railroad, the charge being approximately $14 for the car and $2.09 for each passenger, and any extra luggage costs approximately $3.

Better than ever • and winning even greater success

Ever since it flashed into the field, Pontiac Six has been a history-making car. Its first year was one of record-breaking proportions. Its second saw even more spectacular heights attained. And now, Pontiac Six is winning even greater success—because today's Pontiac Six in countless ways is a better car than its famous predecessors.

Now Pontiac offers, in addition to the stamina and reliability for which it is famous, elements of design stamping it as one of the most advanced cars the automotive industry affords. The G-M-R cylinder head—the cross-flow radiator—the AC fuel pump... these, and a dozen additional developments, are typical of its marked superiority over all other cars in the field.

Combining the beauty of bodies by Fisher and highest quality construction with its numerous notable engineering advancements, it provides style, comfort, long life and smooth six-cylinder performance—never before available at prices as low as $745. Ride once—and you will agree... here is value that cannot be matched!

WHAT THE SOCIETY REPORTER SAW

Gives Glowing Account of Unique Preview Showing.

BY CAROLINE S. KRUM

We rolled through the gateway of Studebaker's Proving Ground and turned to the left. There stood a group of cars—proudly shining new cars, whose gleaming surfaces seized the rays of the sun and tossed them back in a blaze of glory. Maroon and silver—green and silver—blue of dusk and blue of summer skies—they flashed before us.

"But—but—are these really Studebakers?" I asked, incredulous. "They seem so much lower—so much longer—and just look at those radiators!"

I hurried to the nearest car and stooped to examine the emblem. There, sure enough, were the wheel and slanting "Studebaker" of yesterday, but with what a difference. Black and white enamel—fine silver lines—a smart new pattern—I was entranced. Here, indeed, was an old friend, but all dressed up in a chic new frock—I suspected something, too, in the way of face-lifting, but of course, I'd never be guilty of broadcasting it.

My glance traveled up over the radiator—sensed the presence of straight, slender lines where once were curves—took in a neat little radiator cap flaunting a gay silver wing—a trim shortened visor—silver wings flying back from glittering cowl lights and headlamps—long, clean-cut hood lines.

Luxurious New Interiors

Climbing in behind the sturdy, slender wheel of a President, I saw the instrument panel, and thought of the way I'd like to have my dressing table look, all square and silver and complete.

The interior of soft mohair, with deep cushions, nicely shaped arm rests and thick carpetings, left nothing to be desired.

As if all this were not enough to delight the most exacting feminine soul, there were such extra treats as cunning vanities of gray and gold, cleverly concealed cigarette cases, ash receivers and handsome robe rails—all the what-nots and comforts of home. The information given me that these cars had been especially designed for the ladies—God bless 'em!—was unnecessary.

Across the way stood a Commander sedan — the Champion's next-door neighbor was his younger brother, The Dictator sedan. I had been captivated from afar by his pleasant grayish blue complexion—I learned that the name, "Duskblu," had been coined for that particular shade, and it did bring back the memory of spring twilights.

No Detail Overlooked

Finally, I came to the youngest member of the Studebaker clan—the Erskine sedan. Youthful the Erskine may be, and smaller in stature than the other members of the family, but not a detail had been overlooked. Color coat just as trim; nice long radiator and hood lines; shining cowl lights and headlamps, each with its pert winged ornament; similar interior appointments and conveniences; the same smart, shortened visor; and—cleverest touch of all—a forward moving moulding line from cowl to hood that seemed to add inches to the length of the car.

"Would you like to try out one of The Presidents?" inquired a courteous someone at my elbow. I came back to earth with a jerk. A maroon door swung open. I slid in behind the wheel.

A suggestion to the starter—a touch on a velvet clutch—a silken gear, and we were off, heading for Carburetor Hill, with its steep grade, its gravelled edges and its glorious crown of maples.

Up the short side—down the longer slope—across a field. The bumps in the road were ironed out before they reached me. Faster and faster we sped, The President and I. Here was power taught obedience — strength and security beneath my fingers.

World Seems Brighter

A sweep of concrete ahead. The curve. Faster and faster. Never a qualm. The speedometer climbed upward. Once upon a time I had shivered as we neared those banked curves. Now I knew better. Here WAS a car. The scenery flew past us. This was pure ecstasy.

It wasn't until I had driven away from the Proving Ground that I remembered how warm and dusty the world had seemed but a short time before. A shimmer of bright colors and brighter silver had taken the place of my longing for a cool, green garden, and I was pleased as Punch to be a part of the feminine world for which those cars had been planned.

SALES INCREASE FOR TEN MONTHS STRAIGHT

Introduction of the new Studebakers comes as a climax to ten consecutive months of sales increases. Sales for each month since September, 1927, have shown an increase over the corresponding month of the previous year.

During the first six months of this year, sales of The President Eight more than trebled President sales for the same period of 1927. Erskine Six sales during the first half of the year exceeded the entire 12 months of 1927.

Reports received from Studebaker dealers throughout the country indicate that retail deliveries have gone up from 35 to 60 per cent since the introduction of new models this month.

98 OFFICIAL RECORDS HELD BY STUDEBAKER

Within the past year Studebaker has established and still holds 98 official American Automobile Association records for endurance and speed. Every record was made by a strictly stock car, under the supervision of the A. A. A. Contest Board.

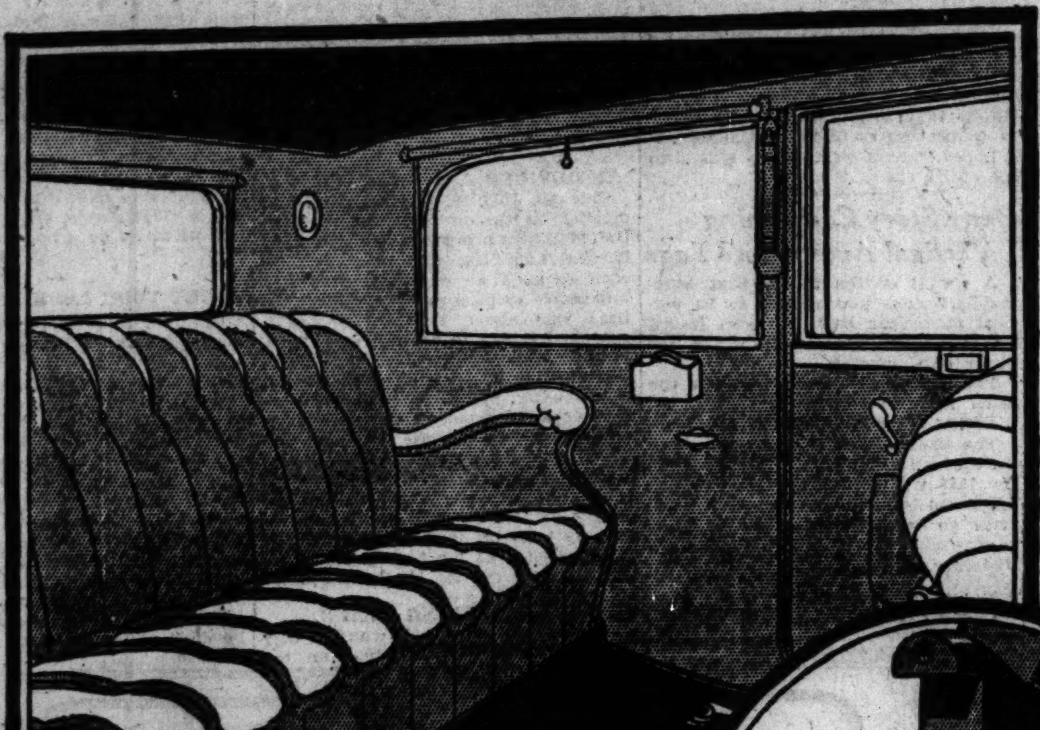
Two stock model Commanders each traveled 25,000 miles in less than 23,000 consecutive minutes—the greatest record for sustained speed in the history of transportation.

A stock model Dictator traveled 5000 miles at better than a mile a minute average speed. No stock car under $1400 has ever equaled this record. Two stock model Erskine Club Sedans each demonstrated their champion heritage by traveling 1000 miles in less than 1000 minutes. This record has never been equaled by any stock car selling for less than $1000. A President Straight Eight of stock design showed its fleetness and stamina by rolling up 2000 miles in 1654 minutes.

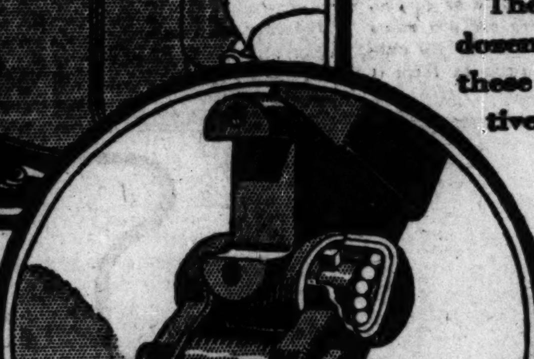
No other automobile manufacturer has ever held so many official records as Studebaker now holds.

New features in the NEW STUDEBAKERS

... See them now



Wide Lounge Seats with deep upholstering modeled to fit the curves of the human body. Arm rests, silken shades, ash receivers, door panels of a new antique finish, etched butler silver hardware—these and many other refinements will win the admiration of those who want a car as modern as tomorrow, as comfortable as an easy chair by the fireside.



Ball bearing spring shackles —a new and exclusive Studebaker feature. Greatest improvement in motoring comfort since the balloon tire! Freedom of spring action never before considered possible. No squeaks, rattles and adjustments. Each shackle contains lubricant for upwards of 20,000 miles—a great advance over any other system of chassis lubrication.

Even the brief glimpse of these smart new Studebakers, as they flash past on open road or boulevard, tells its story of rare body artistry and low, fleet lines.

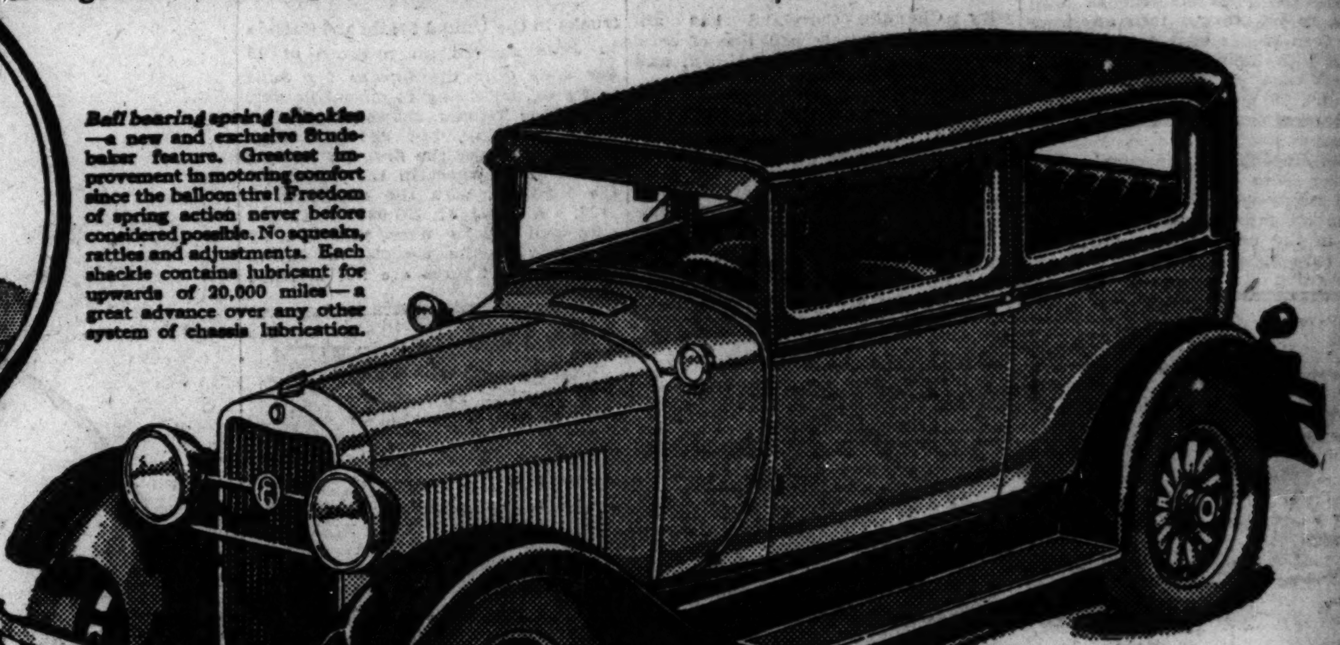
But come in now and examine, at your leisure, the repeated evidence of Studebaker engineering genius, expressed in the luxury, comfort and performance of these splendid motor cars!

Then drive one. You may have owned a dozen costly cars, but you'll find that in these new Studebakers American inventive genius has surpassed them all. No other car ever built can give you such a wonderful ride.

Only a few of the great Studebaker achievements are pictured here. There are many more. No matter how much or little you plan to invest in your new car, you will want to see them. Come in today!

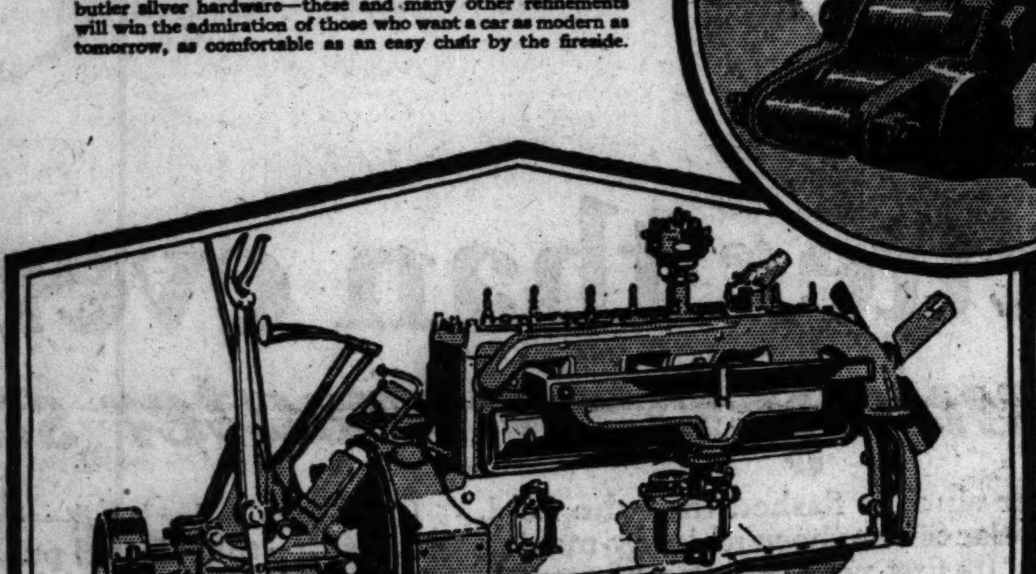
STUDEBAKER'S FOUR NEW LINES
The President Eight	$1685	to	$2485
The Commander	1435	to	1665
The Dictator	1185	to	1395
The Erskine	835	to	1045

All Prices f. o. b. factory



STUDEBAKER'S ERSKINE SIX Club Sedan $860 f. o. b. factory

Longer wheelbase! Larger bodies! Superlative beauty has been added to its brilliant, thrifty performance. Two Erskine Club Sedans recently traveled 1000 miles in less than 1000 minutes under A. A. A. supervision. This record has never been equaled by any stock car under $1000. Drive it 40 miles per hour even when new—the result of quality construction.



Straight Eight engine used in The President. 109 velvet horsepower. The smoothness with which this great motor drives the luxurious President sedans at sustained high speeds proves it the finest power plant ever placed in an automobile. Yet The President sells at a One-Profit price—$1685 to $2485 at factory. Nineteen 8-cylinder sedans have less horsepower yet sell at higher prices.

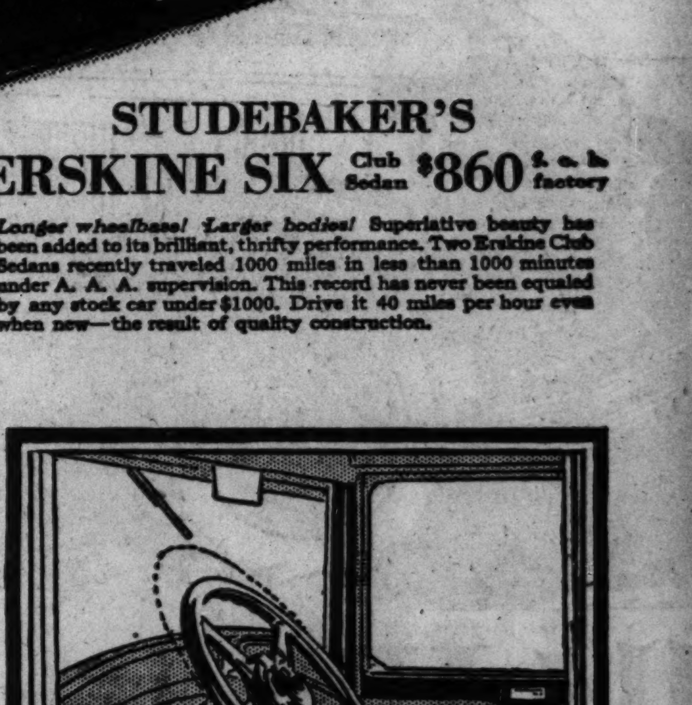
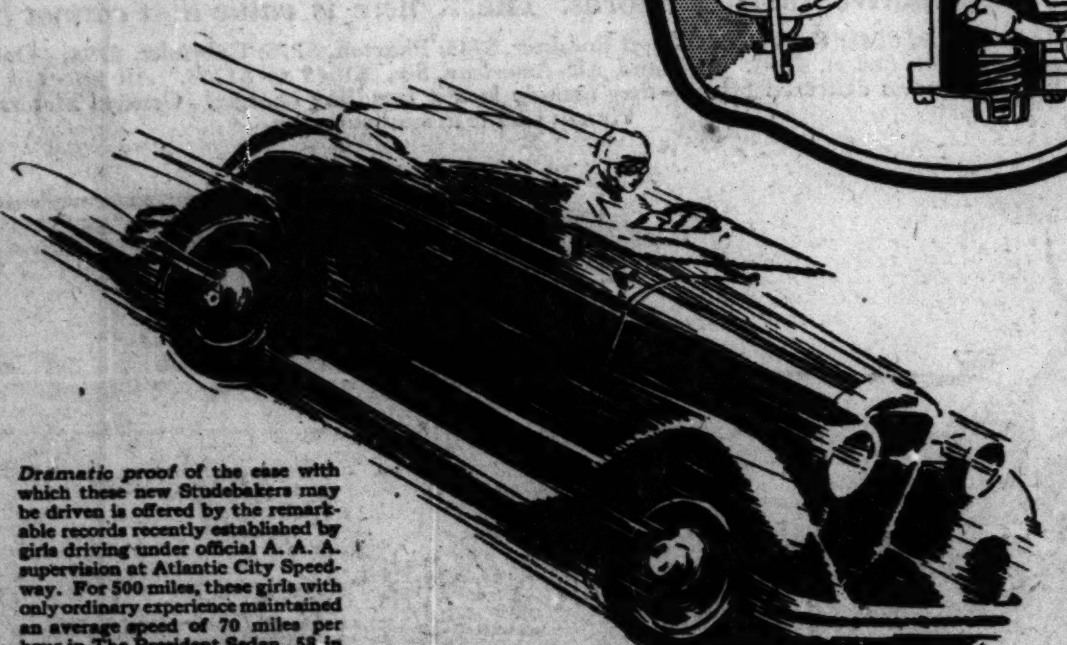
(Below)—Vina Delmar, whose book, "Bad Girl" is one of the season's best sellers, enjoys taking a turn at the wheel of a Studebaker Commander. The Commander's record of 25,000 miles in less than 23,000 minutes has never been equaled in the history of transportation. Only comets, suns, planets have traveled so far so fast.



By a simple adjustment, the steering wheel of Studebaker cars may be raised or lowered to suit the requirements of the driver.



Dramatic proof of the ease with which these new Studebakers may be driven is offered by the remarkable records recently established by girls driving under official A. A. A. supervision at Atlantic City Speedway. For 500 miles, these girls with only ordinary experience maintained an average speed of 70 miles per hour in The President Sedan, 58 in The Erskine, 60 in The Dictator, and 77 in The Commander Roadster.

Having proved the superiority of Studebaker and Erskine performance beyond all question, and having, as a natural result, shown sales increases every month since last September, Studebaker now challenges attention with new beauty of line and color plus the greatest advance in riding ease since balloon tires.

Plan More Lights and Less Noise for Wabash Avenue

STORES RISING ON SITE WHERE JOY ONCE RULED

Bismarck Herrings of Rienzi Recalled.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Many a sigh is heard these days from pedestrians—those acknowledging an age that hears Silver Threads Among the Gold with some uneasiness—as they pass the corner of Diversey and Broadway where workmen are now engaged in lifting steel beams, pouring concrete and hammering around generally on a new building.

For this corner for years marked one spot in the city that was devoted entirely to the pleasant task of making the hours move agreeably for Chicago villagers. Now it is passing into the hands of merchants and doctors and others who keep our minds on pay day.

A few pedestrians will recall from the dim past a noted saloon run by one Herr Smuckert, famous for his beers. More will remember the Rienzi—known as the finest German restaurant in the city; a place where good food and good music were boon companions. And, of course, our own sprightly younger generation hasn't had time to forget the Rendezvous.

Fay Recalls Dinners.

But it was the Rienzi which made this corner famous. John Fay, Chicago correspondent for the New York World, remembers it when it was opened shortly after the beginning of this century.

"They served a meal out there for 75 cents that couldn't be touched downtown for $3." John reminisced with a bit of melancholy in his voice. "There was a lentil soup they served on Thursday and it was worth waiting for. And they fixed hamburger steak like it has never been done since. You told the waiter how you wanted it, whether you liked garlic or onions, and it came back just right. Then there was Bismarck herring—a dish which helped to steady a man after he had taken too freely of wine."

With prohibition came curtains for the Rienzi and the start of the Rendezvous with its tempo that couldn't be taken for slow. The Rendezvous furnished a certain amount of excitement for some years, particularly on one occasion when a gent celebrating his birthday became peeved because he couldn't get ice in a hurry, shot a waiter and got himself killed. And some time ago it was closed by the prohibition forces.

Four Stories High.

We'll not stir any more memories concerning this corner, but get on with the building that's now rising. It is being erected by the Rienzi company of which Fred Kuehl is president and A. Brockman is secretary.

It will be called the Rienzi business block to perpetuate the name of the old café and will be four stories high. The property has a frontage of 167 feet on Diversey and 130 feet on Broadway and adjoins on the west the Rienzi hotel—erected a few years ago.

Hermann Nimphius, consulting engineer, and Leichenko & Esser, architects, collaborated in designing the structure. The architectural motif comes from France of the time of Francis I. The exterior will be of terra cotta, with a considerable amount of ornamentation. Store fronts will be of cast iron.

The basement will be unusually high and will have some of the amusement characteristics of the former days. There will be fifteen bowling alleys and twenty-four pool and billiard tables. Showers and lockers will be there for the use of the bowlers. And a café will furnish nourishment.

Will Have 12 Stores.

On the first floor there will be twelve stores, eight fronting on Diversey and four on Broadway. At the rear will be a large hall which will be used for display purposes.

The second floor will be divided into thirty-five offices for the use of doctors and dentists. Each office will have a reception room and will be provided with compressed air, X-ray outlets, etc. The third and fourth floors will be divided into larger office suites.

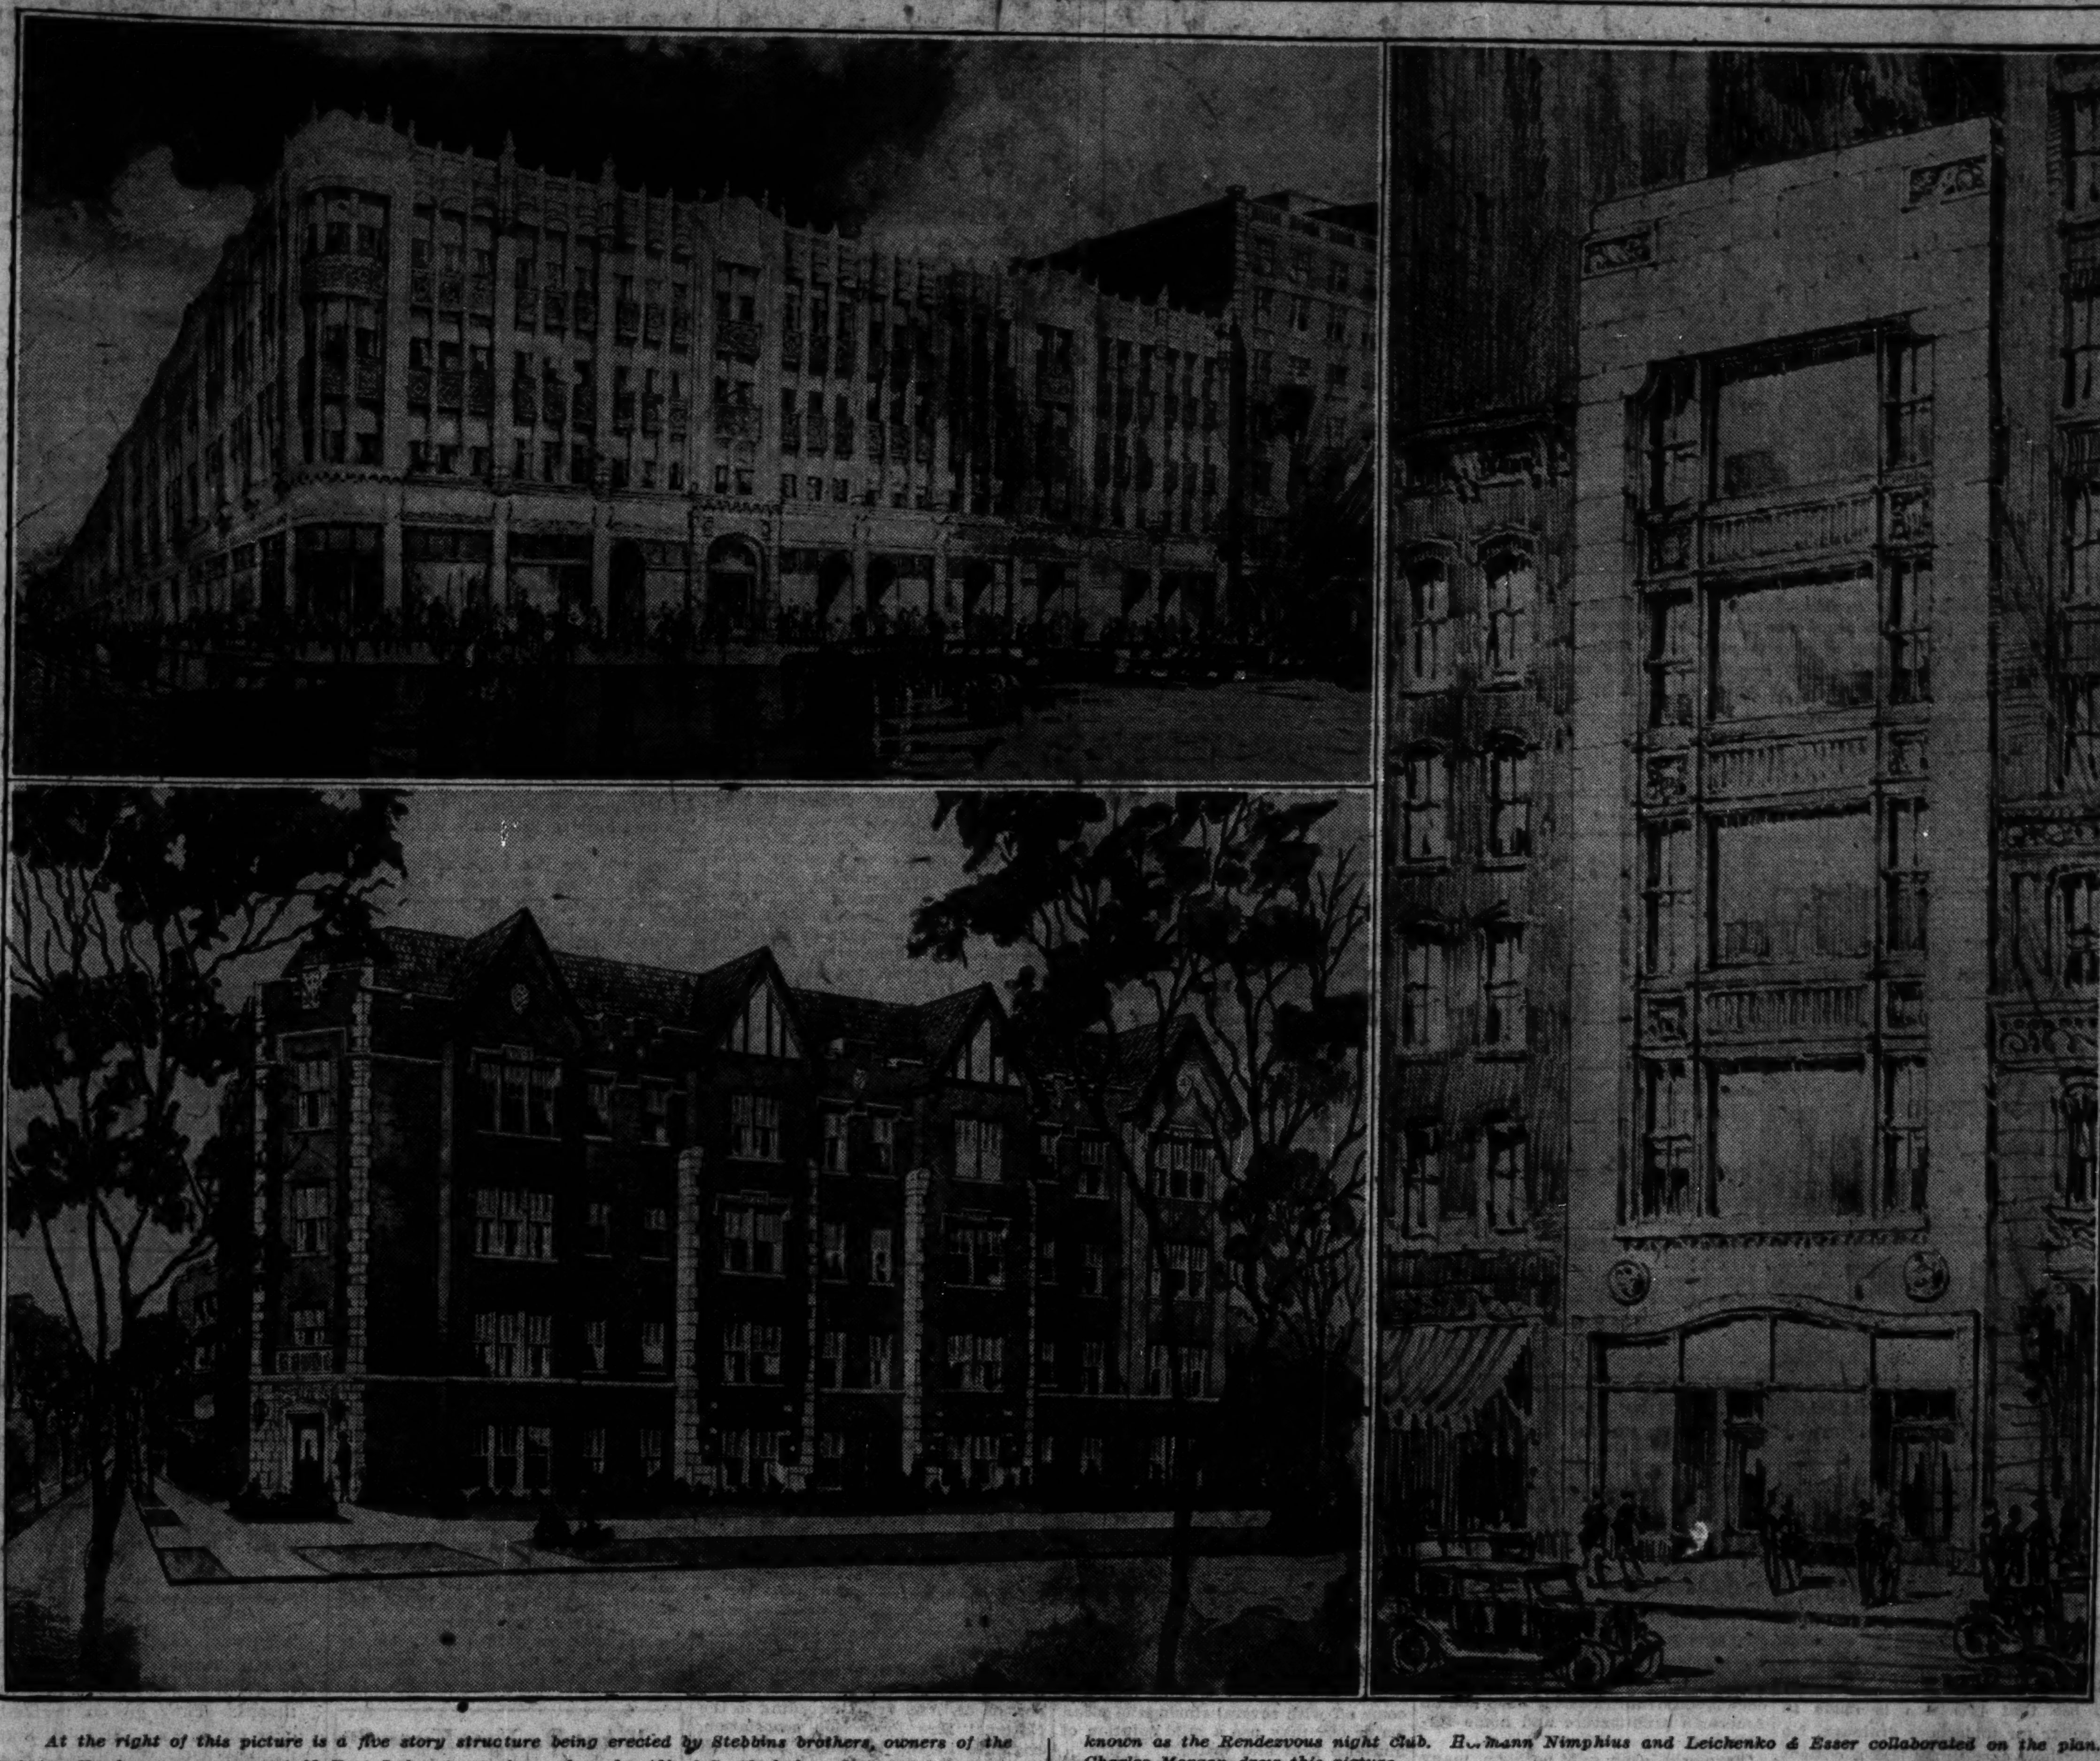
The Rienzi is of semi-fireproof construction, with a structural steel skeleton framework and concrete and wood floors. The main entrance will be on Diversey and will be through an elaborate lobby. It is estimated the project will represent an investment of $450,000. The Continental National Bank and Trust company is financing it. Paul F. Mueller is contractor.

LEASE NORTH WELLS STREET LOT 99 YEARS

Edward P. Casey has leased to the 175 North Wells Building corporation for ninety-three years the sixty-seven feet of frontage at 171-79 North Wells, just north across the alley from the new Steuben club building now being erected. Lester X. Furth & Co. were the only brokers and will continue to manage the property.

The property is seventy-one feet deep and is improved with an old six story building. That's about all the details that can be given now. The rental terms are not disclosed and no one will discuss what the new owner will do with the property.

FOR LOOP, NORTH SIDE, AND LOGAN SQUARE



At the right of this picture is a five story structure being erected by Stebbins brothers, owners of the Stebbins Hardware company, at 62 East Lake street, from plans by Alfred S. Alschuler. It is not being put up for the use of the builders, but will be rented for shops and studios.

The upper picture to the left is a four story shop and office building, which is being erected at the northeast corner of Diversey and Broadway, on the site of the famous old Rienzi restaurant, which later was known as the Rendezvous night club. Hermann Nimphius and Leichenko & Esser collaborated on the plan. Charles Morgan drew this picture.

And the lower picture to the left is an apartment building which Rosen & Fischel are erecting at 2524-32 North Sacramento boulevard, at the corner of Willetts court, in the Logan Square district. Levy & Klein drew the plans for the structure, which will contain forty-two one, two, and three room apartments. L. B. Sugarman is responsible for this rendering.

String Firm Erects Plant on Logan Blvd.

Construction is now under way on another "largest in the world" for Chicago—the one for today being the plant of the Chicago Printed String company, which is being erected on Logan boulevard at Elston avenue.

This firm manufactures cotton tying tape, sometimes done in colors and sometimes bearing printed messages or the name of the firm. When the company began business about fourteen years ago it had a capacity of 50,000 yards a day. When its new plant is completed the capacity will be 1,500,000 yards daily and ultimately this is to be 3,000,000 yards. It is stated the firm now makes seventy per cent of all the tape of this type in the country.

The building under construction is to be two stories and basement high. It occupies a lot 85x125 feet, with provision for an extension at the rear The exterior will be in rough gray face brick, with stone pilasters and trim. Colored tile inserts will give the idea of the printed string—the product of the concern.

All walls will be of face brick with the exception of the rear one, which will be of common brick. This will be replaced when the addition is built. The architect is Alfred S. Alschuler.

The first floor will have the offices and storage space. The second floor will be occupied by the machines turning out the tape, many of which are imported from Europe. The cost of the building, exclusive of the land, will be $180,000.

SYNDICATE BUYS 100 ACRES CLOSE TO LAKE FOREST

Alfred MacArthur heads a syndicate which recently purchased a tract of 100 acres, located about four miles west of Lake Forest, on the north side of Old School road, between St. Mary's and Bradley roads, from J. F. Doyle for an undisclosed consideration.

NEW SOUTH SIDE COURT APARTMENTS

EDWARD ZIPF BUYS ESTATE IN LAKE COUNTY

Edward Zipf, president of the Zipf Brothers Coal company, has purchased the fifty acres timberland estate of Virginia L. Fitzmorris in Lake county, near Libertyville, for an undisclosed consideration. The estate, known as Dawson farm, has frontage on the Desplaines river and is heavily timbered. There is a main home and a caretaker's house on the property. The estate is near the properties of Samuel Insull, William M. Reay, and others. A. R. Schnaebele and Jay Cairns were brokers.

ARCHITECTS TO PLAY GOLF AT MEDINAH CLUB

The midsummer golf tournament of the Architects' club of Chicago is to be held next Thursday at the Medinah Country club. Contestants will tee off at 10 a. m. with eighteen holes to be played in the morning and eighteen after lunch. Architects may bring guests. The tournament fees will be $10, which will include luncheon and dinner. Registrations may be made with Charles W. Haynes, chairman of the golf committee, at room 2121 Tribune Tower.

ERECT 3 STORY BUILDING NEAR THE NORSHORE

C. F. and Ida L. Yegge leased to Ralph H. Martin, Herbert C. Jenks and Nels M. Hokanson 100x85 feet of vacant at 327-35 Howard street, opposite the Norshore theater, on which a three story building is being erected. The structure was designed by B. Leo Steif and will contain six stores and twenty kitchenette apartments. The cost of the improvements will be $150,000. The City National Bank of Evanston made a $100,000 loan. Hokanson & Jenks, Inc., will manage the property.

JACOB L. KESNER BUYS BUILDING ON BOUL MICH

Jacob L. Kesner, veteran Chicago real estate man, has purchased the seven story and basement building at 1106-10 South Michigan avenue, just south of 11th street, from Mrs. Elizabeth B. Smith for an undisclosed price. Mr. Kesner says the building has been somewhat neglected and he expects to spend about $100,000 in putting it into condition. The land is 40x171 feet. D'Ancona and Pflaum were attorneys for Mr. Kesner.

PLANS $250,000 APARTMENT INN IN LANE COURT

Louis Stein, a wholesale furniture dealer, has purchased from Henry Ericsson 50x130 feet of vacant property at 2046-48 Lane court for an undisclosed consideration which he will improve with a seventy unit apartment hotel. Reichert & Finck are drawing plans for the hotel which, together with the land, it is stated will represent an investment of $250,000. The building will be three stories and English basement high. Hoffenberg & Block were brokers for the sellers and A. M. Weber acted for the purchaser.

90 PER CENT OF OWNERS FAVOR LIGHTER LANE

"L" May Be Quieted and Brightened.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Staid old Wabash avenue, one of the nation's best known daylight shopping thoroughfares, but known as one of the noisiest and after sundown one of the most dismally lighted avenues, is going to turn over a new leaf. Taking a hint from its gay neighbor to the east, Boul Mich, and its more flashing friend to the west, State street, Wabash is going to doll itself up with a necklace of 4,000 candle power electric lights between Wacker drive and Harrison street that should make it rival State street, now said to be the world's best lighted thoroughfare.

PHILIP F. W. PECK.
[Walinger Photo.]

In fact, it'll not only rival but, if present plans are carried out, it will surpass State street's sunlike electric blaze, for the suggestion has been made to paint the present gloomy "L" structure a glistening white enamel, which would act as a reflector for the proposed lighting system.

"A Little Less Noise, Please!"

In addition, the clanging uproar of "L" trains may be hushed if tentative suggestions made to the Insull interests are given heed. In this day of sound deadeners galore it has been urged that the elevated structure can have a layer of insulation placed between the rails and the steel structure which will absorb the terrific crash of sounds and make Wabash avenue a more comfortable street to shop on.

It has been pointed out that "L" trains in Berlin are so noiseless that pedestrians walking under the concrete structure can't even notice when a train rolls by overhead. It's not expected the Berlin quiet can be brought about on the antique loop "L" structure in Chicago, but it's hoped and expected the overhead lines here will at least make an attempt to dim the din which actually affects realty values along Wabash avenue.

More Words than Deeds.

"We know that painting the 'L' with white enamel and also the question of quieting the terrific roar of trains, has been talked of for years and never got beyond the verbal stage," said an official of the Greater Central District association, of which Philip F. W. Peck is president and William A. Dudley is managing director.

"Now that nearly 90 per cent of the property owners along Wabash, between Wacker and Harrison, have signed up for the 4,000 candle power lights," he continued, "we're going ahead and try to get the brightening and quieting of the 'L' brought about. Modern illumination will lose much of its value with a background of dark colored steel and a continuous uproar."

The proposed lights already are being tested in the experimental city maintained by the General Electric company at Cleveland. Within a few weeks the Wabash avenue block between Madison and Washington will be used as a preliminary tryout for the new lights. They are to be fastened in some way to the "L" structure and not placed on standards along the edge of the sidewalk as on State street. This is one reason why the "L" structure should be white, it was explained.

Brighten Up One Section.

The section of Wabash avenue between Harrison and 22d streets was cheered up considerably when the old 300 candle power lights were increased to 1,000 candle power on Jan. 5.

Of course, the rapid development of the once stagnant north end of Wabash avenue is now common knowledge. And the next important step in making Wabash a great through artery from the south to the north side is the proposed bascule bridge over the Chicago river.

With the completion of this big improvement several large building projects in the vicinity of the plazas at each end of the new bridge, it is understood, will begin to take definite form. One of the most important will be the development of the Murray Wolbach and Nathan William MacChesney properties at the northeast corner of Wabash avenue and Wacker drive.

An Outstanding Site.

This is one of the outstanding building sites in the city, having an unobstructed view west along Wacker drive, the river and the proposed north bank boulevard. If the two sites are combined one of the highest skyscrapers in the city may be erected.

Meanwhile a more modest bit of building expansion is announced for farther south on Wabash. At the southwest corner of Congress, Philip F. W. Peck, a nephew of the famous Ferdinand W. Peck, erected a modern fireproof structure, known as the Congress Bank building. It has been so successful that he announces five more stories are to be added next spring. Mr. Peck, in addition to being president of the Greater Central District association, is vice president and treasurer of the Wabash Avenue Business Men's association.

HOME BUILDERS' DEPARTMENT

SPACIOUS HOUSE FOR FAMILY THAT WANTS LUXURY

Design Taken from Region of Mediterranean.

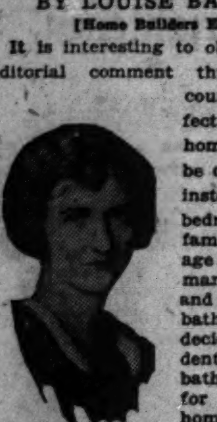
BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

It is interesting to observe various editorial comment throughout the country to the effect that taste in homes seems to be changing, that instead of three bedrooms, many families of average size are demanding four, and instead of one bath there is a decided trend evident towards two baths. The vogue for the smaller home, even where the larger one can be afforded, seems to be passing, and a renewed desire is apparent for more space along with greater comfort and even luxury in equipment.



LOUISE BARGELT.
[Hutchinson Photo.]

Such a house as this one shown today is a spacious one, designed for a home in which there are children and where space is desired for the enjoyment and convenience of all the family members.

Much skillful care has been expended on the exterior color scheme of this home, that it may be appropriate to the Mediterranean character of the dwelling as well as be harmonious and appealing. For after all there are few things which will detract more quickly from the excellence of line and mass than a poorly carried out color ensemble.

Pinkish Gray Brick.

The exterior walls are of pinkish grey silica brick. The quoins at the corners and all brick moulded courses are in a red or dark brown shade. The roof is of rustic Spanish tile and the main entrance doorway and other trim including the base is of buff limestone.

Besides the three living rooms and four bedrooms there is also a large sunroom, a toilet with shower and two large bathrooms. On the main floor alone there are six closets with a pantry for refrigeration and on the second floor there are seven closets, including linen shelves, and cedar lined closet space.

A flagstone walk leads to a small entrance porch with an Italian urn on one side and wrought iron lantern on the other.

The vestibule and stair hall as well as the sun porch have floors of tile. Note the width of the reception hall, some nine feet. This hall runs directly to the rear of the house and to the rear entrance. All the rooms on the first floor are easily reached from this hall.

Oak Plank Flooring.

In the living room with its fireplace of Italian stone in the renaissance period, there is a wide oak plank flooring. The dining room has a composition flooring and wainscot which resembles travertine and its ceiling is weathered oak beamed and illuminated in polychrome stencil designs. The kitchen and toilet floors are covered with rubber tiling.

The walls of the living room and hall are of Italian finish plaster. The walls and floors of the bathrooms are tiled with semi-glazed tile in colors and the fixtures are in harmonizing shades. All four bedrooms are papered.

At the garden end of the living room is the sunroom at a level of two steps below the dining room. This room is glazed with steel casement.

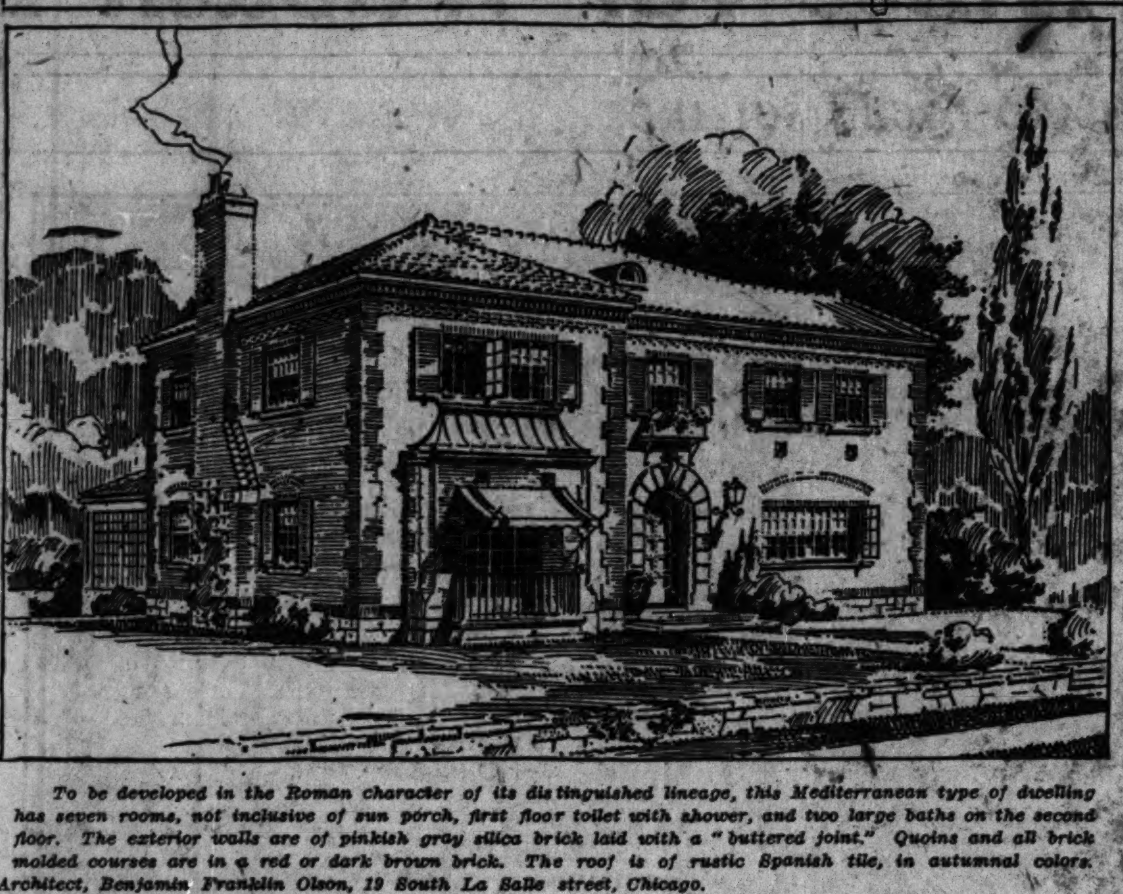
The stairway which leads to the second floor has a wrought iron railing. All the woodwork on the first floor is a light tinted weathered oak, and on the second the woodwork is finished in enamel.

Entire Basement Excavated.

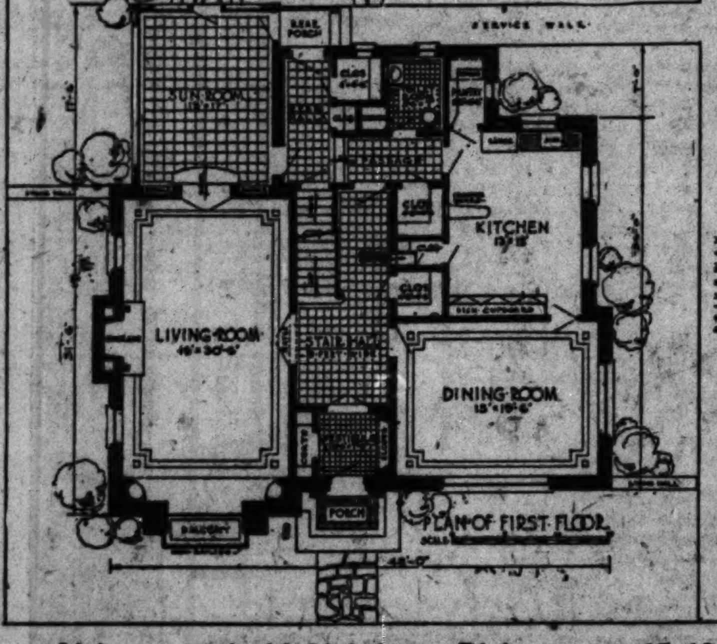
The entire basement will be excavated, affording, in addition to the customary heater cellar, laundry and drying space, a playroom, workroom, storage room and toilet.

The vapor vacuum heating system to be fueled with gas or oil. The estimated cost of this house, as described, is $35,000. With the substitution of cheaper materials, the house could be built for less.

HOME WITH ANCIENT ROMAN LINES



To be developed in the Roman character of its distinguished lineage, this Mediterranean type of dwelling has seven rooms, not inclusive of sun porch, first floor toilet with shower, and two large baths on the second floor. The exterior walls are of pinkish gray silica brick laid with a "buttered joint." Quoins and all brick molded courses are in a red or dark brown brick. The roof is of rustic Spanish tile, in autumnal colors. Architect, Benjamin Franklin Olson, 19 South La Salle street, Chicago.



Living room is 16x30.6 feet. Dining room, 15x19.6. Vestibule, 6.6x7. Kitchen, 13x18. Sun room, 13x17.

NOTE UNDERFLOOR DRAINAGE BEFORE PAVING BASEMENT

The home builder who is erecting a home on clay soil, or any kind of soil excepting sand, should play safe and see that provision is made in his cellar for underfloor drainage. No matter how excellently laid a cement floor may be, if there is opportunity for water to form pockets underneath it, the pressure against the concrete will result in eventual cracks.

Preventing any danger of this happening can be accomplished by the installation of a drain underneath the floor. Properly pitched and well laid, this drain should last as long as the house.

Another wise measure in basement treatment is the generous use of paint. On cement walls paint shows up well, is a preventive of dust, and in a slight degree keeps out dampness.

Whitewash may also be used on cement walls, or stone or brick walls. While it is not as durable as paint, it is better than nothing at all, and moreover is simple to apply.

Another way of adding to the respectable appearance of a basement is by painting the wooden partitions. Again, many people lath and plaster the basement ceiling and then, after it is finished, paint it.

EVER CONSIDER TILE FLOORING? IDEAL FOR HOME

Floor tiles? Have you ever considered this method of solving your flooring problem? It is a method much in vogue now through the strong influence Mediterranean styles have had on American architecture and home furnishings.

Formerly, even now perhaps, many of us think of tile as a cold and formal material. Not much warmth where a cozy homelike effect is desired. This really is not so, however; floor tiles are manufactured as colorful and gay and lively looking as one can want. They are easy to take care of, too, these vivid blocks in various forms.

Naturally the problem of the decorator is different when the floor is of tile than when it is of the hard wood to which we are all so accustomed. Tile tones are different from wood tones and besides their surface is textured and patterned.

Where a room is spacious larger blocks may be used, with joints which are wider; blocks in rectangular or hexagonal forms.

If the room is small the tile may be proportionately smaller with the joints less prominent.

In floor tiles the colors offered to the home builder are many and delightful. Deep red if one wishes, of a soft tan, rich moss or jade green, or a mottled floor may be had if preferred, with polychrome effects introduced.

After a tile floor has been laid it is important to make sure that no stains has been rubbed on the face of the tile. If this cement does not come off with several rinsings of clean water one may use a mild solution of muriatic acid and water.

BATHROOM CABINET HEATERS NOW TO BE HAD IN ANY COLORS

Cabinet heaters for the bathroom may now be had which will harmonize with the arrangement and also with the color scheme of this room. In this way is individuality achieved; and since color is the dominant requisite for present day decorative bathrooms effects any radiator to which delicate tints and shades may be applied is appealing.

There is an unusual degree of heating capacity to this type of heater.

The heating section itself is composed of a series of flat, horizontal tubes, held securely in place by copper fins perpendicular to the tubes. This section is nested firmly in bronze metal end tanks or headers that act as manifolds for the entering heating element and the returning condensation. This specialized arrangement and copper construction of fins and tubes insures maximum degree of heating efficiency.

Its light weight, furthermore, makes any installation an easy matter, for the cabinet is easily removed by lifting it from the heating section.

This type of cabinet heater is designed for vacuum vapor, one pipe steam, and air line systems.

2 CAR GARAGES FINDING FAVOR IN SUBURBAN AREAS

Suburban developments in the last few years have contributed vastly to the recognition of the one and two car garage as an accepted feature in the home building program.

Indeed, the two car garage appears to be markedly on the increase, and where once it was the exception, to be found only in connection with a costly home, it is now frequently seen with moderate priced residences.

More and more men seem to be using the "car" for business purposes, and the wife and children are given a car for their own use.

Even if a family does not feel ready to afford two cars at the time the garage is built, a two car garage is an economy, for one part of it may, in most instances, be easily rented, and the garage made to pay for itself in this way.

Deluxe Six Apartment Building for Kingston

An unusually complete six apartment building is under construction at 7819-23 Kingston avenue from plans drawn by Architect Louis K. Griser. It is stated the investment with the 60x125 site will be $95,000. The flats will contain six rooms each, with sleeping porches and breakfast rooms additional. Completion is scheduled for August. The S. & H. Building corporation, of which Joseph Schwartz and John Hedman are officers, is owner. Joseph Schwartz was broker.

Sheet Steel Now Used for Many Roofing Effects

Sheet steel is now being used for many roofing effects, Spanish mission tile, shingled, standing seam or lapped corrugated.

VARIOUS WAYS OF CONSTRUCTING CONCRETE FLOOR

Home Improvement Taken from Skyscraper.

BY HOMER GRANT.

Much discussion is centered today around the firesafe first floor in small residences and large. It is now generally known that they are vermin proof, water proof and fireproof. They increase the total cost of the average house less than 2 per cent and sometimes but little more than one per cent.

Their excellence as a stable base for linoleum, tile, composition flooring and hardwood floorings has previously been discussed in this column.

The various well established methods which may be employed by the home builder in laying these floors and the different types from which he may choose have not been discussed.

There are, generally speaking, three major types of concrete residence floors.

First may be mentioned the simple, reinforced concrete slab and this type is best employed when spans are not more than 16 feet. In thickness, slab floors range from 4 inches for a ten foot span, to 6 inches for a 16 foot span.

Cast Over Forms.

The second type, frequently employed in commercial work, is the so-called "ribbed floor." This is a concrete floor cast over steel or wood forms which are removed when the concrete has thoroughly set. These forms are laid in parallel rows from four to six inches apart so that the underside of the floor, when the forms have been stripped, appears as a series of arches and joists. In case it is decided to plaster the basement ceiling, metal ties are embedded in the concrete of the joists to support metal lath.

The third type is a floor in which the pan of the "ribbed" floor is replaced by concrete hollow tile, arranged in rows 4 to 6 inches apart. When the concrete is cast over and around the tile it unites and bonds perfectly with them, resulting in a strong floor, smooth on the bottom and ready for plaster. All of these floors employ steel reinforcement to aid in taking up the tensile stresses.

Adapted to Residences.

It is interesting to note that one of the chief characteristics of the skyscraper is this fire safe floor which is now being adapted for residence use. Built as has been shown, in different manners and surfaced in various ways, the structural soundness remains the same. Indeed, this floor, a reinforced concrete unit, is not only strong in itself but is a stabilizer for the entire house, preventing expensive repairs and redecorating bills which sometimes are forced on the owner when the house construction proves shaky or faulty.

Furthermore, as every five minutes a fire occurs in some home in the United States, many times disastrous, always expensive and in most instances useless; and when a large proportion of these fires, according to the National Fire Protection association, originate in the basement and work upwards, the value of a fire stop or cutoff in the shape of a fireproof floor is easily seen.

Erect 47 Apartments and 2 Stores at 4849 Damen

Construction is under way on a building at 4849-55 North Damen street which will contain forty-seven one, two and three room apartments and two shops. The owner is the 4849 Damen Building corporation. Wallach Brothers have the general contract.

LILY POOL ADDS TO ENJOYMENTS OF HOME GARDEN

Easy to Install; Cost Is Moderate.

There is an appeal in water—trickling, bubbling water—which is universal. Even a bit of a pool in our own garden midst satisfies in summer much as a hearth fire cheers in winter.

Not expensive either, these informal lily pools with their informal plantings. For the elaborate home they may be vastly ostentatious, costly, precise. For the smaller home they may be simplicity incarnate, and yet contribute in generous measure enjoyment for grown ups and children alike.

The following facts are a few brief pointers the home owner contemplating building a lily pool may find of value.

A square or a rectangular shape is the easiest to construct.

Choose the spot in the garden which will get the most sunlight.

Dig a depression at least 30 inches deep and allow the sides to start at an angle of 45 degrees. About 12 feet square is a satisfactory size for the informal, small pool.

Have Good Sized Drain.

If running water is supplied, have a good sized drain, at least twice the diameter of the supply pipe.

Galvanized pipes in all the plumbing are satisfactory.

If concrete blocks are employed, lay in three courses. Waterproof cement for the joints is excellent if both inside and outside joints are well pointed.

Concrete for the bottom, one part cement, 2 parts sand and one part crushed stone, can be poured to a depth of six inches.

Spread cement mortar over concrete as soon as it has set and make smooth with trowel like a sidewalk.

The piping must be installed before the concrete is poured.

Red face bricks may be placed on top of course of concrete blocks and imbedded in a rich mixture of white cement mortar.

After this is done apply waterproof cement coating to the inner surface of the pool.

Too much running water is apt to chill the lily roots, but a little water, trickling for a few hours each day, will replenish evaporation inroads and give strength to the gold fish.

Fish Fight Mosquitos.

Fish in the pool will combat mosquitos.

Snails and tad poles, excellent scavengers, may be added to interest the children.

Avoid aquatic insects as they are apt to kill the goldfish and even eat them.

Make certain that the concrete margin of the pool is well hidden, either with some rustic stonework around the edge, or flowers and plants.

Around the pool, forget-me-nots, rock roses, dwarf veronica, or money worth with vivid yellow flowers will adjust itself charmingly.

Wintergreens for winter effect are splendid though these are heavy and cannot be used too generously. Various types of the juniper may be employed and so may a few American hemlocks.

Answers to Questions on Home Owning

Placing of Fireplace.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Are there any fast and hard rules regarding where the fireplace in the living room should be located?—R. E.

Ans.: I should say not any really "hard" rules. It should be placed out of the line of travel and for this reason is most frequently placed away from the entrance. Usually it is placed at the narrow end of the room, as if it is placed on the broad side of the room sometimes it looks awkward and has a tendency to dwarf the room.

On Making a Pergola.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: In making a pergola—we are planning to make our own shortly—can we set the upright posts directly in the ground or should we use concrete? How should we handle the concrete? G. E.

Answer—It is wiser to set your posts in concrete. Make the holes four or five inches larger than would be required for your posts, pour the wet mix in around and let them stand without disturbing for several days. You can use a mixture of three parts sand, one part cement and six parts gravel or crushed stone.

Brick Sills.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Do you think brick sills are necessary in a brick home? What other kind could we have by way of contrast? Is there any special way of treating brick window sills to lend them added interest? A. W.

Answer—Not necessary. You could use terra cotta or stone. However, brick is very appropriate and you can give an appearance of great solidity to the brick sills by sloping them sharply; in this way the depths of the reveal of the windows appears to be increased.

Colorful Accessories Help to Brighten Up Bathroom

Colored porcelain enameled surface and semi-recess bathroom accessories are now manufactured in many different delightful shades and styles and they give to the bathroom a colorful and ultra modern note.

TAPERED ASPHALT SHINGLES

You PAY FOR SMOKE —why not use it?

If smoke's coming out of your stack, you are wasting fuel. Wasting it as surely as if you occasionally threw a few shovels of coal out the window, instead of in the furnace.

Smoke is unconsumed carbon and volatile matter—rich in heat units, and expensive to buy. Burn the smoke—you'll save money and eliminate a nuisance.

Here's how the National Super-Smokeless Boiler accomplishes both results. A blast of finely divided jets of air enters the stream of gases emerging from the coking coal. Combustion is instantaneous. What was oily, black smoke becomes white hot flame. What were wasted heat units are saved, absorbed by the water in the boiler, and converted to steam and usefulness.

The NATIONAL super-smokeless BOILER Gives SUPER-SERVICE ON OIL BURNING too—

Those same qualities that make this boiler outstandingly economical and efficient in burning soft coal, also make it the logical choice for oil burning. Progressive increase in combustion area—long fire-travel—properly placed baffles—all assure maximum heat absorption, and minimum stack loss.

Any reliable Heating Contractor can obtain full details for you, and furnish facts and figures on how the National Super-Smokeless Boiler will save you time, trouble, and money.

AWARD BOARD QUIETUS BRINGS PEACE TO LABOR

Now Minimum of Strife Among Trades.

BY THOMAS WREN.

PATRICK F. SULLIVAN.

Since the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor abolished the jurisdictional awards board last October, there has been a minimum of jurisdictional strife in the Chicago building industry, although builders professed to see in the collapse of the board constant warfare between the trades.

To maintain that state of tranquility, the officers of the Chicago Building Trades council have asked associated trades to abide by the decision of the old tribunal.

The appeal was sponsored by Patrick F. Sullivan, head of the trades council, and it met with the almost unanimous support of other building trades officials. Further adjustment is open on appeal of local trades to the international unions involved or to the building trades department of the A. F. of L.

Call Session Vacations.

Mr. Sullivan's action, builders aver, is in keeping with the constructive program he inaugurated when he became president of the council.

When the jurisdictional awards tribunal was abolished, the executives of international building trades maintained they could settle their disputes without the aid of builders and engineers. They declared that sessions of the board were enjoyed by board members as recreational vacations. Decisions, they said, were so flexible that both trades involved in controversy could interpret them favorably and claim victory.

At one hearing of the jurisdictional tribunal, union officials aver, the Chicago representative on the board voted for a decision against the bricklayers and then went to the latter's delegates and told them they shouldn't stand for such a "rotten award." This line of tactics undermined the union officers' confidence in the personnel of the jurisdictional board of awards, it was said.

Builders Want Peace.

"Chicago builders are interested in the absolute elimination of jurisdictional disputes between trades," said Oscar W. Rosenthal, head of the Builders' Association of Chicago.

"While I believe the builders, who spend vast sums of money, should have some representation in settlement of jurisdictional disputes, the action taken by Mr. Sullivan is to be commended. It shows he wants to purge the industry of controversies that may arise and maintain the present peaceful conditions."

Suggestion has been made to open the membership of the building trades council to various teamsters' unions. Michael Artery of the Machinery Movers' union asks:

"Why not open it to the Meat Cutters?"

Andrew J. Thomas, New York architect, will be the supervising architect for construction of the $5,000,000 Marshall Field garden apartment building, which is being erected on the north side. It will be completed in 1929. Mr. Thomas sees in the construction of such buildings the solution of the housing and tenement problem.

DRAW PLANS FOR $350,000 FLATS ON PRATT BLVD.

Architect Thomas R. Bishop has drawn plans for a sixty flat building which Harry Zisook, south side builder, will erect at the northwest corner of Pratt boulevard and Hilldale avenue. The structure will contain apartments ranging in size from three to five rooms and it is stated will represent an investment of $350,000. Claude C. Snyder, of the Ritchie Bond & Mortgage company, assembled the site, 178x135 feet, for Mr. Zisook. The former owners were Edward S. McGuire, Raymond F. Sederberk, Angela Waldbillig, and Samuel J. Linderoth.

ENLARGING INDUSTRIAL CHICAGO

NEWCOMER IN ROGERS PARK

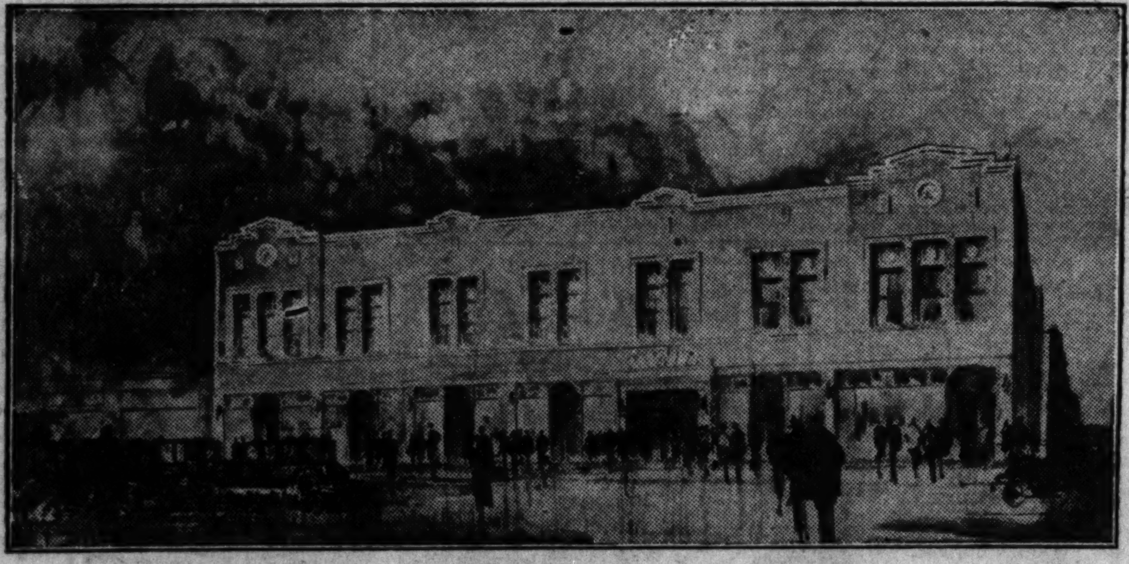
ALBANY PARK MASONIC TEMPLE



This is the Albany Park Masonic Temple building to be erected at the southwest corner of Kedzie and Leland avenues, as told about in this department on June 7. Edward P. Steinberg is architect. Zenith lodge, Zenith chapter, and the Albert B. Ashler lodge have made leases. Mayfair lodge and Mayfair chapter are considering renting quarters. Herman Elenbogen, president of the Lawrence Avenue National bank and vice president of the West Side National bank, is owner. The cost is placed at $150,000. E. Johnson made the above picture.

NEW CATHOLIC PARISH PLANS CHURCH, SCHOOL

The purchase by the Catholic bishop of Chicago from Lewis C. Atwater of a parcel 75x125 feet in Washtenaw avenue 123 feet south of 70th street completes the site at the southwest corner of Washtenaw and 70th for a new parish plant. The new parish is to be known as St. Adrian's and buildings to be erected on the land will include a church, school and convent. It is estimated the cost of the buildings will be about $200,000.

AINSLIE STREET FLATS SOLD.

Bruno J. and Elizabeth Krause sold the three flats at 2524 Ainslie street to George and Helen Alexander for a reported $28,000. James L. Holmes and Henry F. Hawkins were brokers.

COLLINS BUYS FLAT BUILDING.

Michael Collins bought from Jens C. Neilsen the six flats at 2035-37 East 72d place for a reported $40,000 subject to $25,500. David MacGillivray of Swanson & House was broker.

BUYS RHODES-72D CORNER.

Edith Wineberg and Mollie Friedman sold the southwest corner of 72d and Rhodes avenues to S. J. Nichols for a reported $51,000. Landfield & Levin were attorneys. Benjamin Baltzer and T. F. McFarland were brokers.

DUTCH COLONIAL IS DESIGN FOR NORTH SIDE FLAT

Structure to Rise on Glenwood.

Construction is starting on an apartment building of picturesque appearance at 6540 Glenwood avenue, Rogers Park, just west of the Loyola L station. The front elevation will be featured by half timber work and stucco—the design being colonial of Dutch inspiration.

The structure will be three stories high, with an English basement. It will be of the corridor type and will contain thirty-two apartments, consisting of living room, dressing room, pullman kitchen and bathroom.

Paul O. Olson is the owner. It is estimated that the project will represent an investment of $150,000 in land, building and furnishings. The lot is 50x124 feet. Ernest W. J. Hughes & Co. have underwritten a $90,000 bond issue.

Jens Jensen is the architect for the structure, which will be called the Loyola Glen apartments.

STEBBINS BROS. START ON LAKE STREET BUILDING

Work has just started on a five story building at 62 East Lake street, in the block between Michigan and Wabash, and adjoining on the west the new De Paul university skyscraper. Alfred S. Alschuler is architect. It is being erected by the Stebbins brothers, owners of the Stebbins Hardware company, 15 West Van Buren street, but not for their own use. It will be rented for shops and studios. The exterior will be in the modern style, of cream colored terra cotta, black marble and bronze.

The Chicago Lighting Fixture company has leased the entire second floor and part of the third as a display room and studio. Gordon Strong & Co. are renting agents for the new structure, which is to be ready for occupancy Oct. 1st.

EGG DEALERS BUY.

Teichner & Schneider, egg dealers, bought from William J. Kehl the one story building at 450-52 North Sangamon street for a reported $24,000. They exercised an option to purchase. A. T. Hanley of E. N. Durlein & Co. was broker.

CHICAGO OFFICE BUILDINGS LEAD IN TAX PAYMENTS

Average Height for Nation Is 11.5 Stories.

Office buildings in Chicago are taxed a greater part in proportion to their rental income than those of any other large city in the country, according to a report recently completed by the National Association of Building Owners and Managers. In a survey of fifty-five of the major cities of the nation the association finds that Chicago building owners pay out 19.8 cents of every dollar collected in rent, while the average for the other towns is 15.9 cents.

Other cities above the average are Cleveland, Detroit, Buffalo, and Spokane. The report reveals the constantly upward trend of taxes—the one item that is beyond the control of the building manager. Following steady increases up to that point, the taxes in 1924 amounted to 33.2 cents per square foot of rentable floor area. In 1925 the taxes increased to 33.8 cents per square foot. The next year they advanced to 35.2 cents per square foot and in 1927 the taxes amounted to 35.9 cents per square foot.

Operating Costs Stationary.

Meanwhile operating expenses remained practically stationary. The report is one of the most elaborate prepared by the association and covers the detailed expenses of individual buildings in the various cities. Although actual experience figures are given for each building, there are no identifying marks of the buildings contributing to the report.

One of the striking tabulations is the operating ratio of old and new buildings and the intermediate classifications. This tabulation reveals the fact that it costs about 20 per cent more to operate an old building than a new building of corresponding proportions. The cost of alterations, remodeling, etc., in the oldest buildings is 50 per cent higher than in the new buildings. The old buildings, however, due largely to their location at the strategic positions in business centers, derive a much higher income from the rental of store space.

The report reveals the fact that the average American "skyscraper" is 11.5 stories high; that it has a rental area of 105,981 square feet; that it is 17.6 years old; and that it has a tax valuation of $10.89 per rentable square foot. Office buildings in small cities of less than 100,000 population have an advantage over buildings in the larger cities in lower operating expenses, construction costs and fixed charges, including taxes. They have, however, a lower income per square foot. The net income of small cities, on the other hand, compares favorably with the net income of the larger cities on a dollar for dollar valuation of land and building.

"The information contained in the report aside from its general interest is regarded as the most authoritative index to the efficiency of office building operation," said Graham Aldis of Chicago, chairman of the accounting and exchange committee. "Building owners and managers are able to make comparative analyses of their own performance by means of the report. It is likewise invaluable to capitalists, promoters and investment houses contemplating new projects, inasmuch as the highly competitive character of the office building field and the high cost of building demand the most careful and conservative scrutiny of the prospects of any contemplated building."

Joseph Rice Leases Bldg. at 611 Barry for Ten Years

Lenelle A. Colbrath leased to Joseph Rice for ten years the flat building at 611-13 Barry avenue, operated as furnished apartments. The rental is $66,000. Merton R. Fish & Co. were brokers.

CITY AND STATE HOLD 2D PLACE IN BUILDING RACE

'28 Figures Show Drop from Those of '27.

Illinois held second place among the forty-eight states of the union and Chicago maintained its second place among the leading cities of the nation, according to a six months' review in this state made by the building survey department of S. W. Straus & Co. However, the figures for this period fell off from those of the first six months of 1927.

Numerous state cities showed gains for the six months period, the most notable of which and their respective increases were: Kenilworth, 207 per cent; Freeport, 153 per cent; Quincy, 126 per cent; La Grange, 84 per cent; Wilmette, 75 per cent, and Chicago Heights, 50 per cent. Other cities making gains in the six months' comparison were: Aurora, Bloomington, Elgin, Elmwood Park, Glen Ellyn, Harvey, Highland Park, Joliet, Maywood, Moline, Oak Park, and Peoria.

June gains for Illinois cities were even more phenomenal. Important gains in June this year over the same month last year were as follows: Harvey, 254 per cent; West Chicago, 245 per cent; Mount Prospect, 230 per cent; Danville, 179 per cent; Moline, 162 per cent; Wilmette, 148 per cent; River Forest, 113 per cent; Rockford, 106 per cent, and Maywood, 100 per cent. Other June gains included Chicago Heights, Highland Park, Kenilworth, Lombard, Quincy, and Springfield.

Comparative Illinois figures for the first six months of 1928 and 1927 were:

GLATT & MOLNER ERECT 86 FLATS ON EAST END AVE.

Investment in Building and Land $550,000.

Work has just started on a large apartment building at 7020-38 East End avenue which, together with the land, it is stated will represent an investment of about $550,000.

Designed by Architect L. Griser, the structure is to be of the court type. Each of its double courts is to be landscaped and a feature of the development will be a playground where children may quarrel and play without the danger of their getting in the way of automobiles.

The exterior is to be of tangerine colored face brick, trimmed with pink hydro-stone.

The interior will be divided into eighty-six apartments ranging in size from three to five rooms. Each apartment will be equipped with mechanical refrigeration. There will be canvas walls throughout and all the bathrooms will be done in colors.

Entry will be through an attractive lobby forty-five feet long and twenty-five feet wide. The lobby is to be furnished with comfortable furniture.

Glatt & Molner are the general contractors and owners. This is the first of a series of fifty or more large buildings which the firm contemplates erecting. The structure in hand will be completed about Jan. 1. It is situated a block from the Illinois Central.

BUYS KENILWORTH RESIDENCE.

FARM AND GARDEN

FARMERS KEEP BOOKS SHOWING PROFIT AND LOSS

Co-operate in Project to Help Agriculture.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

There is great contrast between the pioneer and modern farmers' methods of keeping farm records. Not long ago I visited a farm formerly owned by an old corn belter who used a sharp jack knife for a pen and the sharp corners of two by fours for paper in keeping his records. In the aged granary which was built by this old timer, nearly 100 years ago, his records of "grain in" and "grain out" are still preserved in notches on the rafters joists and uprights.

Bookkeeping might not have been so essential among pioneer farmers who produced most of the family's food and clothing on their own farms, but business methods demanded in farming today call for a carefully kept set of books. Too many still use the notch stick system. The farmer without a set of books is guessing and he cannot argue convincingly about his losses or profits. Not many are successful where they continue to guess without knowing which crop is losing or making money.

200 Farmers Coöperate.

Guesses have been taken out of farming for 200 central Illinois farmers, who are keeping books on everything that takes place on their farms. Now they know the truth about whether they are losing or gaining; they know what brings in net profit and what causes the losses.

Whether there is money to be made in farming under the present conditions is indicated in the report of the facts uncovered from the records of these farmers, who are coöperating with each other through the department of farm management and organization at the University of Illinois. A summary of their books, issued recently by H. M. C. Case, who is in charge of the work, and M. L. Mosher shows some significant facts about profit and losses on some of the finest farms in the United States.

No Return for Their Labor.

The report says that an average of 3.7 per cent on the entire farm investment, after deducting all expenses and $720 allowance for the value of the operator's labor, was made by the 200 farmers who are coöperating in the farm bureau-farm management service. Case and Mosher, expressing the earnings in another way, say that these farmers, after paying all expenses of operating their farms and allowing 5 per cent interest charge on the investment, lacked $46 per farm of getting any return for their own labor.

The report shows that in addition to the above earnings each family secured produce from the farm which, based on records kept on 188 farms, amounted to $439.15 at farm prices. The investment in the farm residence and the expense for repairs and upkeep on it were not included in these accounts. Therefore the use of the residence is not considered as income from the farm.

The 200 farms are located in the heart of the corn belt in Livingston, McLean, Tazewell and Woodford counties. The average investment in land, buildings, live stock, and other equipment was $253.81 per acre with land valued at $192.84.

Higher than the Average.

These farmers made a much better showing than many of their neighbors, despite the fact that they paid nearly $50 a piece for the privilege of working a whole year. Case and Mosher point out that the income figures given in their report should not be considered as representatives of all farms in these four counties. Their studies indicate that the 200 farmers earned about 2 per cent higher rate on the investment than the average of all farms in the same part of the state.

In order to show the wide variation in the earnings of these farmers, Case and Mosher have taken forty of the most successful and forty of the least successful. Their figures show that the forty most profitable of the 200 farms made 5 per cent interest on the investment and had $1,643 to pay to the operator for his own labor and management, while the forty least profitable farms lacked $1,352 of making 5 per cent on the investment and left nothing to the operator for his labor and management.

This amounts to a total difference of $2,995 in the return of the labor and management of the operators between the high and low groups of farms, according to the report. The expert accountants put it another way by saying that after all expenses were paid and the operator allowed $720 for his own labor, the most profitable group made 6.58 per cent on the investment, while the least profitable group made only .9 per cent on the money invested.

"The one-fifth most profitable farms (40 farms) had an income of $28.73 an acre, while the one-fifth least profitable farms had an income of only $17.06 per acre," said Case and Mosher. "The total expenses per acre on the two groups of farms were $12.42 and $14.77 per acre, respectively. In other words, the most profitable group of farms with $2.35 less expense per acre received $11.67 larger returns per acre. The least profitable farms were somewhat smaller in size on the average and they had a little larger investment per acre."

Records Grow in Value.

The farm management project organized among the farmers four years ago has attracted wide attention among agriculturists. The records grow more valuable each year to the farmers who keep them and to economists who are looking for facts.

The co-operative plan is designed to help farmers keep accounts, enabling them to study the efficiency with which they are conducting their farm business and to help them apply to their individual farms the practices in farm organization and operation which have proved profitable on other farms of a similar type.

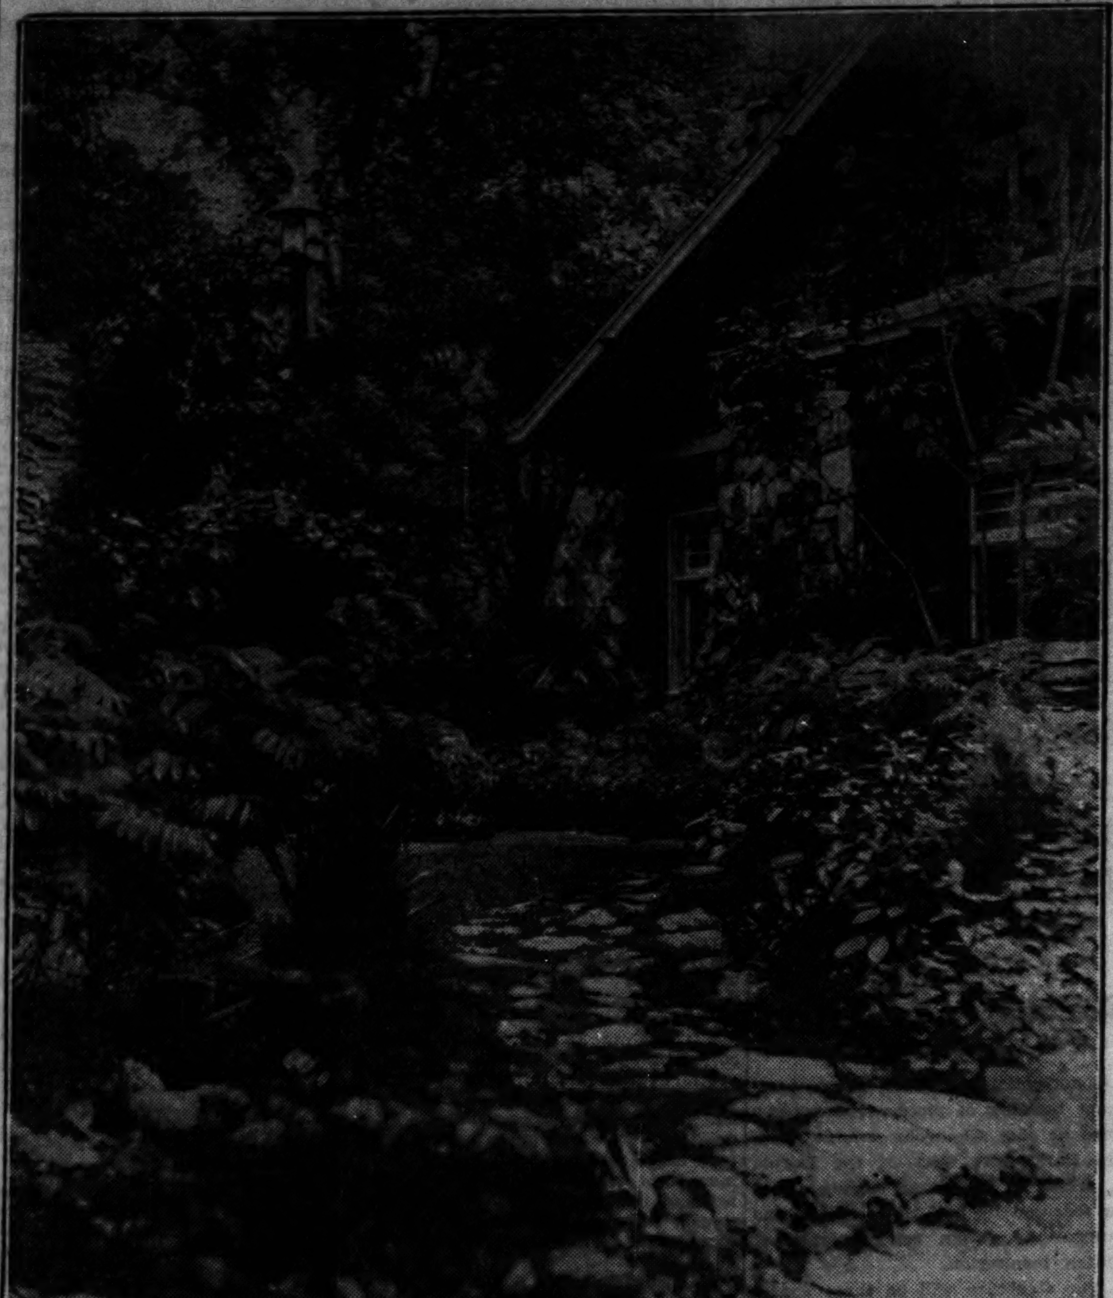
Mr. Mosher gives all of his time to the work of helping the farmers keep their books straight. Every farmer co-operating is visited at least three times during each year. Mr. Case, who is in charge of the work, acts in co-operation with an advisory committee consisting of one representative from each of the four county farm bureaus.

It costs an average of about $30 per farm each year, and about 40 per cent of this cost is paid by the University of Illinois. The fee per farm varies from $10 to $20 a year, depending on the size of the farm. In two of the counties the farm bureaus pay a portion of the fee.

Most of the farmers co-operating in the project are continuing the work this year. This fall a complete analysis of the work for the last three years will be made and turned over to the farmers.

Later in this department there will be given some good lessons that come from the central Illinois coöperative farm booking project.

HOME AMONG TREES AND BIRDS



ONE OF MANY HUNDRED GARDENS IN TRIBUNE CONTEST—Mrs. J. Luce Smith, 1107 South 6th avenue, Maywood, Ill., has entered this natural, informal garden to compete for a share of the $6,000 offered by The Tribune in its second home flower garden competition, which is to be judged soon.

The home, as well as the garden, was designed by Mrs. Smith four years ago. Wild flowers dominate the place in the spring, while a pool and waterfall take the center of the stage in the summer

MOTOR FUMES RUIN TREES WITH ROUGH LEAVES

PARIS.—Smooth leaved trees, say experts at Paris, are the only ones that can live on city boulevards in this day of automobiles. Only those whose foliage is washed by rain and dusted off by the breeze, they believe, will thrive. They have found that the rough leaves of chestnuts and similar trees have their breathing pores burned by sulphuric acid.

Sulphurous dust, says Prof. Demorlaine of the Agricultural institute, is produced by the exhaust from automobiles. This, he says, becomes sulphuric acid in humid air and works into the pores of the leaves. Smooth leaves would be washed clean by occasional rains, or the dust would be blown off by winds before it could damage the trees.

Maine Hen Lays 3 Eggs Joined Together at Ends

BOSTON.—Eggs all hitched together in a string like Christmas tree ornaments startled Clifton W. Meservey of Union, Me., when he peered into one of his pullet's nests. There were three eggs joined together and collectively they were nearly five inches long. But the ambitious pullet, in laying her freak eggs, overlooked something. Not one of them had a yolk.

Farm Boys and Girls Will Sell Cattle at Auction

The International Live Stock exposition officials announce that the annual weekly sales of baby beeves raised by farm boys and girls in calf clubs will again be conducted at the Union Stock Yards each Tuesday afternoon during the fall fair season. The auctions are held under the auspices of the international which is managed by B. H. Heide.

The first sale this season will be held Aug. 14. The auction idea was started at the Union Stock Yards for the purpose of furnishing a satisfactory outlet for these high quality animals and to encourage the raising and feeding of baby beeves by boys and girls on the farm.

Annual Fall Events.

The sales have become annual fall events, attracting wide interest in live stock circles. The first one was held in 1924 and they have been conducted every year since. Only 549 calves were sold in the first auction, but the next year the number increased to 1,024, and in 1926 1,652 were sold. Last fall in eleven auctions 1,819 went under the hammer at the yards, bringing a total of $246,851.15.

In selling their baby beeves through these auctions farm boys and girls consign their animals to a marketing agency at the Chicago Union Stock Yards in the same way their fathers send in shipments. The calves are then put through the auction system. There are no charges for the auction other than the regular market expense.

Beef cattle are scarce in this country and it is the wise farmer who is making every lick count when it comes to fattening his calves for the market. In cattle feeding, nowadays, it is the aim of many good farmers to get their animals ready for the butcher's block as soon as possible.

Tips on Fattening.

E. T. Robbins, live stock specialist of the college of agriculture at Urbana, says that calves have a taste for succulent pasture forage that often causes them to fill up on it to the extent that they eat little grain, a factor that must be overcome if they are to be fattened.

"To keep calves from eating too much forage, which promotes growth, and to make them eat corn in large amounts in order to gain weight, it is necessary to keep them out of the pasture a good share of the time. Pasture, however, is a good place for calves to spend the night, because they will not overeat and the dew on the grass will keep their hoofs in good shape. During the day they are kept in the barn away from the flies and are fed large amounts of corn and hay," explained Robbins, who finds that usually the little eating that calves do during the night will not seriously affect their appetite for grain.

51 MORE JUDGES CHOSEN TO PICK GARDEN WINNERS

Visits to Contestants to Start Next Week.

Forty-two garden clubs coöperating with THE TRIBUNE in its amateur flower garden contest have practically completed their plans for the judging which is to start next week. More than 240 judges have been selected by officials of the various organizations. These will represent the clubs in determining the winners of the $6,000 offered by this newspaper for the best ninety-nine gardens out of hundreds entered in the competition.

All the coöperating clubs have their committees completed except one. The judges are practical gardeners, members of city and suburban clubs affiliated with the Garden Club of Illinois.

In carrying out the provisions of the contest the judges plan to visit every garden competing for the cash awards. In order to give the contestants plenty of time to get their gardens "primped" before the judges make their tours the contestants have been notified by mail that the committees will start their work throughout the contest zone on Wednesday, Aug. 8.

Believed Best Time for All.

This date has been selected by the club representatives as being the time when the greatest number of midsummer gardens will be in the best condition. Proper allowance will be made for the blossoms that may have recently faded or plants with buds not yet open. In a great contest of this kind, covering an area that stretches along the shore of Lake Michigan for approximately eighty miles and forty miles to the west, the judges find it impossible to visit every garden at the time it happens to be at its best.

Special consideration will be given the efforts of the gardener no matter how old or new his garden may be. An uniform system of scoring will be used and every plot will be carefully considered.

Interest in the contest has increased. Dozens of entries have been sent in recently. Many gardens not entered in the contest apparently have turned out better than their owners had expected. Unfortunately, however, recent entries could not be accepted. They came too late to compete for prizes since the entry list closed on May 21, more than two months ago.

More Judges Chosen.

The names of approximately 200 judges were published in last Sunday's TRIBUNE. Below are the names of the 51 judges appointed since then. They are listed under the clubs they are to represent:

BARRINGTON GARDEN CLUB: Committee No. 1—Mrs. H. Stillson Hart, chairman; Mrs. Evan Evans, Mrs. Robert Work. Committee No. 2—Mrs. Marvin E. Miner, Jr., chairman; Mrs. Potter Smith, Mrs. George E. Van Hagen Jr.

BEVERLY HILLS WOMAN'S CLUB [Floriculture Department]: Committee No. 1—Mrs. J. F. Baldwin, chairman; Mrs. T. M. Pratt, Mrs. William J. Lowitz. Committee No. 2—Mrs. G. B. Morris, chairman; Mrs. Holland Flagler, Mrs. Edgar H. Walker.

CHICAGO HEIGHTS WOMAN'S CLUB [Floriculture Dept.]: Committee No. 1—Mrs. Edna Harley Hawes, chairman; Mrs. D. T. McClure, Mrs. Homer Abbott. Committee No. 2—Mrs. E. G. Klingler, chairman; Mrs. W. Frank McEldowney, Mrs. J. C. Lauer.

CRYSTAL LAKE GARDEN CLUB [Iris Chapter]: Committee No. 1—Mrs. Austin Felz, chairman; Mrs. R. H. Talenske, Mrs. Earle Thinney. Committee No. 2—Mrs. B. A. Hungerford, chairman: Mrs. Charles Barker, Mrs. Charles Moses.

GARDEN CLUB OF EVANSTON: Committee No. 1—Mrs. E. Royce Armstrong, chairman; Mrs. Charles L. Bartlett, Mrs. John H. S. Lee. S. Lee. Committee No. 2—Mrs. Lansing B. Warner, chairman; Mrs. Horace Capron, Mrs. William Evans.

LITTLE GARDEN CLUB OF EVANSTON: Committee No. 1—Mrs. F. A. Pontious, chairman; Mrs. C. S. Graves, Mrs. Edward Walder. Committee No. 2—Mrs. F. C. Minkler, chairman; Mrs. Fred M. Wheeler, Mrs. Theodore V. Houser.

GLEN ELLYN GARDEN CLUB [Iris chapter]: Committee No. 1—Mrs. Joseph R. Buell, chairman; Mrs. William F. Jensen, Mrs. F. W. Gulbrandson. Committee No. 2—Mrs. Fred J. Mabrey, chairman; Mrs. William H. Robertson, Mrs. W. L. Ballou.

LAKE BLUFF GARDEN CLUB: Committee No. 1—Mrs. H. L. Wessling, chairman; Mrs. Hardy Buckles, Mrs. Stewart Reed Brown.

LOMBARD GARDEN CLUB: Committee No. 2—Mrs. George Potwin, chairman; Mrs. L. R. Tomlinson, Mrs. H. P. Flint.

ST. CHARLES GARDEN CLUB: Committee No. 2—Mrs. Joseph E. Callender, chairman; Mrs. James Richmond, Mrs. Robert Munn.

Within the next few days the gardens, which are to be visited by the judges working in groups of three, will be assigned to the various committees. Judges expect to visit in one day all the gardens assigned to them.

INDIANA STATE FAIR WILL MAKE FEATURE OF "INJUN SUMMER"

Walter Q. Fitch of Purdue university announces that "Injun Summer," John T. McCutcheon's famous cartoon, will be reproduced in a special feature exhibit at the Indiana state fair which is to be held at Indianapolis, Sept. 1-8. The cartoon first appeared in THE TRIBUNE in the autumn of 1907 and has been reproduced in response to requests practically every year since.

Mr. Fitch plans to arrange an adaptation of this cartoon to harmonize with the contents of the agricultural-horticultural building in which "Injun Summer" will be the main feautre. The orginial cartoon as drawn by McCutcheon shows two scenes—the first one depicts an old man sitting on a log under a tree near a corn field telling a story to a small boy of how the Indian spirits come creeping back each year to do their dances in the autumn haze.

In the second scene the corn shocks have been transformed into Indian tepees and the old Indian spirits may be seen dancing in the haze and moonlight, so vivid is the old man's description of "Injun Summer.". Mr. Fitch will impose one scene upon the other with a "fade-out and in" effect to correspond with the story that will accompany the exhibit.

On either side of the center of the exhibit will be a cornucopia—one will be pouring out pumpkins of all sizes, shapes and colors, and the other pouring out rich, golden corn, for which Indiana is famous. As a background of each of these side wings will be an autumn scene typical of the "Injun summer" haze.

Written in the sky, near each of these cornucopias, will be the two following quotations:

"When the frost is on the pumpkin,
And the fodder's in the shock."

The other:
"Heap high the golden corn,
No richer gift has autumn poured
From out her lavish horn."

Paul Mather of Valparaiso, Ind., a former student of the Chicago Art institute, has been selected to carry out the plans and to do the art work in connection with the exhibit.

LOOKING BACKWARD

To July 29, 1918; 10 Years Ago Today

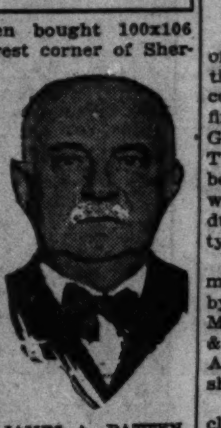
The trustees of the Central Manufacturing district will erect for the United States government a huge cold storage warehouse in 39th street, opposite McKinley park, between Hoyne and Seeley avenues, with a fronage of 303 feet on 39th street. The main building will be six stories high, 223x323 feet ground dimensions. Connected with it will be a machinery and ice plant, 140x140 feet, having two floors and basement; also a train shed which will be used by the Chicago Junction railway. The investment will be $3,000,000. Scott Joy is architect. The plant will be operated under the direction of Col. A. D. Kniskern.

A. D. KNISKERN.

Alline P. Woodworth of Rome, Italy, and the estate of Frances C. Adams of New York City sold to Isaac Marblestone, the property on the south side of Van Buren street, east of Halsted, adjoining on the east the right of way of the Metropolitan elevated railway. The land is improved with a three story building. It has been in the hands of the family selling it for seventy-one years.

To July 29, 1908; 20 Years Ago Today

James A. Patten bought 100x106 feet at the northwest corner of Sherman and Polk streets from John B. Adams and 110x106 feet on Sherman adjoining on the north from the Catholic Bishop of Chicago. The consideration for the two holdings was $200,000. Mr. Patten will erect a building on the land, which will be devoted to the printing industry. It will be eight stories high and will cost from $275,000 to $300,000.



JAMES A. PATTEN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

R. Bruce Watson bought from John H. Young the property at the northeast corner of Montrose and Sheridan, 93x124 feet, with stone residence improvements, for $22,000. Mr. Watson plans to erect a fifteen flat building on the land.

The twenty-one flat building at 6037-39 Washington avenue has been sold by O. F. Lenz through H. G. and A. L. Howard, to Louise Miller, a nominal consideration being given in the deed.

Trades Ashland Flats for Briar Apartments

Henry Valk traded his sixteen flats at 4630 North Ashland with Philip Zundel for the thirty-eight furnished apartments at 640 Briar place through A. E. Goeske & Co.

To July 29, 1898; 30 Years Ago Today

Armour & Co. will soon begin the construction of a mammoth elevator on the site of one recently destroyed by fire at 22d street and the south branch of the river. The cost will be in the neighborhood of $350,000. It will have a capacity of 1,500,000 bushels. The concern has just commenced the rebuilding of its glue works, also recently destroyed by fire. The structure will be located on Benson street, near James.

P. D. ARMOUR.

A tract of ten acres at the northwest corner of Ridge boulevard and Greenleaf avenue, Rogers Park, was sold by Mrs. C. C. Touhy to L. L. Smith for $25,000. A new subdivision will be laid out.

Keebler & Co. have just closed a large lease in the wholesale district for James B. Mallers to Cahn, Wampold & Co. for the entire building, excepting two floors at the northeast corner of Jackson and Market streets, for five years from Jan. 1, 1899 at a gross rental of $80,000 for the term.

DE LUXE FLATS TO BE PICTURED IN NEW BOOKLET

Howard Kenworthy Hall, formerly of Mark Levy & Brother and for some time with Baird & Warner, has just completed a compilation of most of the finest apartment buildings from the Gold Coast north to the city limits. The booklet, now being printed and to be ready for distribution in a few weeks, will show photographic reproductions of exteriors, interiors, and typical floor plans.

The pictures will include buildings managed by Ross & Browne, Willoughby & Co., Winston & Co., McMenemy & Martin, Sudler & Co., Kirkham, Hayes & Co., Baird & Warner, and others. Approximately 120 buildings will be shown.

"The increasing number of high class apartments on the north side presents a perplexing problem when a prospective tenant begins to make a canvass for an apartment home," said Mr. Hall. "Lack of familiarity with locations, size of apartments and rentals cause a prospective tenant a great deal of lost time and energy and not infrequently it'll cause one to accept a flat not exactly suited to his or her liking or requirements, rather than endure the fatigue of further search. This portofolio is to relieve this situation."

HISTORIAN JOLTS THOSE WHO WANT WORLD TO PAUSE

BY HARPER LEECH.

In the August number of Harper's Magazine, Dr. Charles A. Beard, one of the greatest historians this country ever fathered, goes to the mat with the new decadents and defeatists—although he does not call them that. In setting forth his faith in the vitality of western civilization Dr. Beard gives the weight of his authority to two doctrines which have been continuously preached in this column—although the prevailing trend of "business literature" takes scant account of them. Dr Beard says change is the law of life of our civilization and he maintains that our civilization is absolutely new—unique—just as Mr. Clifford Raymond has said.

Expert on Civilizations.

Dr. Beard is a connoisseur of civilizations. The Japanese government paid him much money as an advisor in their cultural transformation and he knows the orient as few men do. He told this writer once that if the Japanese could have kept their old culture, it would have been a great thing.

A Japanese newspaper man dropped in here the other day and when I asked him why they had junked their own creation for ours—he asked rather grimly whether America could have survived and kept her independence, if she had preserved her Jeffersonian republic of squires and small farmers in a world of industrial nations armed to the teeth with modern technology—a sort of armament that makes the whole agenda of pacifists and war outlawers fundamentally silly.

Of course, the Japanese regretted the change in his ancestral culture; most Americans of the older stocks have a hankering for Jeffersonian simplicity and agrarian social conditions. But the world rushes along, propelled by ever mounting millions of horsepower. That momentum has brushed aside the most formidable political attempts to revive the old order-as in 1896.

Even Decay Is Transitory.

Will American capitalism, however, retain its elasticity and vitality in the face of all the vested interest which seek short sightedly that stability, which in the end means detrrioration and decay.

The clamor in the business press for budgetary production—the cry for the junking of the Sherman law and the adoption here of the stifling European cartel, the steady institutionalizing of business in great corporations, the phenomenon of halting New England give cause for disquiet. Capitalism is not equipped with automatic accelerators—the impulses which have prevented its crystallization into a rigid civilization like all its predecessors, have come from without its mechanism of finance and exchange. There have been periods when it has been stalled on a dead center. Then came a great gold discovery, a war, a railroad building mania or a great new industry like the automobile to shake it free and set it going at greater speed.

Science Weds Industry.

Now we have developed a new force which promises perpetual acceleration. The marriage of industry and science—as witnessed in such meetings as the American Chemical Society institute in session at Evanston, the American Institute of Meat Packers, and the Society of Physicists at the University of Chicago last fall, or the American Petroleum institute last December all reveal to the observer that the engineer, physicist and chemist have at last got the upper hand in industry and will compel constant innovations.

Research is the enemy of stability, declares Charles F. Kettering, president of General Motors Research corporation. Change is the law of life, Charles A. Beard reminds us. Research is in the saddle. American civilization is fairly bursting with surplus virility. Most of its so called faults are the joyous magnanimous sins of abundance.

N. Y. BOND MART TURNS EASY ON PROFIT TAKING

New York, July 28.—(AP)—Prices generally were easier in today's dull and brief session of the bond market. Utilities and some rails made small advances, but most of the list felt the pressure of week-end profit-taking and general apprehension over the credit situation. U. S. government bonds were a bit firmer, but comparatively few changed hands.

St. Paul 5½s gave the outstanding demonstration of strength in the railroad group today, advancing more than 3 points, but on a small turnover the other St. Paul issues sagged. West Shore 4s extended their recent gains another 1½ points, while the Missouri Pacific issues made fractional gains.

The decline of Dodge Brothers 6s, which sagged to 94 and then recovered fractionally after opening at 95, down 1½ points net on the day, was the feature of the industrial group. Coppers lost their gains of yesterday. Public Service of New Jersey 4½s and Columbia Gas and Electric 5s were strong spots among the utilities.

Business in Smoked Meats Leads Packing House Lines

Armour & Co. in its review of general packing house trade conditions says:

"Smoked meats business continued to lead in strength and activity among principal packing house lines with a good demand at stronger prices. Demand for dressed beef was further curtailed. Lamb prices were about steady. Dressed lamb and veal trade was irregular. The supply of fresh pork cuts was light and about equal to demand."

Two Firms Form Merger to Supply Beauty Parlors

Cleveland, O., July 28.—(AP)—A merger with the C. Nestle company of New York, largest manufacturer of permanent waving machines and beauty parlor supplies, is announced by J. C. Murray, president and founder of the Le Mur company of Cleveland. The deal will combine stock interests totaling approximately $5,000,000.

Stocks Extend Recent Upturn as Week Ends

YESTERDAY'S AVERAGES

	High.	Low.	Last.	Net chge.
25 railroads	119.60	119.36	119.46+	.13
25 industrials	262.30	260.27	261.52+	1.14
50 stocks	190.90	189.76	190.39+	.64

New York, July 28.—[Special.]—The stock market in today's week-end session extended the upward movement of prices that had been in progress for several days. The market theaded upward at the opening, hesitated at the end of the first hour when profit taking appeared, and again advanced rather vigorously in the final hour.

The optimistic tone of the weekly mercantile reviews, the excellent half year earnings report of the General Motors corporation and expectation that the report of the United States Steel corporation, to be issued next Tuesday, also will be favorable did much to encourage buying sentiment. Strong buying of the mail order and some of the motor shares by western houses also was evident.

Professionals Support Market.

While the market continued largely professional, it was evident that strong support was being given in the standard industrials, while at the same time pool operators bid up some of the specialties. But some increase in public participation also was apparent. The combination of buying power was amply sufficient to absorb profit taking sales. The volume of trading was moderate, with total transactions of 864,000 shares.

Sharp advances in Montgomery Ward, Hudson Motors and Cudahy Packing were features. Montgomery Ward rose 6¾ points to a new peak at 177¾ on report of record July sales. Hudson was run up to 85⅝ and closed at 85, up 4 points, and Cudahy advanced 3½ points to 73. Sears Roebuck also was in demand and gained more than a point.

Standard Industrials Seesaw.

The standard industrials were irregular. United States Steel got up to 145⅝, the best price in several weeks, but dropped back to 144¼ at the close for a small fractional net loss. American Smelting and International Harvester also lost more than a point each. On the other hand, General Motors, Radio, Du Pont, and Allied Chemical gained a point or so. American Can, American Telephone, General Electric, and Pullman showed mixed fractional net changes.

Chrysler Motor and Dodge preferred certificates were off a point or two on doubt whether the merger will be consummated but Dodge common and preferred were strong. The other motor issues were strong, with the Chandler-Cleveland shares, Hupp Motor, International Combustion, Nash Motor and Packard gaining a point or more.

General List Is Strong.

In the industrial list, American Express advanced four points and smaller gains were made by Air Reduction, American International, American Machine and Foundry, Arnold Constable, Atlantic Refining, Best, By-Products Coke, Case Threshing, Chickasha Cotton Oil, Commonwealth Power, Curtiss Aero, Eastman Kodak, Electric Autolite, Fairbanks Morse, International Telephone, Kraft Cheese, Lambert, Manhattan Electrical Supply, Mathieson Alkali, National Surety, Otis Elevator, Park and Tilford, Peoples Gas, Philadelphia Company, Sun Oil, Western Union, and Woolworth.

A few issues ran counter to the upward trend. Abitibi Power dropped 3⅝ points and losses of a point or more were incurred by Grand Union, International Nickel, Liquid Carbonic, and Rossia Insurance.

The railroad group was dull and narrow. The only issue to show more than a fractional net change was St. Louis Southwestern, which advanced 1⅜ points.

Business Failures Fewer; Bank Clearings Increase

New York, July 28.—A decided betterment in the insolvency record is shown this week, with a total of 356 failures in the United States. This is 70 less than last week's total, and is 80 below the 436 defaults reported to R. G. Dun & Co. a year ago.

Larger bank clearings than a year ago continue to be reported, although the margin of gain this week is considerably reduced. The total of $8,853,836,000 for leading cities of the United States is 1.1 per cent in excess of the amount for the same period of 1927, but average daily bank clearings for July to date show an increase of 9.0 per cent.

Report Erie May Offer New Preferred for Old

New York, July 28.—(AP)—Erie railroad directors are reported to be placing an exchange of two new shares of 6 per cent preferred stock and $3 in cash for three shares of 4 per cent first preferred, and two shares of new preferred for each three shares of 4 per cent second preferred outstanding. A special meeting of directors may be called, it was said, before the next regular meeting on Aug. 24, to give ample time for approval by stockholders and the interstate commerce commission before the end of the year. The cash distribution to preferred holders would be about $479,000.

Youngstown Steel Mills Operating Near Capacity

Youngstown, O., July 28.—Steel operations in the Youngstown area are being maintained at 90 per cent with no prospects of a let down in the current heavy rate, as consumers are pressing for requirements. Sheet rollers are booked into September in most cases. The outlook for this branch of the industry in the fall is said to be the best in a long time.

More Money in Circulation and $40.52 Is Your Share

Washington, D. C., July 28.—Per capita circulation of money in the United States increased to $40.52 during June from $40.12 on May 31, 1928, according to the circulation statement of the treasury. This compares with $41.48 on June 30, 1927. The amount of money in circulation on June 30, 1928, was $4,796,621,260, as against $4,744,074,316 on May 30, 1928, and $4,851,325,356 on June 30, 1927.

LONDON STOCK PRICES DECLINE ON SELLING WAVE

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, July 28.—Plausible excuses are lacking for the weakness that developed in several sections of the stock market this week. Selling pressure in sections such as artificial silks and cement shares has been severe. A worse break was only prevented by last minute support from inside interests. There appears to be slight promise of immediate improvement.

The weakness of the sterling and dollar exchange fluttered the money market, the weakness suggesting that balances still are being transferred from London to New York.

Americans Are Selling.

At the moment Americans have called a halt in the purchases of British securities here, now being more inclined to sell. The Bank of England failed to secure gold available on the open market this week. Germany purchased practically the whole of the week's gold from South Africa.

The gilt edged section was satisfactory. The buying of the 5 per cent war loan still is prominent. This reflects the belief that the government will be unable to repay at par at the earliest date on the 1935 issue, but is alternatively to bring forward a conversion scheme by which the holders will have an opportunity to take up longer security on relatively favorable terms. India stocks and local loans again were active.

Mexican Issues Affected.

Mexican issues still are under the shadow of the political crisis, the holders of the bonds apparently becoming restive regarding the future of the next arrangements entered into some time ago.

The San Paulo 6 per cent loan was quickly oversubscribed this week at the issue price of 94½, dealings starting at a half premium in this section.

Home rails brightened on the week-end declaration of an interim dividend which proved rather better than was expected, while the market was assisted by prospective relief to the heavy industries by the proposals the government is making.

The Argentine rail section was considerably bettered on the information that both the Central and Great Southern lines agreed to adjust their tariffs in accord with the demands recently made by the government.

Speculative interest slackened appreciably in the industrial group and trading was generally restricted, although the tone was more firm at the close of the week. Gramophones, artificial silks, newspapers, cements, cables, and wireless, all were erratic and subject to a wide fluctuation, although the cables and wireless benefitted from the acquisition of the direct West India cable interests by the Eastern Telegraph group, and the recommendations of the imperial conference on empire communications, for a merger of all the cable and wireless interests.

Status of Other Sections.

Auto shares continue to receive a fair amount of attention.

Interest in the oil market is almost totally lacking. Neither America nor the continent at present appears inclined to give a definite lead, but the technical market position is such that favorable developments in the industry would readily be reflected in the share market.

Rubber and mines were more active.

Paris Bourse Is Quiet.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 28.—The bourse passed through a sluggish summer week, with the exception of two days when the market picked up cheerfully, following favorable reports from Wall street. It slumped back again the next day, although a number of shares remained firm despite the irregularities.

This is the season when the capital is practically deserted, with the exception of tourists, and the attendance at the bourse is exceptionally light, with the volume of transactions correspondingly small. The traders are expecting to rally on short covering, however, before the end of the month, due to recent selling and present lack of demand for stocks.

Sees Buying Power in West Much Increased This Year

"The buying power of the people of the west will be materially increased this year," Vice President A. C. Johnson of the Chicago and North Western, said yesterday returning from a tour of that system. "Crops are fine and the general result will be equal if not above last year. The financial situation in the trans-Mississippi territory is immensely improved and there is a soundness now that we believe will be maintained. There is money for all legitimate needs and there has been an elimination of concerns and unhealthy conditions that may have prevailed to a slight extent to a few districts in the west."

Magnolia Petroleum Co. Raises Crude Oil Prices

Dallas, Tex., July 28.—(AP)—The Magnolia Petroleum company today announced a general increase in the price for crude oil in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Arkansas and Louisiana. The new price was made retroactive to July 26.

The price for west Texas crude will be 65 cents per barrel at the well. Panhandle crude was listed at from 68 cents for under 32 gravity to $1.56 for 44 gravity and above. New prices on crude in Kansas, Oklahoma and the remainder of Texas were 75 cents for under 30 gravity to $1.76 for 44 gravity and above. Louisiana and Arkansas crude was listed at 61 cents below 28 gravity to $1.76 for 44 gravity and above.

Another Price Increase in Louisiana Crude Oil

Shreveport, La., July 28.—(AP)—Coincident with the announcement here today by the Texas company of an increase in the price of north Louisiana crude oil, ranging up to 22 cents a barrel, Root Refineries posted notice of an advance of 6 cents a barrel for Rainbow City, Arkansas crude of 33 gravity.

The top price quoted on Louisiana crude under the new schedule is $1.76 for 44 gravity and above, and a lower of 60 cents for 24 to 24.9 gravity. A 7 cent differential was announced in the price of gravity, including 32 to 32.9, and a 5 cent differential for the other grades.

TOPICS OF FINANCE AND TRADE

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago for the week ended July 25, 1928, by 250 banks in 37 leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,411,716,000, a decrease of 11.2 per cent comparied with a week ago ($1,589,970,000). Compared with the corresponding week of last year ($1,257,978,000), an increase of 12.3 per cent was shown.

Sheet rollers in the Youngstown area are booked into September in most cases. Fall outlook for this branch of industry has not been so promising for a long time. With consumers pressing for requirements and operations being maintained at 90 per cent, the steel corporation and independent makers report no present prospects of let-down in current heavy operating rate. Consumers are raising specifications in impressive manner in view of prospective price markups. Buyers evidently are seeking to cover their full requirements at current price levels.

The Roxana Petroleum corporation is expected to expend $5,500,000 in development of dock frontage it recently acquired at Toledo and to construct six large storage tanks. The company may start operation of a fleet of oil tankers into Toledo. The Paragon Oil company will start a fleet of tankers soon and Standard Oil of Ohio will operate a fleet after the present development of its frontage on Maumee bay is completed.

Six more 64,000 brl tanks have been ordered for the Humbel Oil and Refining company's tank farm at Ingleside, three of 58,000 brl tanks have been completed at Harbor island and when all the tanks are constructed the company will have an aggregate storage capacity of 2,183,000 brls at its Ingleside tank farm. Humble's crude oil shipments from Port Ingleside totaled 461,315 brls in 10 sailings during the week ended July 21, against 606,145 brls in 11 sailings in the preceding week.

The West Penn Electric company, which controls the electric subsidiaries of the American Water Works and Electric company, Inc., reports power output of 140,888,348 kilowatt hours for the month of June, 1928, an increase of 9 per cent over the output of 129,122,883 kilowatt hours for the month of June, 1927. For the first six months of 1928 power output totaled 863,227,414 kilowatt hours, which is greater by 3½ per cent than the output for the corresponding period of 1927, which was 833,453,111 kilowatt hours.

The Schulze Baking company has contracted for new equipment to be placed in its plant at Garfield boulevard and Wabash avenue, amounting to $200,000, and about $40,000 for new ovens in its bakery at Clybourn and Webster avenues. The total investment for new equipment at all plants located at Chicago, Cincinnati, Grand Rapids, Peoria, Springfield, Ill.; Des Moines, Omaha, and Kansas City, Mo., is $600,000.

An increase of 72 per cent in customers and of 118 per cent in kilowatt hour sales from 1921 to 1927 for all properties now in the system is shown in the new Associated Gas and Electric yearbook just released to stockholders. During 1927 the number of customers increased to over 600,000 and the number of investors increased to more than 81,000, a gain of 13,000 during the year.

Employment in fifty-one major plants in Toledo totaled 34,354 in the week ended July 27, a decrease of 1,415 from the last previous week and comparing with 23,145 employed in the corresponding week, last year.

Exports of copper from the United States in June totaled 48,536 metric tons, against 49,897 tons in May and 40,039 tons in April, according to the American bureau of metal statistics.

The public utility division of the Cities Service company sold 3,500 domestic and commercial electrical ice machines in the first six months of this year. Sales approximated $1,000,000.

Graham Brothers' school bus sale for 1928 to date are 48 per cent greater than they were for the same period in 1927, according to a statement just issued by Dodge Brothers. School bus sales during the whole of 1927 were 36 per cent greater than 1926.

Sales of Western Oil and Refining company for the first half of 1928 were three times those for the first half of 1927. Earnings were 10 per cent above preferred dividend requirements for the entire year. A dividend of $1 a share covering the first half of 1928 was declared on the preferred stock.

General Motors of Canada production for the year ended July 31 will total the record number of 105,425 cars, according to R. S. McLaughlin, president. Employment during the year reached peak figure of 8,018. Wages paid will amount to $11,300,000, and government duties and excise taxes, $9,000,175.

Business in electrical equipment was featured by improving buying on the part of power companies in the New England and middle Atlantic states last week. Buying by industrial interests continues at an encouraging rate, and total sales of heavy apparatus from all sources are fully up to the average for this time of the year, Electrical World reports.

The 1928 conventions of the National Financial Advertisers' association will be held Sept. 17 to 20, at Utica, N. Y., the board of directors has announced. Many members of the Chicago Financial Advertisers' association, including advertising representatives of the leading banks and investment houses, expect to attend.

Crude oil production in Mexico in the week ended July 21 averaged 124,286 barrels daily, unchanged from the preceding week. The light oil output totaled 58,572 barrels and the heavy oil amounted to 65,714 barrels daily, compared to 57,000 barrels and 67,286 barrels daily, respectively, in the previous week.

W. H. Gerhauser, president of the American Shipbuilding company, has been elected a director of the Union Trust company, Cleveland.

Secured and Unsecured Obligations.

It is a common belief that a secured obligation is, of necessity, safer than an unsecured obligation.

Such is not always the case, however, and many so-called unsecured obligations have in reality better security in back of them than those which are definitely secured.

The very fact that an obligation can be floated without any guarantee or pledge of certain property sometimes gives it a superiority over those which must be definitely secured in order to bind the borrower to a fulfillment of its obligation.

Under the head of unsecured obligations come a large number of civil loans—both government and municipal debentures—which are far more numerous and important than corporate debentures.

A strong municipality can float a loan on its simple unsecured promise to pay.

Its reputation and good faith give the necessary security and confidence.

A weak municipality or one whose obligation is weak is the one, as a rule, which must offer security.

It is in the corporate debentures that the secured obligation is usually safer than one that is unsecured.

A mortgage bond is almost always better than a debenture in the same company.

There may be, however, exceptions even to this rule.

Take, for example, the protection given by the trust agreement for the American Tobacco company's debenture 6s and 4s.

These loans are not secured by a mortgage on any property, but they are first and second charges, respectively, on all the company's properties, income and profits, now and hereafter, to which any mortgage loan subsequently brought out would be subject.

Most corporation debentures depend for their strength on the length of time the loan has to run and on the amount and stability of equities in assets and earning power in excess of prior liens and charges.

If these equities are sufficient during the life of the loan, interest charges will be met, and if they are sufficient at maturity, the company will have a basis of credit for refunding that part of the issue which has not previously been amortized.

N. Y. CURB MART QUIET BUT FIRM AS WEEK ENDS

New York, July 28.—(AP)—The curb market was quiet during today's short session, but utilities and several industrials advanced and week end profit taking recessions were small. Spanish and General extended its gain to a new high of 10½. Fox Theater A, Warner Brothers Pictures, and Bancitaly were also active and gained fractionally.

Glen Alden Coal, Dictograph Products, Proctor and Gamble, Van Camp preferred, Ford Motor of Canada, and Niles Bement Pond made gains of from 7 to 4 points, while Columbia Graphophone and Southern Asbestos were strong. Bliss and company, Mavis Bottling, and Deere and company encountered profit taking. Tubize Artificial Silk dropped 6 points in a few sales. Safeway Stores and Sanitary Grocers dropped 6 and 4 points, respectively.

Cities Service and Electric Bond and Share made fractional gains in the utilities group. United Gas Improvement and United Light and Power made advances of about a point, but encountered profit taking at the close. New Mont gained fractionally in the mine group, while Noranda declined slightly. Oils were neglected.

DODGE MERGER WITH CHRYSLER STILL PENDING

Baltimore, Md., July 28.—(AP)—The proposed $245,000,000 Chrysler and Dodge merger hung in the balance today, depending on whether a few thousand shares of Dodge stock, still needed, should be deposited with the merger committee of the Dodge organization before Monday.

Stockholders of Dodge Brothers, Inc., met today, heard that the Chrysler corporation insisted that 90 per cent of each class of stock must be deposited with the committee for the merger plan if the proposal were to be carried through, and adjourned until Monday morning in the hope that the condition would be met by that time.

No official figure of the exact amount on deposit was given, but it was estimated that with about 850,000 shares of the preference stock outstanding at present, less than 50,000 shares were needed to complete the 90 per cent quota, and that less than 100,000 shares were needed to make up the percentage of 1,935,000 outstanding shares of Class A.

CHICAGO STOCKS MOVE NARROWLY IN QUIET TRADE

Trading in the week's final two hour session of Chicago stocks yesterday was about the dullest in three months. Vulcan was about the only active share which experienced a net change of more than a point and sold down 2⅞ to 20 on profit taking. The most active stock of the day was Studebaker Mail Order, which advanced ⅞ in reflection of reports that the company is planning further expansion. Godchaux Sugars, Chickasha Oil and Electric House Utilities were up ¾ each. On small sales Auburn Automobile, Campbell, Wyant & Cannon, and Grigsby-Grunow were up a point each. Pines Winterfront and Q. R. S. eased a point each.

Thompson Earnings Lower.

The John R. Thompson company reported net earnings for the first half of the year totaling $667,656 after all charges and taxes, equal to $2.78 a share on the 240,000 shares of outstanding stock, compared with $769,024, or $3.20 a share, in the corresponding period of last year. For the quarter ended June 30, net income was $325,671, equal to $1.36 a share, against $373,224, or $1.55 a share, in the second quarter of last year.

The Henney Motor company announced it has entered the field of commercial vehicles and has given an initial order for 100 specially built bodies from the Expando company of Chicago, subsidiary of the Auburn Automobile company.

Review of the Week.

Prices for the week just closed on the exchange showed some improvement, although there was considerable irregularity. The volume of trading again reflected the "dog days" of summer and the uncertainties of the general stock market and money situations. Total sales for the week were 265,000 shares as compared with 319,000 in the previous week and 116,000 in the corresponding period of last year. For the year to date, total sales were 15,707,827 shares, compared with 5,082,200 in the same time last year.

A gain of a little more than 1.26 per cent in the market values of the fifty most active stocks traded in during the week is shown in the weekly compilation of Lage & Co.

Gains Outnumber Losses.

Pines Winterfront was the outstanding issue on the up side, finishing with a net gain of 7½ on the week. Stewart-Warner close 6¼ up and gains of from 3½ to 5 points were registered by Zenith Radio, Studebaker Mail Order, Acme Steel, Grigsby-Grunow, Morgan Lithograph and Dayton Rubber "A." About 25 other issues established gains ranging from one to three points, including Art Metal Works, Noblitt-Sparks, Bendix "B," North American Car and Borg-Warner.

The down side was featured by losses of 15 points each in Great Lakes Dredge and Quaker Oats. Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee preferred sold off 4 points and declines of 3 points each were felt by Vulcan, A. M. Castle and Q. R. S.

In the bond division trading was dull and the only net change of a point or more was confined to Chicago City Railway first 5s which advanced 1¼.

New Financing in Doldrums; Little Planned

New York, N. Y., July 28.—[Special.]—New bond offerings, still under the influence of mid-summer dullness, amounted to $31,124,000 in the week ended yesterday, against $22,752,000 last week and $73,617,000 in the corresponding week of last year.

In times of normal activity the total of this week would be considered only a fair average for one day. The investment demand, however, held up well, considering the circumstances, and there was understood to have been a substantial reduction in the supplies of unsold issues remaining in dealers' hands.

New Offerings by Groups.

The offerings, by groups, of this and last week, follow:

Bonds—	This week.	Last week.
Foreign	$18,396,000	....
State and municipal	5,528,000	17,002,000
Industrial	5,000,000	3,700,000
Investment corp.	1,200,000	....
Public utility	1,000,000	2,050,000
Totals	$31,124,000	$22,752,000

The largest issue of the week was a $15,000,000 loan of the state of Sao Paulo, Brazil, brought out by a syndicate headed by Speyer & Co., who have handled previous financing for Sao Paulo in this market. The only other foreign financing of the week was a $3,396,000 issue of the city of Tucuman, Argentina. The industrial group was represented by a $5,000,000 issue of the Gannett Company, Inc., which conducts a chain of newspapers.

Municipal Issues Diversified.

State and municipal financing was fairly well diversified for this time of year, the largest issues being sold by the state of Maryland, Orange county, Florida and Richmond, Va. Only one public utility issue was brought out in the week, consisting of $1,000,000 bonds of the St. Louis Water company.

New state and municipal financing scheduled to be sold next week continues at a low ebb although the total comes to $13,883,000 as compared with $5,342,000 this week and $28,354,000 in the week ended June 21.

Wholesale Trade Improved in Middle West Last Month

An increase in sales during June over the preceding month was made by wholesale houses, chain stores, and the retail shoe trade, the monthly report of the Chicago federal reserve bank says.

Sales by department stores in the district were seasonally lower, the total for 102 stores declining 4.8 per cent from May. Furniture sales declined 21.2 per cent in June, but were slightly larger than June a year ago. Sales of 24 chain groups operating 2,319 stores totaled 4.2 per cent more in June than during the preceding month, and 24.2 per cent above a year ago, the report stated.

N. Y. Clearing House Banks Show Decline in Deposits

New York, July 28.—(AP)—The weekly statement of the New York Clearing House association shows total surplus and undivided profits, $20,516,000 increase; net demand deposits (average), $28,938,000 decrease; time deposits (average), $520,000 increase; clearings week ended July 28, $5,555,724,654; clearings week ended July 21, $6,137,878,321.

CHICAGO BANK STOCKS EASIER IN DULL TRADE

While trading in the Chicago unlisted securities market last week had a somewhat improved aspect, as a whole the trend was dull. Continental National Bank and Trust was slightly easier at 539 bid, offered at 544. Union Trust was in better demand and added 8 points to its previous gain in selling at 848. This price was bid at the close, with stock offered for sale at 852.

National Bank of the Republic and Chicago Trust registered a 5 point improvement, the former changing hands at 535 and the latter at 485 to 489. Interest in the remainder of the group was rather listless, with declines relatively small and of little significance. Illinois Merchants was quoted 879 to 885; Bank of America, 383 to 388; Central Trust Company of Illinois, 524 to 528; First National, 792 to 796, and State Bank of Chicago, 663 to 668.

Hart-Parr Moves Up.

On the announcement of the postponement of the recent Hart-Parr meeting, awaiting a new plan of recapitalization, this stock improved 6 points to sales at 44¾. At the close it was quoted 43 bid, offered at 47. Considerable trading took place in Borg-Warner preferred between 101 and 102⅝. Chicago Daily News common was a little easier at 59 bid, offered at 61—off 3. The preferred was unchanged at 102 to 102¾.

Continental Steel common showed a better tone at 35 bid, 36 asked; while the preferred changed hands at 90. Creamery Package was easier and declined 3 points to 34½ bid, offered at 35½. Godchaux Sugar preferred was weak and relinquished a portion of its previous improvement in being traded in at 58. Additional stock was wanted at 57 with best offering at 59—a decline of 5 points.

Greenebaum Investment Savings.

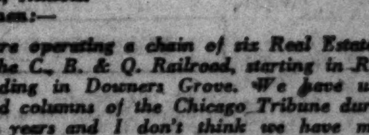
Greenebaum Sons investment, which has been a popular trader of late, registered a sharp decline in changing hands between 575 and 585 but closed 588 bid and 595 asked. Federal Electric common and preferred were in good demand but there was little interest on the selling side. The common rose 5 points to 49 bid; while sales in the preferred ranged between 106 and 107, up 5. National Gypsum common continued in supply at 25, the preferred was quoted 64 to 66.

A better tone was felt in the McCord Manufacturing issues, the common was quoted 9¾@10; class "A," 69@72, and the debenture shares were offered at 17½ with little interest on the bid side. A. E. Staley Manufacturing lost another 10 points in selling at 230. Bids of 77 for Wahl preferred failed to attract sellers lower than 81.

Northern Pacific Reports Sharp Gain in Land Sales

Northern Pacific land department sales in the first six months of 1928 doubled the sales of 1927, J. M. Hughes, land commissioner, said last night. The sales this year represented in money more than four times that in the corresponding months of last year. Privately owned land sales also are on the increase, emphasizing a sharp improvement in demand for western farm and range lands.

Tribune Want Ads Are the Best Salesmen for Henry A. Miller, Who Has Used Them Every Day for Ten Years to Sell Real Estate



Henry A. Miller—Suburban Realtor

The Chicago Tribune,
Chicago, Illinois.
Gentlemen:—

We are operating a chain of six Real Estate offices along the C., B. & Q. Railroad, starting in Riverside and ending in Downers Grove. We have used the classified columns of the Chicago Tribune during the last ten years and I don't think we have missed a single issue, either week days or Sundays during that period.

Although we use many other mediums of advertising, the majority of direct inquiries that we get through our newspaper advertising come from our ads in your paper. The year 1927 was not very active in suburban real estate, and inquiries were rather few and far between, but the same ratio held good. Even during this slack period, we managed to keep ourselves busy throughout the year.

The sales closed through inquiries received from your paper have always terminated pleasantly for buyer and seller. We have made many friends and established a number of clients through people that we brought into our communities. I am happy to say that a number of them have become village officials, serving their communities faithfully and without any pay.

I mention this merely to show that your paper is read by the kind of people who become desirable and valuable citizens in our suburbs. You may pass this information on to any of our fellow realtors, and I hope that they will profit by our experience.

Yours very truly,
HENRY A. MILLER.

RACE OF CORN SHORTS TO COVER ADVANCES PRICE

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Corn shorts bid actively against each other for the offerings in the pit yesterday. Prices advanced sharply, July getting above $1.12 for the first time since early in May. Wheat displayed early weakness, but rallied and showed some firmness at the finish, closing at net gains of ⅛@½c for the day.

September wheat closed at $1.22⅝@1.22¾ and December at $1.27@1.27¼, this Corn showed gains of 1@1⅛c for the day. Corn showed gains of 1@1⅛c for the day. July closed at $1.12⅜@1.12½ and September at 98¼@98½c. Oats were ¼@1⅛c lower, July showing most weakness. Rye was 2@2½c higher. For the week, wheat is 3¼@3⅞c lower, corn 6⅛c higher for July and 1⅝c higher to ½c lower for deferred months, oats ⅛@4¼c lower and rye ⅝@1⅛c higher.

Early Wheat Market Firm.

Early firmness of the wheat market was due to steadiness abroad, but market soon weakened as the buying power was poor. Offerings for a time were quite liberal, partly in way of hedging. Demand improved on the setback and the strength in corn became an influence. There was also considerable buying of wheat here against sales at Winnipeg. Liverpool wheat closed ⅛@⅜d lower.

Good weather prevailed over the wheat country, both for harvesting and for crop progress. Temperatures continued moderate in the northwest and black rust is not progressing dangerously. Movement is big in the southwest, Kansas City receipts for the week being a record, and that market was relatively weaker than ours.

Active Trade in Corn.

Short covering in the corn market was very extensive, December as well as September, nad this was reflected in the sharp advance in prices. Free profit taking on the bulge by longs held the market in check. September corn at the high point was nearly 8 cents above Thursday's low. There was nothing in the crop situation to disturb the shorts, but they became uneasy because of the strength of the old corn positions and fear prevailed that the discounts for deferred months might be excessive. Receipts were large, as corn is coming here from all directions to fill July contracts, but a feeling prevailed that country movement after July will be extremely light and that remaining country supplies are very small. There was 400,000 bu sold to go to store. Vessel room was chartered for 250,000 bu corn to go to Buffalo.

Oats Are Depressed.

Oats were depressed by the liquidation in July delivery. Longs sold all contracts and there was no material demand, the support coming from shorts and from local traders. Some of those who bought July oats sold September in exchange. Liberal receipts and expectations of a good run next week were depressing influences. Weather conditions were favorable for harvest work and movement.

Rye made a sharp advance. Buying was encouraged by the strength of the Winnipeg market and by reports of export business. Offerings were moderate early but longs took profits on the bulge.

COTTON MARKETS

Cotton was sold early on the weakness in Liverpool, which started 8 to 9 points lower and finished with net losses of 9 to 10 points and sales of 3,000 bales of spots. There were also reports that the Lancashire mills will close Aug. 11 owing to a lockout due to union labor disputes. Reports of rain from Georgia, Texas, and the Carolinas, combined with scattered weevil reports, brought in a fair run of buying and made a rally. At the close outside markets were 4 to 15 points higher, with Chicago futures unchanged to 8 points higher. Spots in New Orleans dropped 10 points to 21.00c. New York 5 points higher to 21.10c. Houston was 20.80c, and Galveston 20.85c.

Reports from Fall River made sales of print cloths for the week 25,000 pieces. Business in Worth-st. during the week was only fair.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, July 28.—(AP)—Cotton goods in the gray showed improvement today, more especially in fine goods where inquiries have increased for broadcloths, shirtings, and lines that have become scarce for spot shipment. Linens are being cleaned up actively for special sale purposes, buying of colored luncheon sets and damasks being steady. Costume linens were quiet. Burlap markets were steady, but inactive. Raw silk advanced at Yokohama, where sales were larger. Silk goods were in better demand for fall cutting. Further lines of tropical suitings for men's wear were opened, showing advances over last year ranging from 3 cents to 7½ cents a yard.

PROVISIONS TRADE SMALL

A small, uninteresting trade was on in lard and meat futures, with a limited range in prices. July lard closed 7½c lower, with September and December 2½c and October unchanged. Liverpool was unchanged to 3d lower. Ribs were nominally 2½c higher, and bellies, after a range of 10c, closed the same as Friday. Shipments of lard and meats for the week were larger than a year ago, lard showing an increase and meats a decrease from the previous week. Hog prices were 10@20c lower. Prices follow:

PIT NOTES

Limited selling pressure and a desire to get profits for over the week-end mainly was responsible for the late strength and advance in wheat. Traders seem to think that local interests that have been credited with being the principal sellers of late were out of the market for the day and they found it difficult to cover without bidding prices up. Offers were in active demand after the close which suggests uneasiness on the part of the shorts and an oversold pit condition.

Leading bull interests were active in buying September and December corn and talk very bullish. There was little evidence to show that they were selling July, although a fair quantity of that delivery was on the market but not enough to satisfy shorts who are beginning to wake up to the fact that those who have the corn bought are able to take care of their market. Both Herbert Blum and J. Allen Moore talked very bullish on corn at the close, particularly on September.

A report from Winnipeg said that the pool estimates the wheat crop in the three western provinces at 492,000,000 bu, although this is not official.

J. P. Griffin says there has been much unwarranted criticism about the premium July corn over September and December deliveries. He says he has no objection to elevators bringing grain here and outside markets and elsewhere at a loss for the purpose of delivering on future contracts—that practice to his mind is far more susceptible to the charge of manipulation. A huge volume of trade has been diverted from the Chicago Board of Trade because of the belief that the buyer is at a disadvantage. "It seems appropriate to me," says Mr. Griffin, "to suggest that members of the board encourage and not criticize patrons of the market who stand ready to pay for grain purchased for future delivery. To my mind it would be far more beneficial to this market if the officers and members of the exchange would eradicate conditions and practices which make Chicago an attractive sellers' market but uninviting to buyers."

Hogs on the week-end session were pounded down to the lowest point since last Monday, with best kinds falling most in value. Shipping demand which has been unusually broad this week, was practically absent at the finish. Extreme top declined 20c at $11.35, with general average 10c lower at $10.50, against a top of $11.10 and average of $10.40 the previous Saturday.

Hog Receipts Are Small.

Hog receipts last week at 103,400 were smallest since October and second smallest for any week in July since 1917. All points reported substantial decreases, the eleven markets total for the week standing at 390,000 or smaller than any corresponding week since 1919, with only one smaller since 1915. The big gain in weight partly offset the decrease in numbers. The estimate average at 249 lbs stands heaviest since October and compares with 239 lbs a week ago and with 247 lbs a year ago. Outside demand was the principal support all week, taking about 32 per cent of arrivals against 24.4 per cent a week ago.

There was a widening of the range of cattle prices last week, which is usual in July, when "grassy" kinds increase in numbers and top notch steers are considered specialties. Extreme top at $16.85 paid for yearlings was highest for July since 1920. Top weighty steers stopped at $16.40. About 5,300 head were listed at $16.00 and above last week, against 900 two weeks ago. Four weeks ago only 531 sold at $15.00 and above. Prevailing quotations are $2.00@2.50 above eight weeks ago on best steers, while unevenness in other classes range from 25c to $1.50 higher.

Lamb Market Erratic.

With supplies of lambs at all leading market centers running surprisingly small in face of the government estimate of a 2,000,000 increase in the 1928 crop, the market recently has experienced some erratic sessions. An increase of 6½ per cent in the 1928 wool clip carries out the reported increase in this year's crop, which is expected to be unloaded on the market during August, September and October in larger numbers than usual. The July receipts at Chicago at 273,000 are larger than a year ago, but fourth smallest for July since 1904.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 43,000 hogs and 15,000 sheep, against 14,189 cattle, 33,439 hogs, and 11,835 sheep a week ago and 19,229 cattle, 48,733 hogs and 17,368 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 43,000 cattle, 120,000 hogs and 78,000 sheep, against 50,918 cattle, 133,018 hogs and 71,679 sheep a year ago.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Business in butter and eggs and poultry on Saturday was limited with supplies equal to requirements and prices unchanged. In the potato market a firmer feeling existed owing to cooler weather. Arrivals were [illegible] cars, and there were 197 cars on track.

Western Burnett Company Wondered If It Could Sell Its Old Car—And a Tribune Want Ad Brought Ten Offers!

"We had a small sedan that we were anxious to sell. It was several years old and looked like it might be difficult to dispose of. A Tribune Want Ad brought us ten opportunities to sell and we were thus enabled to get a good price."

WESTERN BURNETT CO., INC.
Wrigley Building

WHEN Western Burnett Co., Inc., of the Wrigley Building, wanted to sell one of their cars they found it was no trouble at all. It only required a Tribune Want Ad and at once they had ten opportunities—and having the ten enabled them to sell on better terms.

That is one of the features of Tribune Want Ads. They bring such generous results that you may choose the people that you prefer to deal with. In addition you reach the best buyers—for the Tribune is the preferred paper of 90% of Chicago's able-to-buy families. It reaches a host of homes of all classes—50% more than the second Chicago paper. Phone—

VAN SWERINGENS OFFER NEW PLAN OF RAIL MERGER

Washington, D. C., July 28.—(AP)—New proposals looking to the completion of the projected merger of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad with the Pere Marquette system were made today to the interstate commerce commission.

The Chesapeake and Ohio, which now holds the commission's permission to acquire control of the Pere Marquette, asked authority to buy 174,900 shares of latter's common stock now owned by the Nickel Plate railroad, at $133.33 per share.

The Chesapeake and Ohio also asked the commission to modify its original finding in the merger case and to permit the company to sell 300,000 shares of its own new stock to stockholders at $100 per share. The funds derived from the new issue will enable the Chesapeake to complete its Pere Marquette purchase.

Commission Limited Issues.

The commission previously ruled that the Chesapeake and Ohio should issue only 200,000 shares of new stock and require its present stockholders to pay $150 per share for it.

The Chesapeake and Ohio-Pere Marquette merger represents a final and partial success in the endeavor of O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen of Cleveland and their associates to bring about a merger of eastern trunk lines. After the commission rejected their original proposal, which involved the fusion of the Nickel Plate, Chesapeake and Ohio, Erie and Pere Marquette railroads, the Van Sweringens put forward a scheme for combining the Chesapeake and Ohio with the Erie and Pere Marquette. The commission eliminated the Erie from the proposed consolidation, but approved the combination of the Chesapeake and Ohio with the Pere Marquette.

Offer More for Pere Marquette.

In dealing with details of the proposal, the Chesapeake and Ohio was authorized to pay $110 per share for Pere Marquette stock owned by the Van Sweringens, and was given permission to negotiate a price for the additional Pere Marquette stock owned by the Nickel Plate railroad.

The petitions today said that the Nickel Plate was willing to take $133.33 for its Pere Marquette holdings and declared this to be a fair value. As to the new Chesapeake and Ohio stock issue contemplated, the petition protested against requiring the company's stockholders to pay more than par for new stock, questioned the commission's legal power to fix a higher figure, and argued that a lower figure was in the public interest and a matter of justice to railroad stockholders.

SILK MARKET.

NEW YORK, July 28.—(AP)—SILK—Raw, steady.

RAILROAD NOTES

The first fifty-five railroads reporting June earnings had net railway operating income of $70,414,000, against $74,682,000 in June, 1927, a decrease of 5.2 per cent. Their May net totaled $73,038,000. June gross operating revenues of these roads aggregated $413,068,000, against $437,496,000 in June, 1927, a decrease of 5.6 per cent. Their May gross was $420,187,000. May net for all roads in May this year was up 2.5 per cent from May, 1927, while gross was off 2.5 per cent.

Examiner A. C. Devoe has recommended to the interstate commerce commission that the Houston and Brazos Valley railroad be authorized to issue $1,398,000 in first mortgage 5 per cent gold bonds to be delivered to the New Orleans, Texas and Mexico railway in satisfaction of a debt to that company amounting to $1,823,791 consisting of judgments for $1,183,889 and advances totaling $639,902.

The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe handled 42,522 revenue freight cars in the week ended July 27, against 37,974 in the same week of 1927.

Continued prosperity throughout the nation, satisfactory crop conditions on the Pacific coast and encouraging progress toward better marketing conditions are noted among railroad officials, according to E. W. Clapp, traffic manager of the Southern Pacific.

An application for authority to purchase the 84 mile system of the San Francisco-Sacramento railroad was made to the interstate commerce commission by the Sacramento Northern, a subsidiary of the Western Pacific. The Sacramento Northern has agreed to pay $1,675,100 for the San Francisco-Sacramento which operates between Oakland and Sacramento.

Louisville and Nashville railroad has asked the interstate commerce commission for authority to lease for ninety-nine years the Louisville, Henderson and St. Louis railway, a 200 mile line of which it now owns 85.25 per cent of its total preferred and 95.45 per cent of the road's common stock.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, July 28.—(AP)—COTTONSEED OIL—Active and irregular, closing 15 points lower to 7 points higher. New crop months were steady on covering promoted by the steadiness of cotton and lard. Sales, 20,000 bbls. Prime crude nominal; prime summer yellow spot, 9.40c; August closed 9.43c; September, 9.57c; October, 9.62c; December, 9.76c; January, 9.80c; March, 9.82c.

Retire in 15 years
on your Present Living Budget

By investing in safe First Mortgage Bonds

Follow the definite plan given in this book, and your financial independence is won. The plan works just as surely whether you are now earning $1,000 or $100,000 a year.

The way is certain—each step plainly indicated and absolutely safe—independent of luck, business genius or speculation.

Every fact has been harvested out of the 47 years' experience of Cochran & McCluer in the first mortgage investment banking business.

The plan is so simple any one can understand it—so definite any one can follow it—and so certain no one can fail.

In addition to the Financial Independence Plan and the unique budget schedule, the book gives suggestions that enable you to enjoy more of the good things of life, both while building your independent fortune and after you have attained it.

We invite the most skeptical to read this plain, straightforward, interesting book. Phone, call or send coupon. We employ no salesmen, therefore none will call.

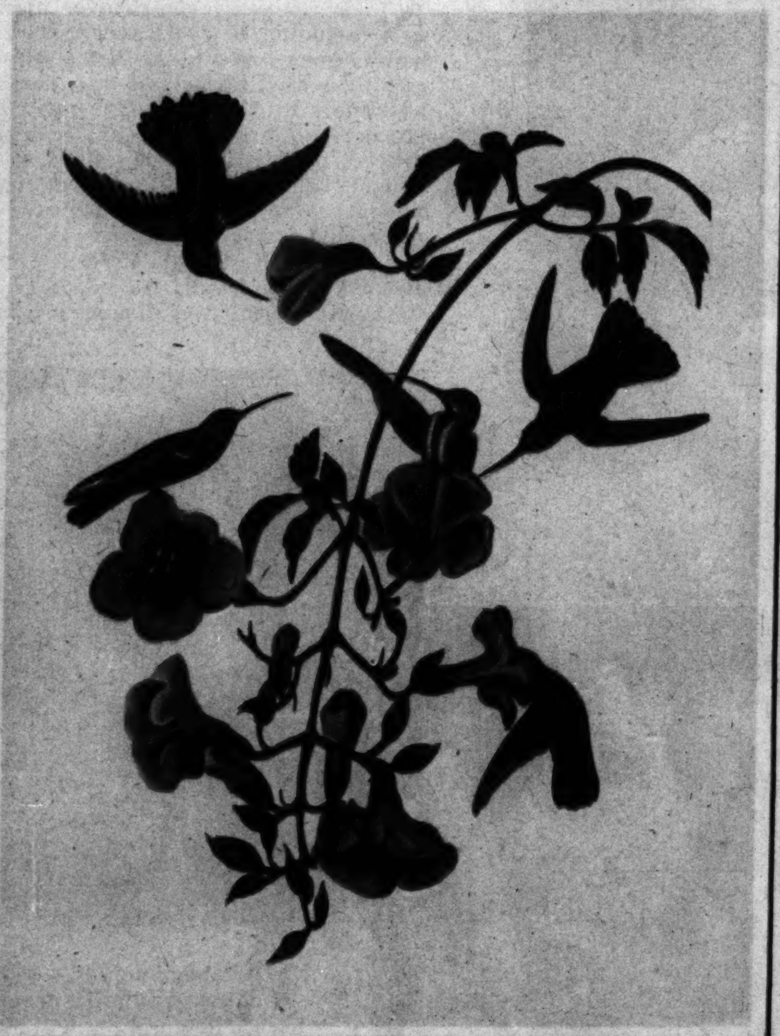
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

July 29, 1928

PICTURESQUE CHICAGO—Among the city's beauty spots are the tulip beds in Lincoln park. This picture, taken at tulip time, shows the conservatory in the background.

ARCHERY ON THE CAMPUS—After testing their skill with the bow, Augusta Downey and Hortense Pendleton, co-eds at Northwestern university, count the score. Miss Downey's smile is due to the fact that one of her arrows penetrated the center of the bull's-eye.



THE HUMMING BIRD now lends its presence to the flower gardens of Chicagoland. This sketch of the tiny birds was drawn from nature by the famous John J. Audubon, and is reproduced, by permission, from the files of the John Crerar library of Chicago.

MISS FODI BROWN is red haired, good looking in an unusual style, and a useful young woman in the skits and the sketches of the gaudy shows from the New York Winter Garden. She was here last winter in "A Night in Spain."

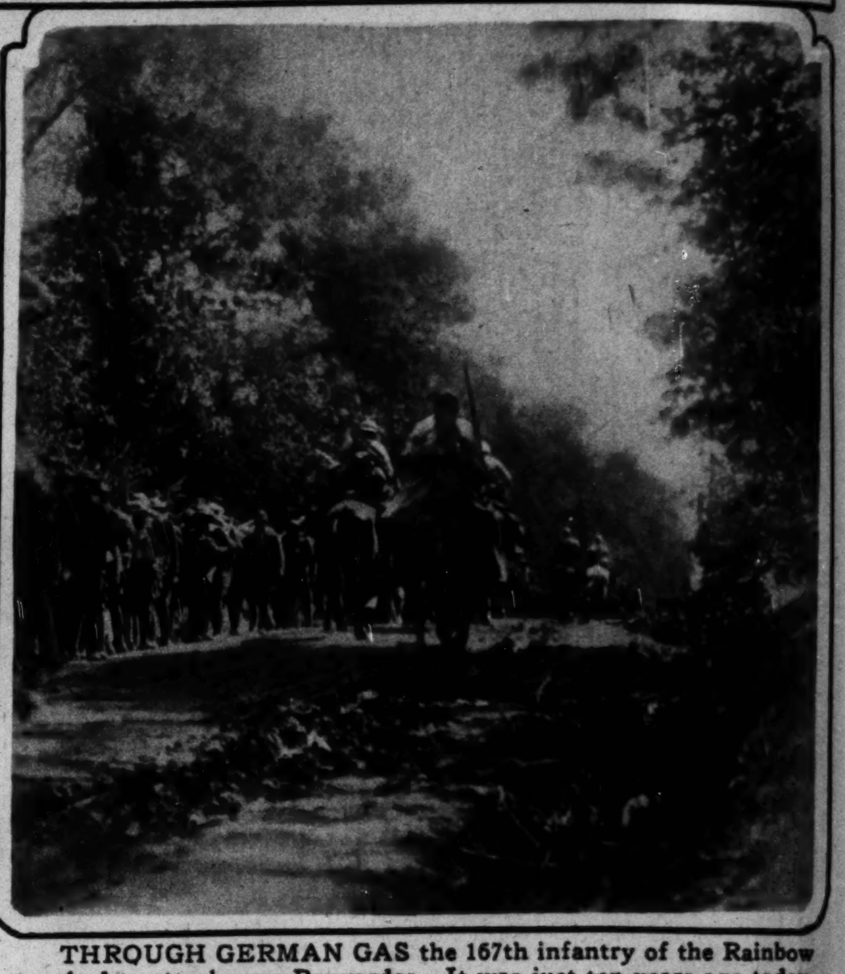
A DECADE AGO TOMORROW snipers of the 42nd division, the Rainbow, were picking off Germans on the outskirts of the town of Villers during the Aisne-Marne offensive. The sharpshooters were from the ranks of the 166th infantry.

A BURIAL PARTY of the 42d division seeks out the dead in the fields and woods beyond Chateau-Thierry. Scene, Beuvardes. Time, July 30, 1918.

4 DAREDEVILS WHO CAPTURED 17 GERMANS and four machine guns are pictured at Beuvardes. They are Corp. B. F. Harbour and Sergt. J. G. Loankull, 168th infantry, 42d division; Pvt. Clarence Reynolds, 47th infantry, 4th division; Corp. H. S. Gallagher, 168th infantry.

SHELLED BY THE ENEMY, the division quartermaster of the Rainbow evacuated this house at Beuvardes on July 30, 1918. He had made it his headquarters just the day before.



THROUGH GERMAN GAS the 167th infantry of the Rainbow marched to attack near Beuvardes. It was just ten years ago today.

Stop Gray Hair

New Safe Way

FREE—This Astonishing Test

NOW 10 years vanish over night by an astounding new discovery. Gray and faded hair is gone forever. At last a way is found to end them that specialists and doctors vouch is absolutely safe. A way that removes the faded streaks and brings back original shade to the grayest parts; that makes the hair live looking and lustrous, youthful and gleaming; that does not make the hair difficult to wave—that is not noticeable as are crude dyes.

A test is offered you here to prove it. Many Broadway stars will risk no other way — also 3,000,000 women. And all agree it is modern beauty science's most amazing invention. Simply send the coupon or go to nearest druggist.

The simplest way—also safest

Hair fades and turns gray when natural color pigment is lacking. So science by a secret laboratory method supplies a liquid containing certain necessary elements that take its place — hence gives natural shade. The formula is called Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer after its woman discoverer.

Simply dampen a comb in this amazing liquid — clear and colorless as water—then run it through the hair. That's all. In 10 minutes you are through.

Touch only gray parts or the entire head, it makes no difference. You can almost see the natural color creep back, so quickly does it do its work. Streaks disappear . . . gray vanishes. If auburn, your hair reverts to auburn. If black, black it will be.

No need now for crude, messy dyes, judged dangerous to hair. They are noticed by your friends. This way defies detection. Nothing to wash or rub off.

Test it free

You'll be amazed and delighted at what this scientific way will do. I will send you a free sample of Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer. You see exactly what results will be. Thus take no chances.

Or go to your nearest drug store and get a bottle. A few cents' worth is sufficient to restore your hair completely. If not delighted, your money will be returned.

1 You try it first on a single lock of your hair to see what it does. Thus have no fear of results.

2 Then simply comb this water-like liquid through your hair. Clean . . . safe. Takes 7 or 8 minutes.

3 Arrange hair and watch color gradually creep back. Restoration will be perfect and complete.

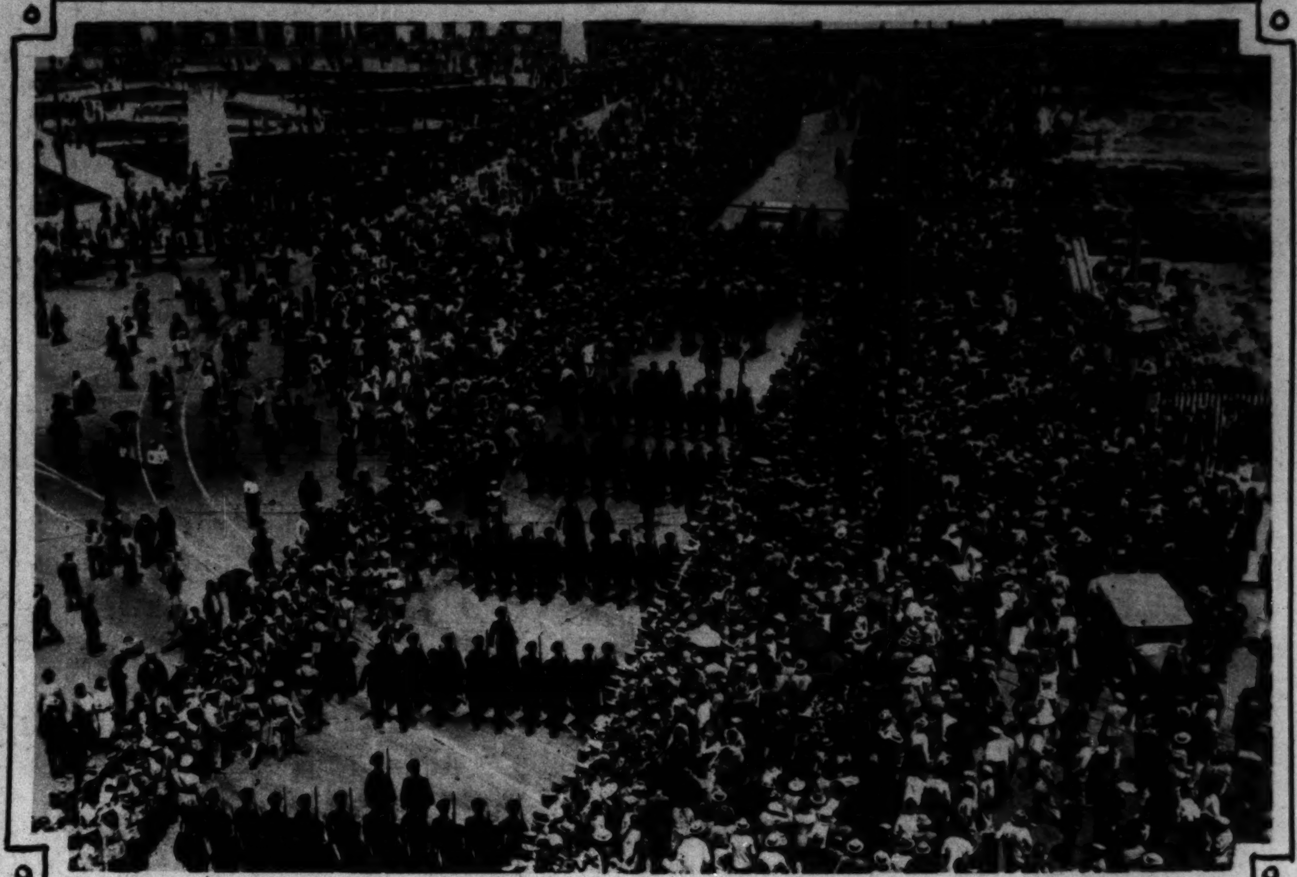
Yours Truly
Ellen Terry
Chicago -1888

DAME ELLEN TERRY, hailed by Sarah Bernhardt as the world's greatest actress, receives her final call at Small Hythe, England. But her dying injunction, "No funeral gloom, my dears, when I am gone," is respected by her family, even though the entire theatrical world is saddened by her passing.

NO MORE WORLDS TO CONQUER — With British and French championships added to her American title, Helen Wills returns from her European invasion as queen of a tennis empire no woman ever has ruled before. She appears on the national championship field again next month in defense of her American crown.
(Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)

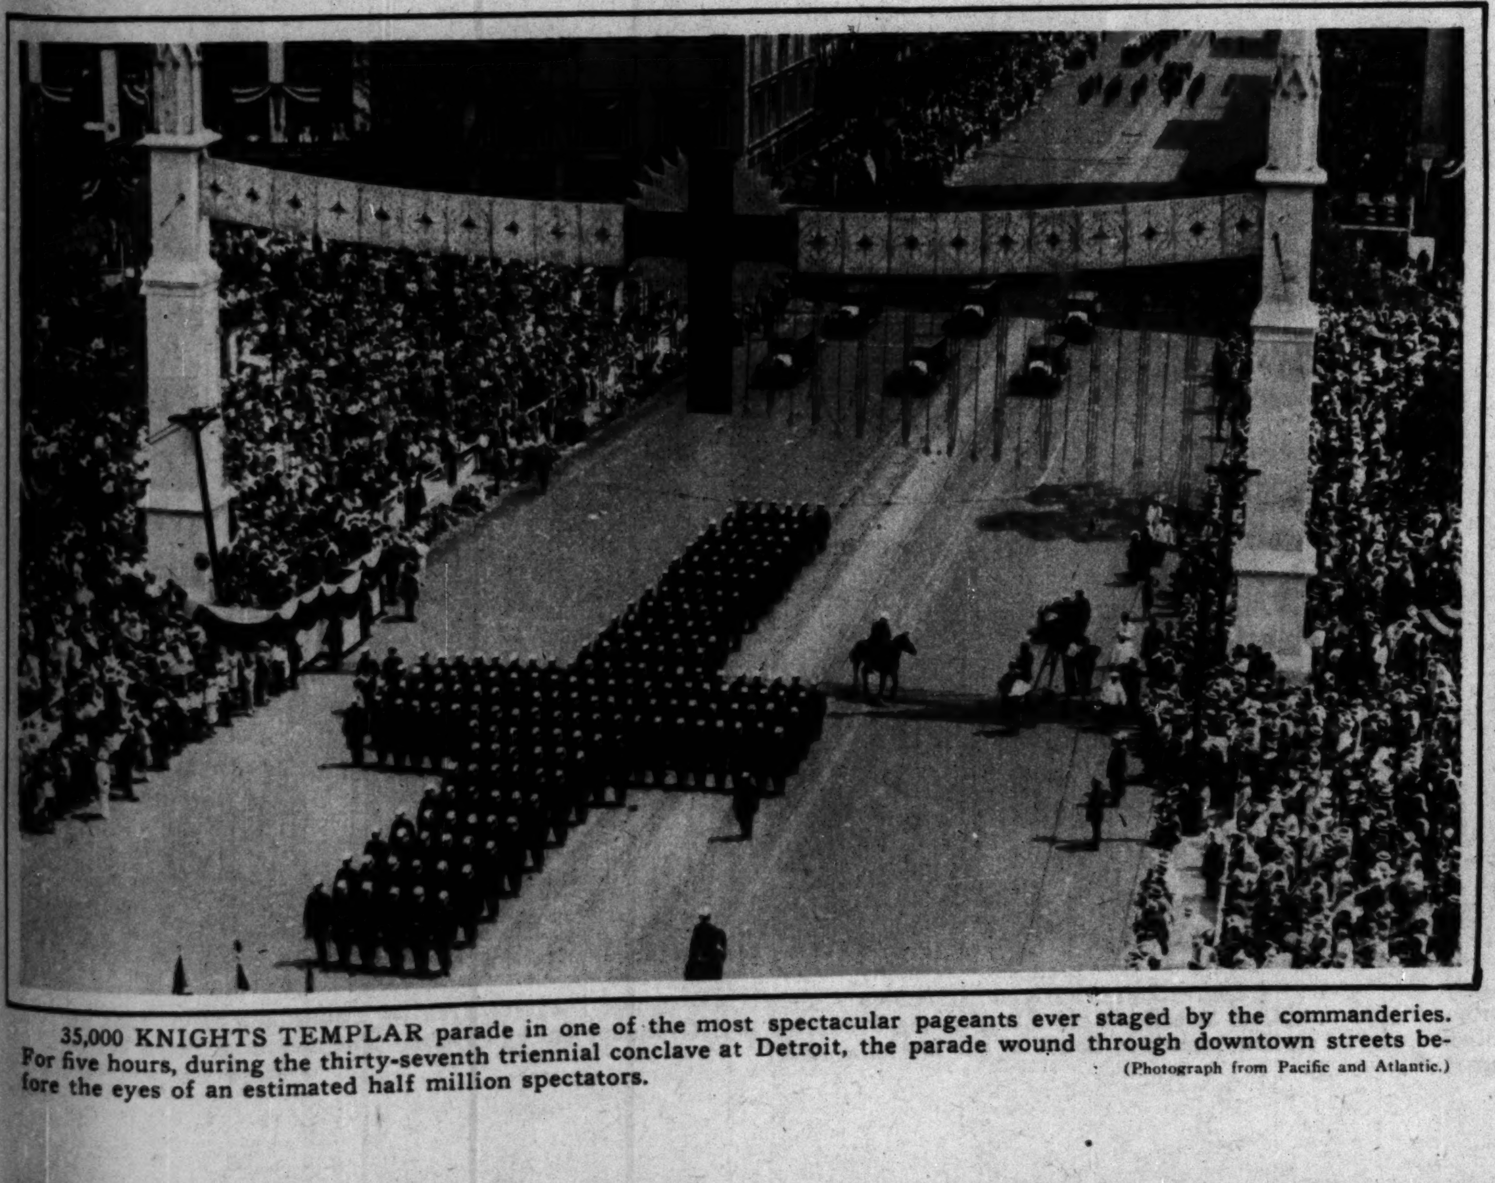


LAST RITES FOR ALVARO OBREGON — Two hundred thousand Mexicans pay impressive tribute to their assassinated president elect as his funeral cortege proceeds from the national palace to the railway station at Mexico City. The body was taken by train to Sonora, where burial was held in the little town of Navajoa.
(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

HERBERT HOOVER AT HOME—If there is to be a front porch campaign in '28, the Republican presidential candidate appears ready for it. At his residence in Palo Alto, Cal., he receives Gov. C. C. Young of that state and—quite evidently—pleases that erstwhile political enemy.
(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

A CHICAGOAN ENTERS THE CABINET—Roy O. West, Chicago attorney and political leader, is named by President Coolidge as secretary of the interior, vice Dr. Hubert Work, who resigned to become chairman of the Republican national committee. Mr. West is a long-time friend of the President and until recently was secretary of the national committee. (Photograph from Walinger.)

THEY BREAK THE GLOBE-GIRDLING RECORD by negotiating the 19,725 miles in 23 days 15 hours and 8 seconds. John Henry Mears, B. D. Collyer, and their white terrier mascot, "Tailwind," combine steamer and airship travel to smash the previous round-the-world mark of 28 days 14 hours 26 minutes and 5 seconds. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



35,000 KNIGHTS TEMPLAR parade in one of the most spectacular pageants ever staged by the commanderies. For five hours, during the thirty-seventh triennial conclave at Detroit, the parade wound through downtown streets before the eyes of an estimated half million spectators. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

KENTUCKY CANARY—Miss June Carroll, 24, of Louisville, is one of four American girls to win a place with the Metropolitan Opera company for the coming season. She will have her "big league" start on the New York stage in minor roles.

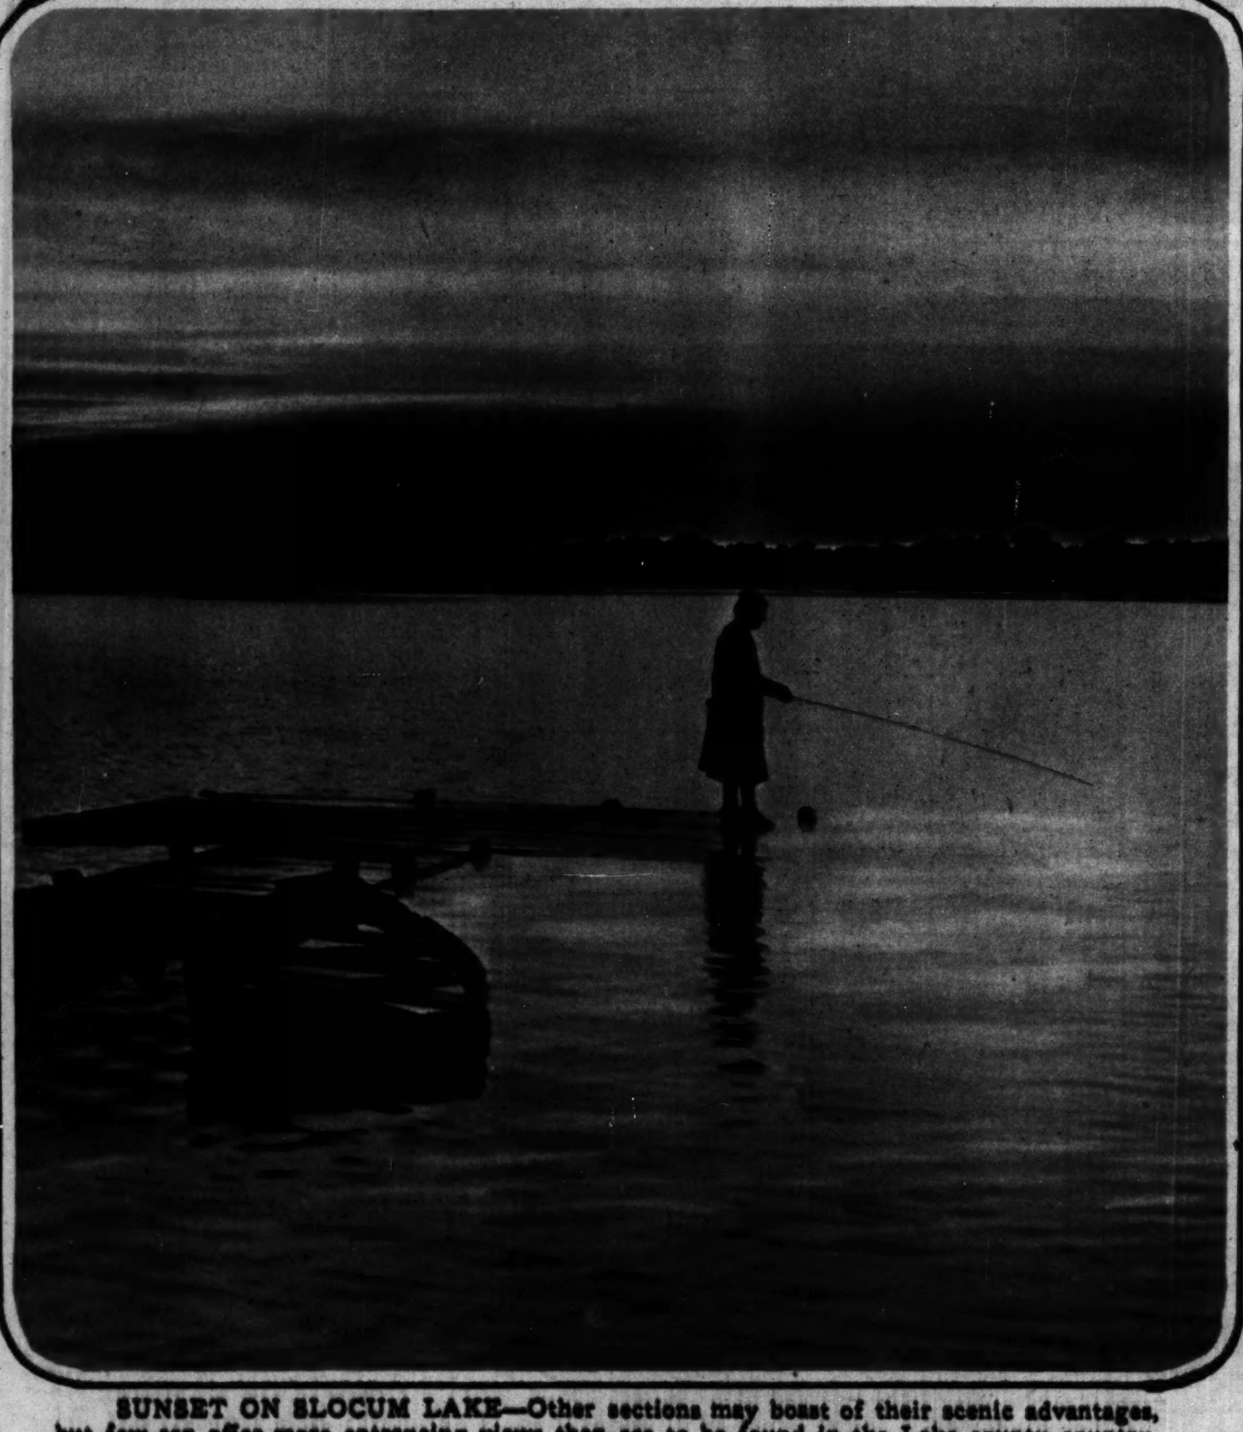
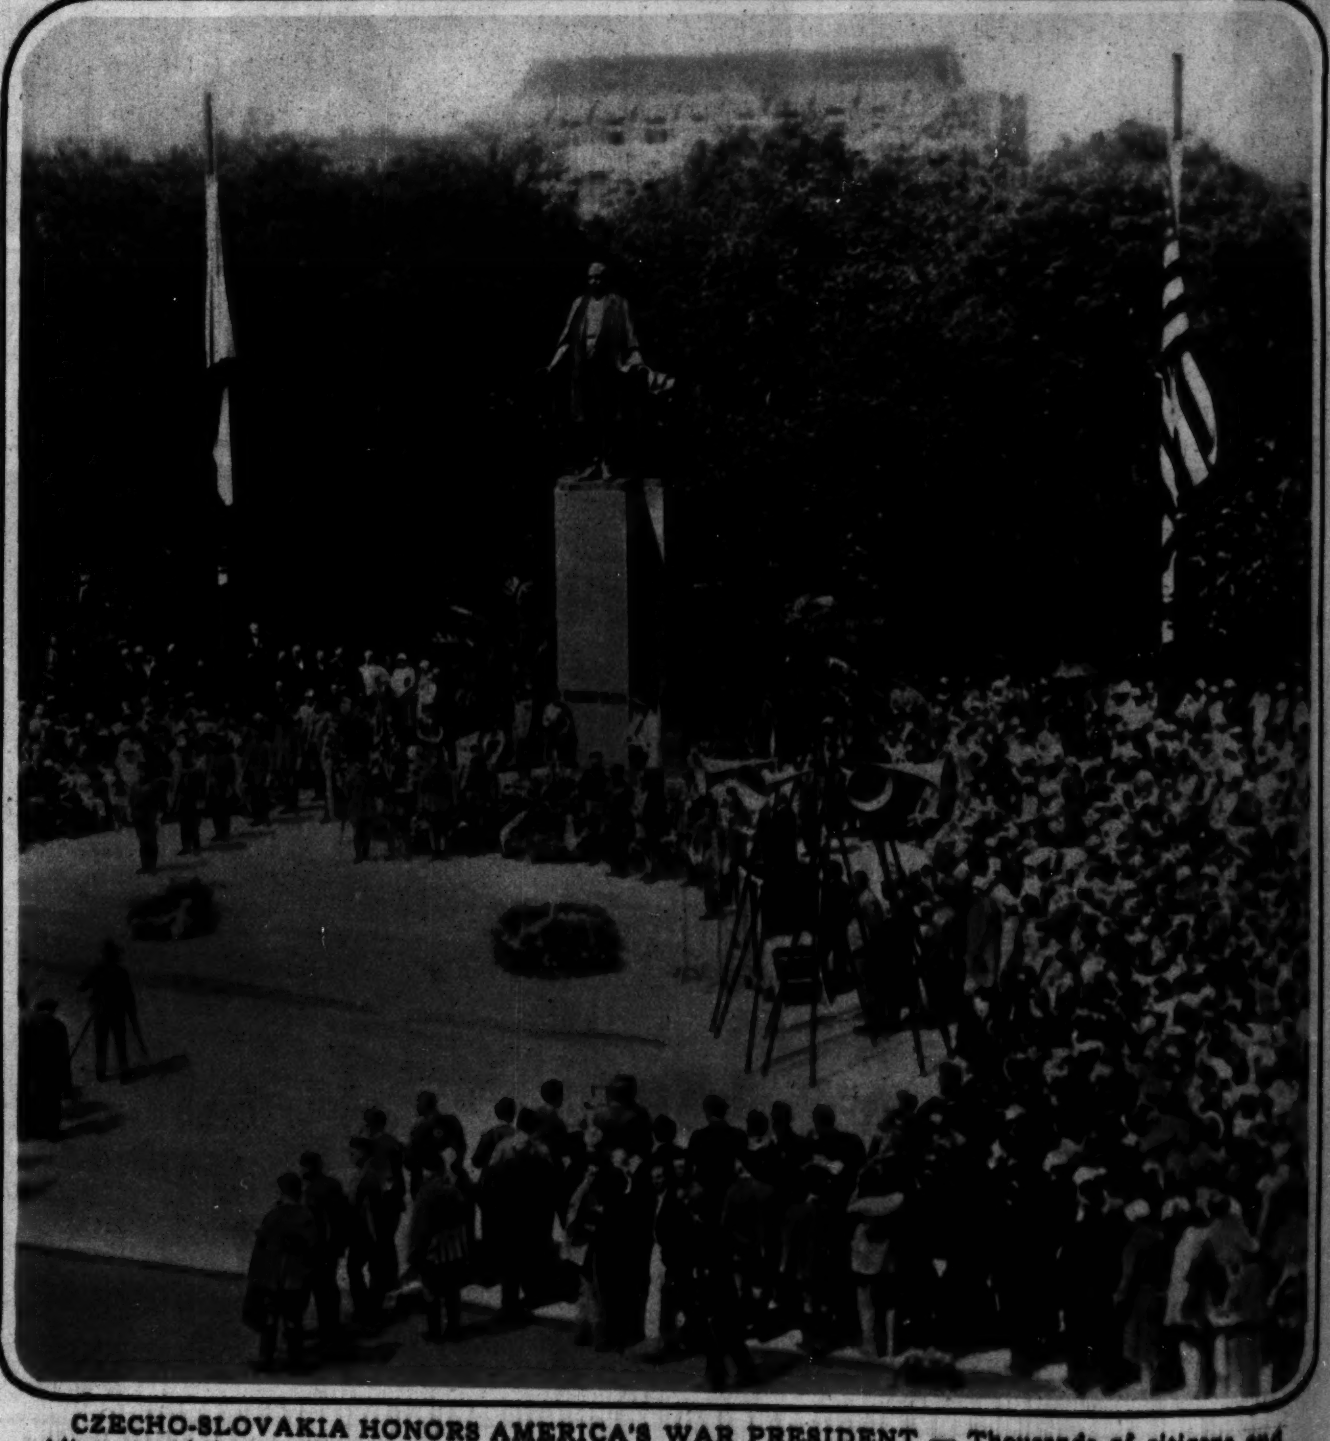
PICTURESQUE CHICAGOLAND—One of the world's most magnificent educational plants has grown—and is still growing—out of the scenes of the old World's fair. The campus of the University of Chicago is known internationally for its classic architecture. At the right is the Midway, and in the central background the old Fine Arts building, both reminiscent of the fair. (Photograph from Chicago Aerial Survey.)



SUNSET ON SLOCUM LAKE—Other sections may boast of their scenic advantages, but few can offer more entrancing views than are to be found in the Lake county countryside. The feminine angler here depicted was trying her luck on the body of water three miles west of Wauconda, Ill., and forty-five miles northwest of Chicago. The picture was taken at 8:30 p. m.



CZECHO-SLOVAKIA HONORS AMERICA'S WAR PRESIDENT — Thousands of citizens and soldiers attend the unveiling of the Woodrow Wilson monument at Prague. The memorial faces Wilson station, named in honor of the late executive.

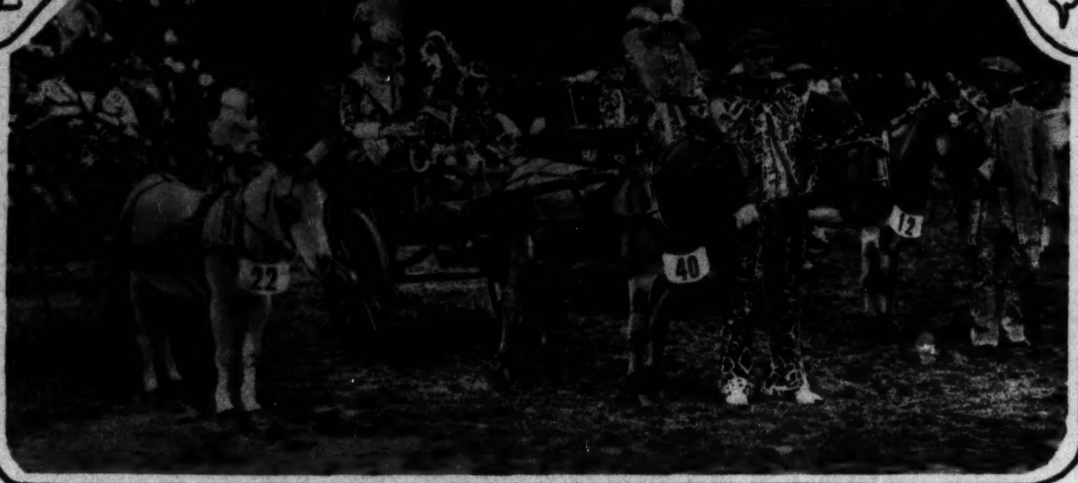
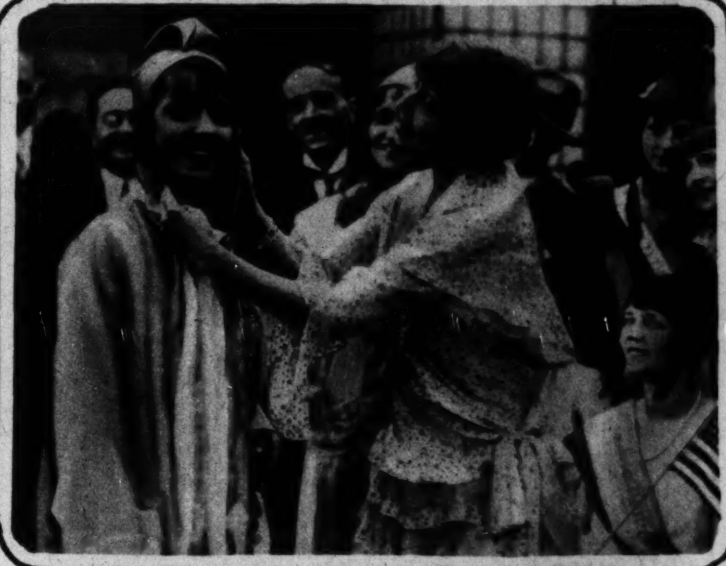
A DEMOCRATIC DONKEY occasioned a conference between Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic candidate for vice president; Gov. Alfred E. Smith, presidential nominee, and Jesse H. Jones, retiring treasurer of the national committee, when the three got together in Albany recently. The party symbol had been presented to Al. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

EVENING STARS AT THE ECLIPSE—Stage celebrities swarmed to the closing performance in the old B. F. Keith theater in Boston, which is to be replaced by a new monument to the amusement cause. Reading from the left, those standing are Will Cressy, John Le Clair, Thomas J. Ryan, Eddie Leonard, and Fred Stone; seated, Dorothy Stone, Blanche Dayne, Ethel Barrymore, Maggie Cline, Stella Mayhew, and Mabel Russell.

THROUGH RECORD TO OLYMPICS—By running 800 meters in 2 minutes 20 2-5 seconds, and thereby setting a new world mark for members of her sex, Miss Inga Gentzel of Stockholm earned the right to enter the world games under the colors of her country. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



PEARL BUTTONS COME INTO THEIR OWN as plain and fancy embroidery at a pony and donkey show held by London costermongers, those colorful street hawkers of fruits, vegetables, or what have you. Princess Louise, duchess of Argyle, presented the prizes to the winners, the first three of which are shown here. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



LA BELLE FRANCE REJOICES—Mistinguette, noted actress, places a liberty bonnet on the head of Mlle. Dufresne, signifying that the girl has been chosen as the Marianne of Paris. As such, she officiated at the Paris celebration of Bastille day, the "Fourth of July" of France. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

THE NINETEENTH HOLE

Comfortable wicker chairs . . . people chatting easily . . . and bottles of "Canada Dry" on the table

FROM the club veranda the grass of the fairway looks green and bright in the sun . . . from a near-by tee comes the sharp click of a well-stroked drive . . . you stretch out with that pleasant, tired languor of a game well-played . . . and as the talk runs easily on this or that you sip from a tall glass of "Canada Dry." Life is good.

Distinction like that of some rare wine

Life is good when it includes such a beverage as this fine old ginger ale. Made with the lore of three generations of vintners, it has a distinctive quality like the bouquet of some rare wine. "What a beautiful drink!" the connoisseur exclaims as he sips from its crystal depths.

And it is a beautiful drink. "Canada Dry" has "balance" which comes from blending the finest quality of Jamaica ginger and other absolutely pure ingredients in an exact proportion. Constant watchfulness is maintained always, to prevent any variation from the set standard. Hourly tests under laboratory methods are made to insure purity. By a secret method of carbonation, "Canada Dry" retains its sparkle long after the bottle is opened.

"Canada Dry" has no unpleasant after-effects

Capsicum (red pepper) makes ginger ale bite. But "Canada Dry" hasn't any bite, because it hasn't any capsicum in it. The subtle, gingery taste of "Canada Dry" means real goodness for you. That is why leading medical authorities recommend it and why many leading hospitals serve it.

Always order "Canada Dry"—in hotels, restaurants, on the train, at your club. Serve it at home, too. Drink it and know that here is a fine ginger ale.

CHICAGO'S ONLY woman life guard is the distinction held by Margaret Ward. If you can't swim, and are thinking of going in over your head, you might try the Central park pool at Blue Island, where Miss Ward holds forth. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)

ON THE HURRICANE DECK of a wild cayuse, this cowboy daredevil clings precariously to his broncho by means of a surcingle. The scene is one of those enacted daily at the Chicago rodeo at Soldiers' field, wherein the old west is brought back east. The annual exhibition opened yesterday.

CASE FOR TRAFFIC BOBBIES on the Thames. Boating on London's historic river, always popular, is never so much in favor as when there are races at the famous Ascot course. That was the destination of these devotees of water and turf. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)

AND THEN THEY'D ROW, ROW, ROW—With the riverside thronged by crew enthusiasts, and in a setting such as only England can provide, the Thames Rowing club defeated Trinity college of Dublin in the first race for the Thames Challenge cup. It was the opening of the 1928 Henley regatta. (Photograph copyright by Pacific and Atlantic.)

THE ONLY SCHOOL OF ITS KIND IN THE WORLD—Student Body and Faculty, Session of 1927-28, Davey Institute of Tree Surgery, Kent, Ohio

DAVEY TREE SURGEONS

MARTIN L. DAVEY, President and General Manager

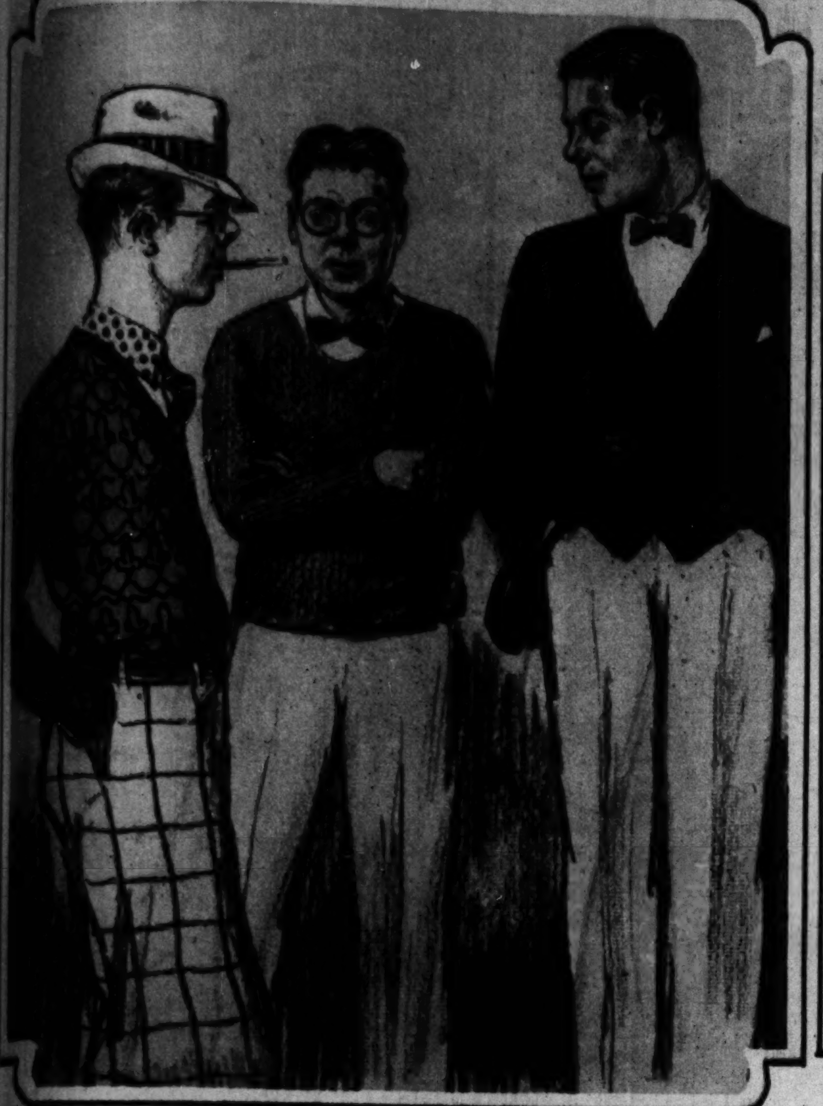
The Tumbling Team of The Davey Institute of Tree Surgery

One of the many athletic teams of this unusual school. Davey students take naturally to athletics. They are sturdy, energetic young men of the outdoor type. The training of their bodies goes along with class and laboratory instruction to keep them mentally alert, physically fit and in all other ways qualified for the practice of their exacting profession. Only men of character, ability and well balanced temperament survive the Davey system of selecting and training employees. These men find joy in their work—to them it is the most fascinating thing in the world.

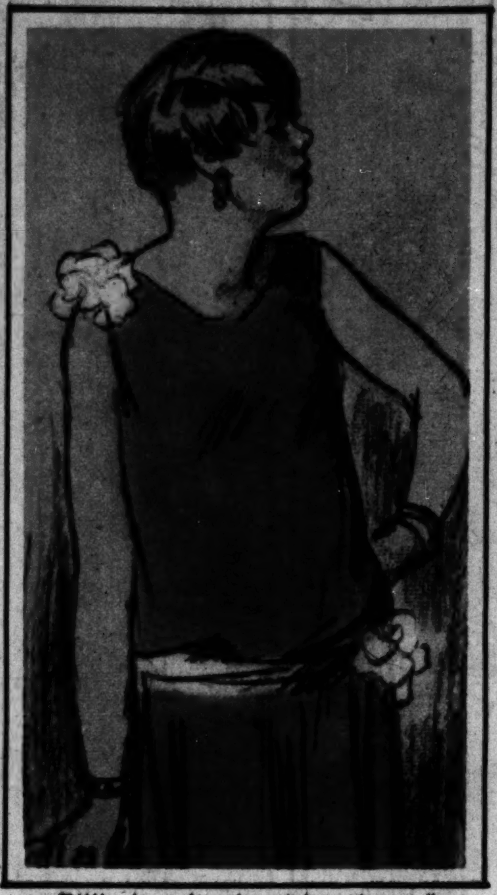
College Vacation

By W. E. Hill

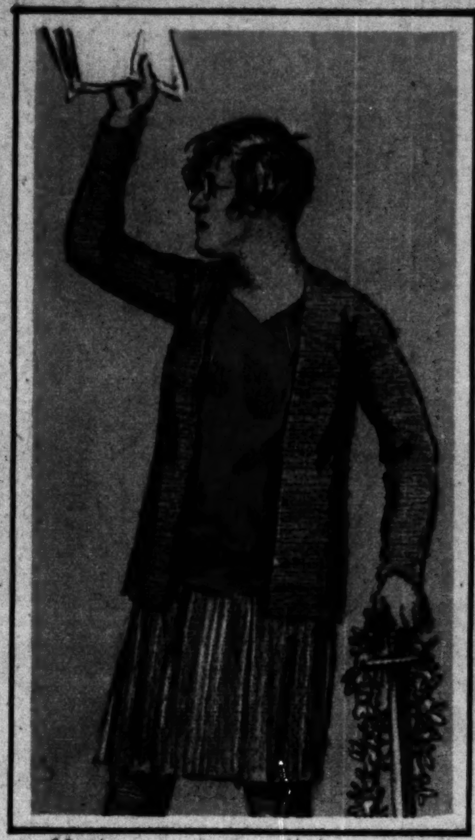
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]



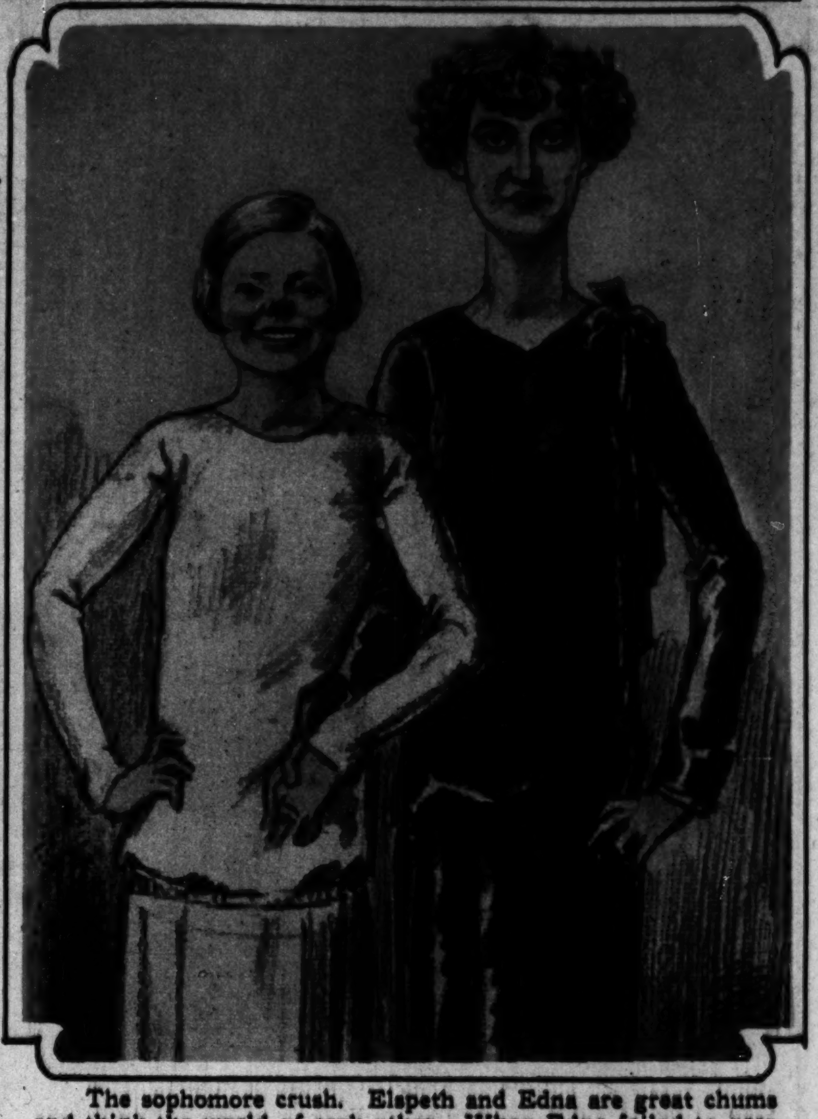
Brothers in the bonds. Roy and Rodney are fellow members of Zeta Eta Wham. They are doing a little off season rushing during summer vacation, having unearthed a high school graduate who is going to college this fall. The high school grad is all done up collegiate. "Look us up as soon as you get to college," Roy is saying, "and don't let the Psi U's or the Dekes get hold of you till you see Zeta Eta Wham!"



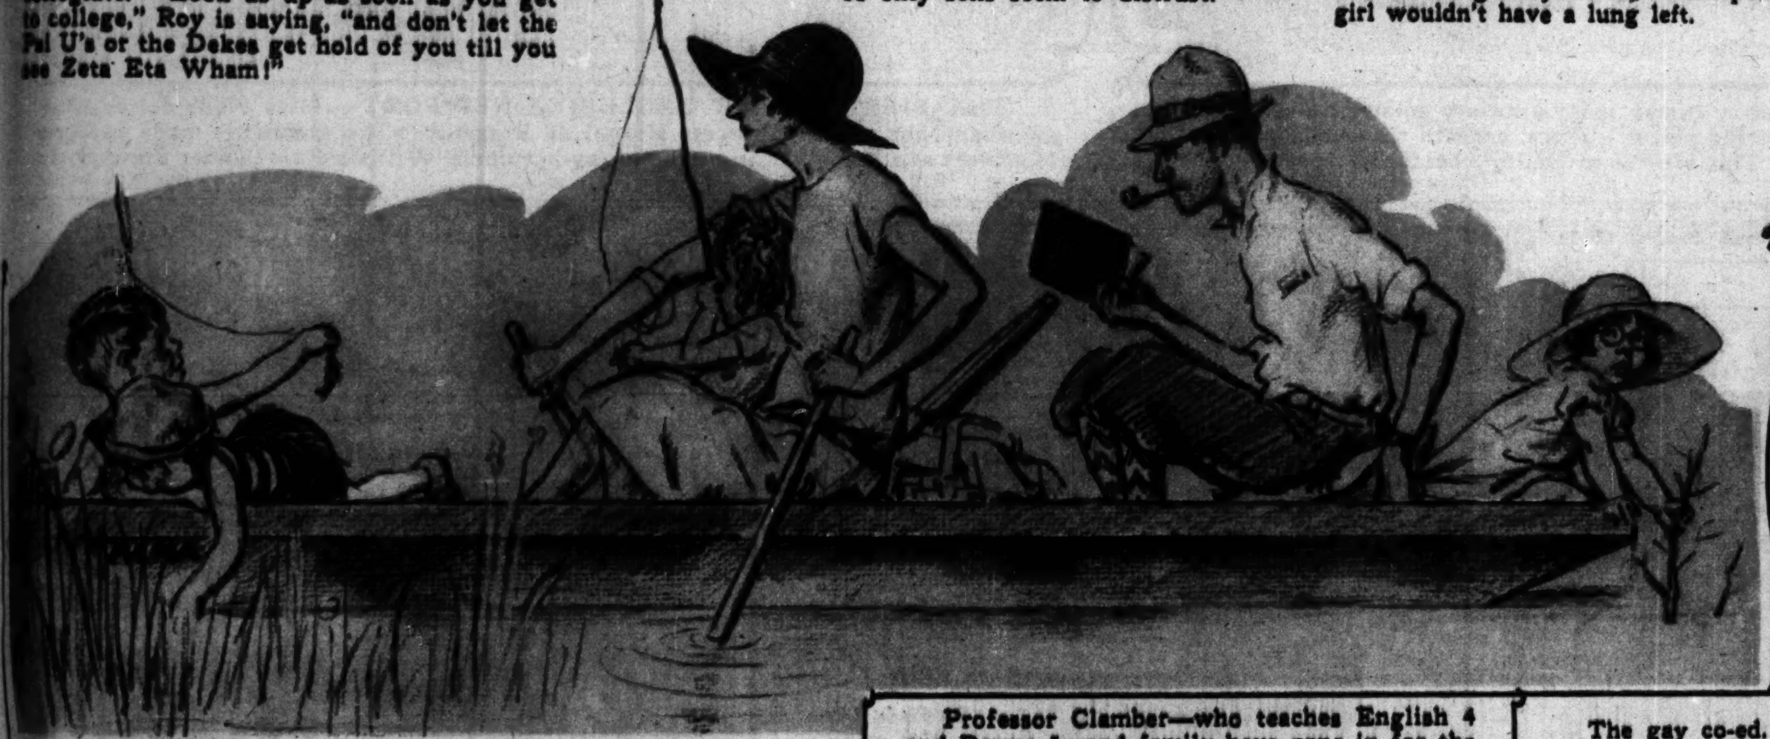
Billie is a lovely girl at heart but just the same there are a number of mothers who will be glad when Billie goes back to college. "I wish I dared ask her," remarks one doting mama, "whether or no her intentions to my son are honorable!" Billie has that kind of a face that somehow mothers of only sons seem to distrust.



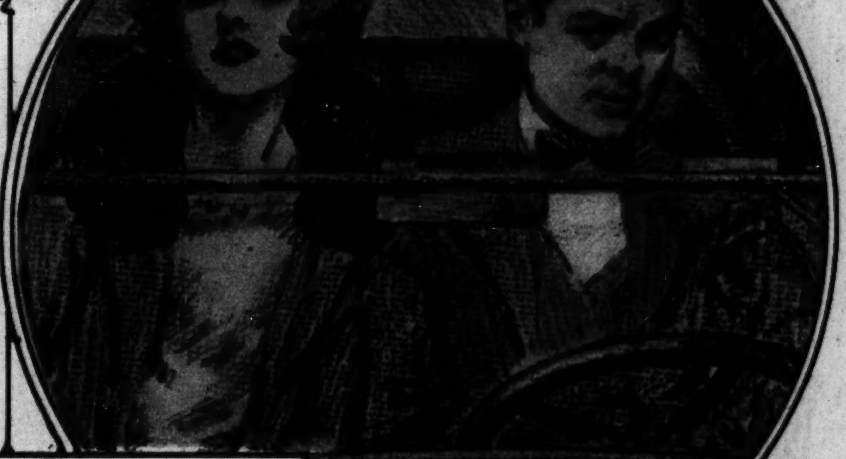
Marion can stay still just so long and then she begins to foment inside and gets up a little theater movement or a pageant. During junior year Marion got up a lovely masque for use at commencement depicting the life of Milton, and this summer she has volunteered to help out the local talent back home. They are doing a big pageant and Marion is shouting and directing till you'd think the poor girl wouldn't have a lung left.



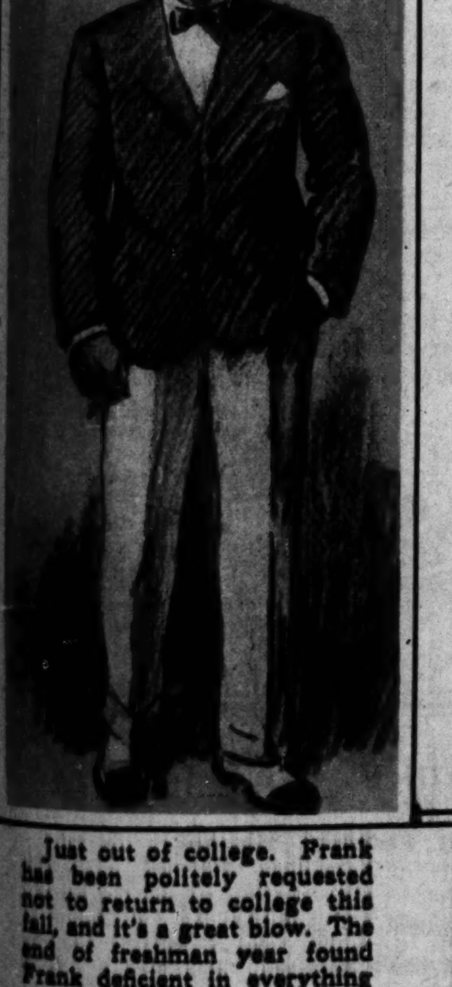
The sophomore crush. Elspeth and Edna are great chums and think the world of each other. When Edna failed to pass her physics exam last spring, what did Elspeth do but go to the physics department and beg with tears in her dear little eyes that she be allowed to fail in physics also just so Edna wouldn't be lonesome. And the physics department were so touched they gave Edna 85 per cent on her final paper. And during summer vacation first Elspeth visits Edna in Seattle, and then Edna visits Elspeth in Brooklyn, and so it goes.



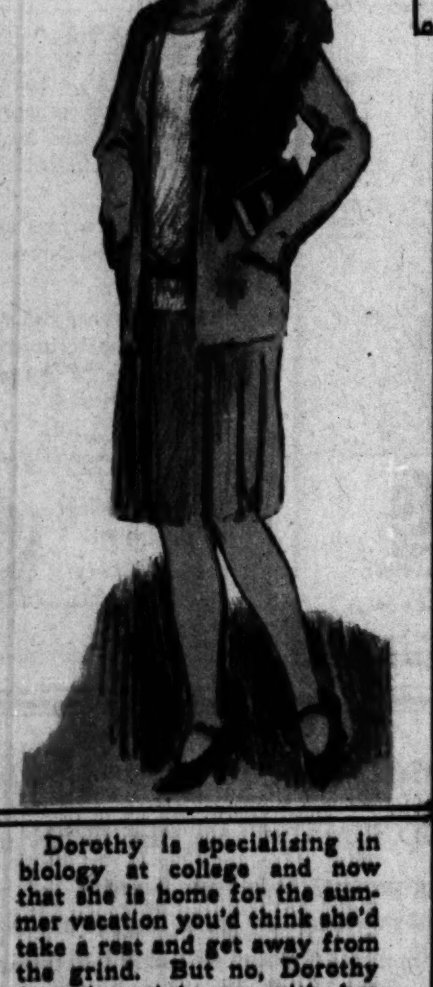
Professor Clamber—who teaches English 4 and Drama 5—and family have gone in for the simple life these summer months. Professor Clamber, Mrs. Clamber and the younger Clambers, Winifred, Claude, Violet and Merton, are out boating on Lake Winnoteehee this bright July day. Professor Clamber is reading aloud from "The Sun Also Rises" and skipping a word now and then, because you see Winifred (extreme right) is very bright and understands everything.



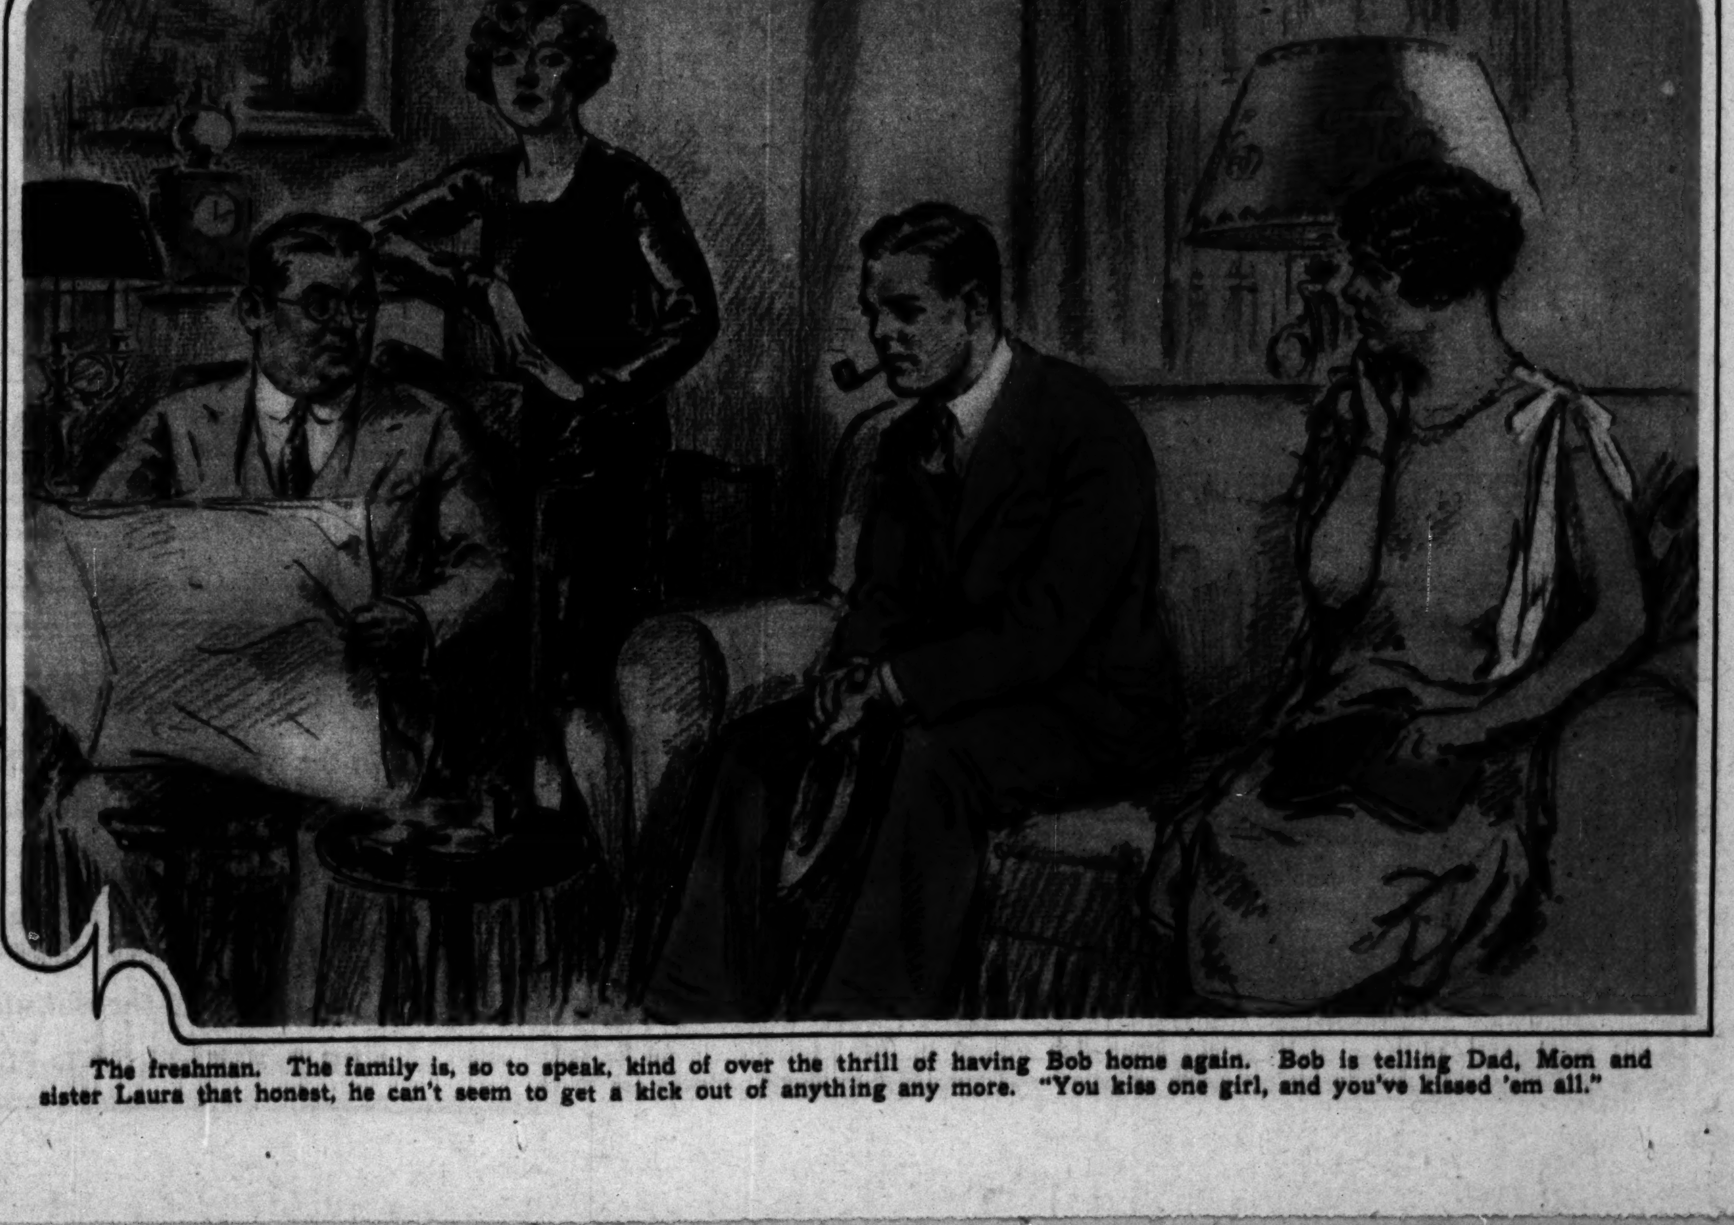
The gay co-ed. Betty is very popular with the boy friends and her family sees very little of her during the summer months. Betty might almost be back at the university for all poppa and mama see of her. The only difference being, her laundry is home, instead of her having to send it home, as she does during the winter months.



Just out of college. Frank has been politely requested not to return to college this fall, and it's a great blow. The end of freshman year found Frank deficient in everything but botany and when he over cut his chemistry lab to enter a dance marathon it was too much for the registrar and the dean, to say nothing of the chemistry prof who was hurt to the quick by it. Frank is resting up this summer.

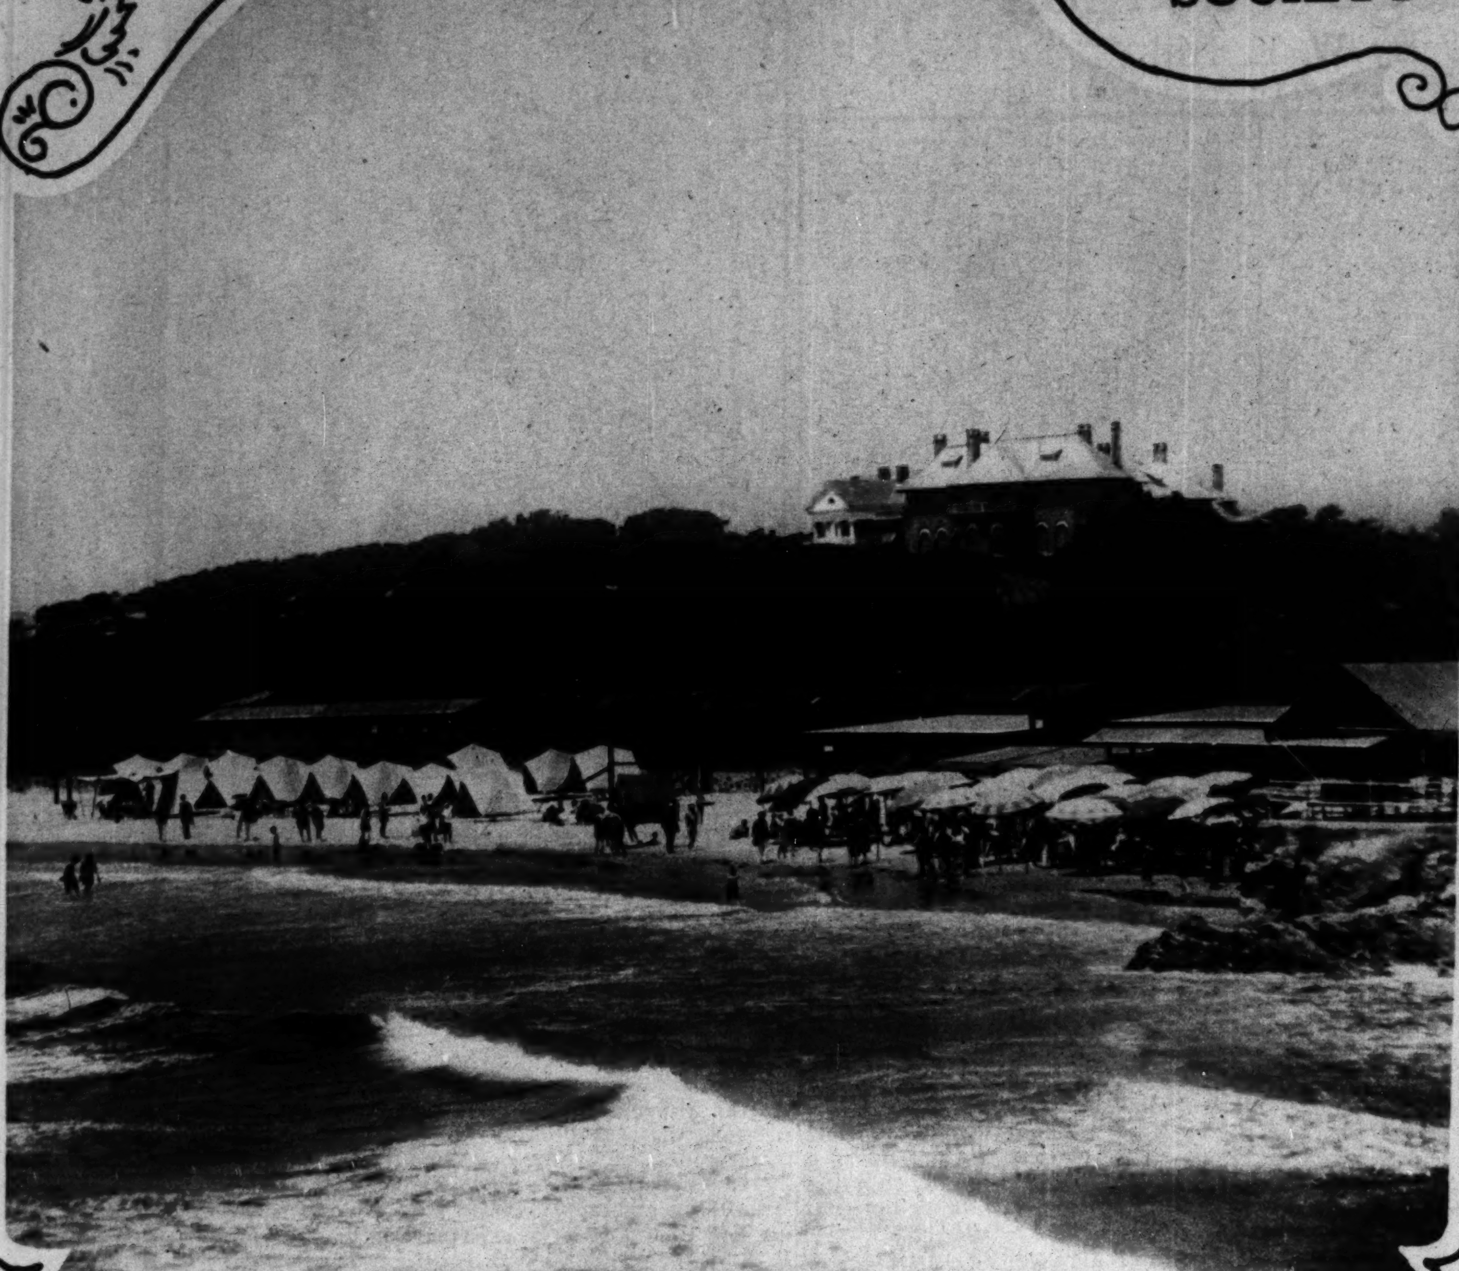


Dorothy is specializing in biology at college and now that she is home for the summer vacation you'd think she'd take a rest and get away from the grind. But no, Dorothy is going right on with her studies at home and driving her poor mother nearly crazy. Always dissecting a frog's aorta or drawing pictures of a toad's nervous system when she ought to be out with the boys.



The freshman. The family is, so to speak, kind of over the thrill of having Bob home again. Bob is telling Dad, Mom and sister Laura that honest, he can't seem to get a kick out of anything any more. "You kiss one girl, and you've kissed 'em all."

SOCIETY



KEEPING COOL AT NEWPORT—With the dog days at sultry climax, many a society notable has established himself or herself at the most fashionable of all the American watering places. There, beneath the choice collection of cottages and castles, the ocean serves as an iceless refrigerator. This view is of Bailey's beach, Newport.

Corns

Relief in one minute

In one minute—in fact the instant you apply Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads — corn pain stops. Zino-pads remove the cause—friction and pressure of shoes. That is why they give such quick relief. You will keep permanently rid of corns if you apply Zino-pads at the first sign of irritation.

Powerful liquids or caustic plasters ignore the cause—often make the toes sore from acid burn. Zino-pads won't harm the tenderest skin. Thin, protective, healing. At all drug, shoe and dept. stores—35c per package.

IN THE WOMAN'S SECTION OF THE TRIBUNE TODAY!

AUNT MARY was one of those unassuming, modest, unselfish people who seem a bit colorless to their intimates. . . . Scarcely any one recognized the depth of character and beauty of mind and soul that was Mary's—until a shock brought her brother to a vivid realization of his little sister's devotion.

CANNON BALL BAKER
NEW YORK

"Shaler Patches are my Life Insurance"~ Cannon Ball Baker

"After looking over the long list of road records I have established, most people are curious to know how I have been able to drive at break-neck speed for twenty-two years—and live to set new records today. The main reason is that I don't believe in taking any unnecessary fool chances. Before I start a race, I carefully examine every square inch of my car—even down to some details that the average motorist would consider trivial.

"For instance, I know from years of fast driving how important it is to have puncture repairs vulcanized. Nothing is more likely to get an automobile driver into trouble than speeding along on tires that merely look all right. Leaky puncture repairs always mean under-inflated tires—and under-inflated tires mean broken casing walls—and then blow-outs! And I have seen too many cars hurtled off the road by blow-outs to take a chance on anything but vulcanized puncture repairs.

"In my racing work, where my tube repairs must withstand the friction of continuous high speeds, Shaler Patches are my life insurance. To get a repair that will stand up under such punishment, I find it is absolutely essential that the patch be vulcanized in place—and the Shaler method is the only one I can use with confidence.

"With the higher speeds at which all motorists travel today—and because of the greater 'drop' occasioned by blow-outs in the larger tires now used—I sincerely recommend that every motorist have each puncture repair securely vulcanized. I always carry a Shaler 5-Minute Vulcanizer in my own car—and use it all the time. When I have tires fixed at a garage or service station, I always insist on Shaler Patches. I make the repairman use my Shaler outfit if he does not have one of his own."

Cannon Ball Baker

"Cannon Ball" Baker is truly the dean of all road racers. In establishing eighty trans-continental records he has traveled hundreds of thousands of miles at racing speed. Thus he knows better than any other man the vital importance of sound tires for safe travel.

Carry a Shaler in Your Car

The complete outfit — vulcanizer, tire roughener and a liberal supply of both round and oblong patches. Costs less than one average tankful of gas.

Rotogravure
ATTRACTS!

ROTOGRAVURE attracts because the mind is always open to the lure of the picture. And no medium obtainable can flash that lure to better advantage than Tribune rotogravure.

With the warmth, the vividness, the perfection of reproduction in Tribune rotogravure, all the illusion of possession, of use, can be created right on the printed page—all the luxury of smart shoes, the enjoyment to be obtained from a new radio, the pleasure of owning a full silver service—and this without wordy exhortation. The impulse to buy comes as naturally as it does to the thirsty wayfarer confronted with an attractive display of ice-cold drinks. The rotogravure picture is the perfect selling medium for every type of merchandise.

None knows this better than the leading manufacturers of America—and every Sunday they make generous use of Tribune rotogravure to capitalize its unique power. If you are interested in increasing sales—try Tribune rotogravure. This ideal selling medium registers your product in the minds of over a million readers every Sunday—and sells it to a large portion of the buying public in five great states.

. . . Men, too, react to the appeal of rotogravure. Good golf togs form one of their secret ambitions. Sales follow a presentation like this.

. . . The rich beauty of a silver service enhanced by rotogravure. Women will want it.

ESCAPING FROM WANG TI'S PRIVATE DEN – CHESTER AND CHING CHOW PUT TO SEA IN A SMALL BOAT – AFTER DRIFTING FOR DAYS THEY FIND THEIR SCANTY SUPPLY OF FOOD EXHAUSTED AND THEIR LAST DROP OF FRESH WATER GONE – JUST WHEN THEY ARE ABOUT TO ABANDON ALL HOPE – THEY ARE PICKED UP BY THE "BOUNDING SHARK" – A SUSPICIOUS APPEARING CRAFT MANNED BY AN EVIL LOOKING CREW – IN THE MEAN TIME UNCLE BIM HAS CHARTERED EVERY AVAILABLE SHIP – ZEPPELIN AND AEROPLANE IN HIS FRANTIC SEARCH FOR THE MISSING ADVENTURERS –
THIS SHIP MUST HAVE THE TOUGHEST CREW ON THE OCEAN – THEY ALL CARRY GUNS AND SWORDS IN THEIR BELTS – AND THEY SPEND ALL THEIR TIME DRINKING AND FIGHTING – I'LL BE GLAD WHEN WE ARE OUT OF THIS FIX – AS I'M SURE THE CREW OF THIS SHIP IS PLANNING SOME MISCHIEF –
WE MUST CONTINUE TO WATCH WITH UNCLOSING EYES – IN MY ROCKLIKE OPINION THE BENEVOLENT SHIP IS MANNED BY A BAND OF UNDISPUTED PIRATES – AND THIS PERSON WOULD GIVE MANY PIECES OF GOLD TO LEARN THEIR DISHONORABLE INTENTIONS –
THE RICH UNCLE WOULD GLADLY PAY COUNTLESS DOLLARS FOR THE RETURN OF THE YOUTHFUL PERSON – WE MUST PLACE THEM IN CLOSE CONFINEMENT BEFORE SOME OF THE FOREIGN DEVILS' SHIPS COME IN SEARCH OF THEM –
I HOPE WE CAN REACH OUR CABIN BEFORE THEY START AFTER US –
I HEARD THE CAPTAIN SAY HE WAS GOING TO TAKE US PRISONERS AND MAKE UNCLE BIM PAY A BIG RANSOM FOR US –
IT IS WRITTEN – ONLY THE FOOLISH ONES DESPISE A WORD OF WARNING –
THE WORTHLESS ONES WILL FIND OUR CABIN THE DWELLING OF A MOST UNPLEASANT SURPRISE –
THIS IS THE LAST BARREL OF GUN POWDER –

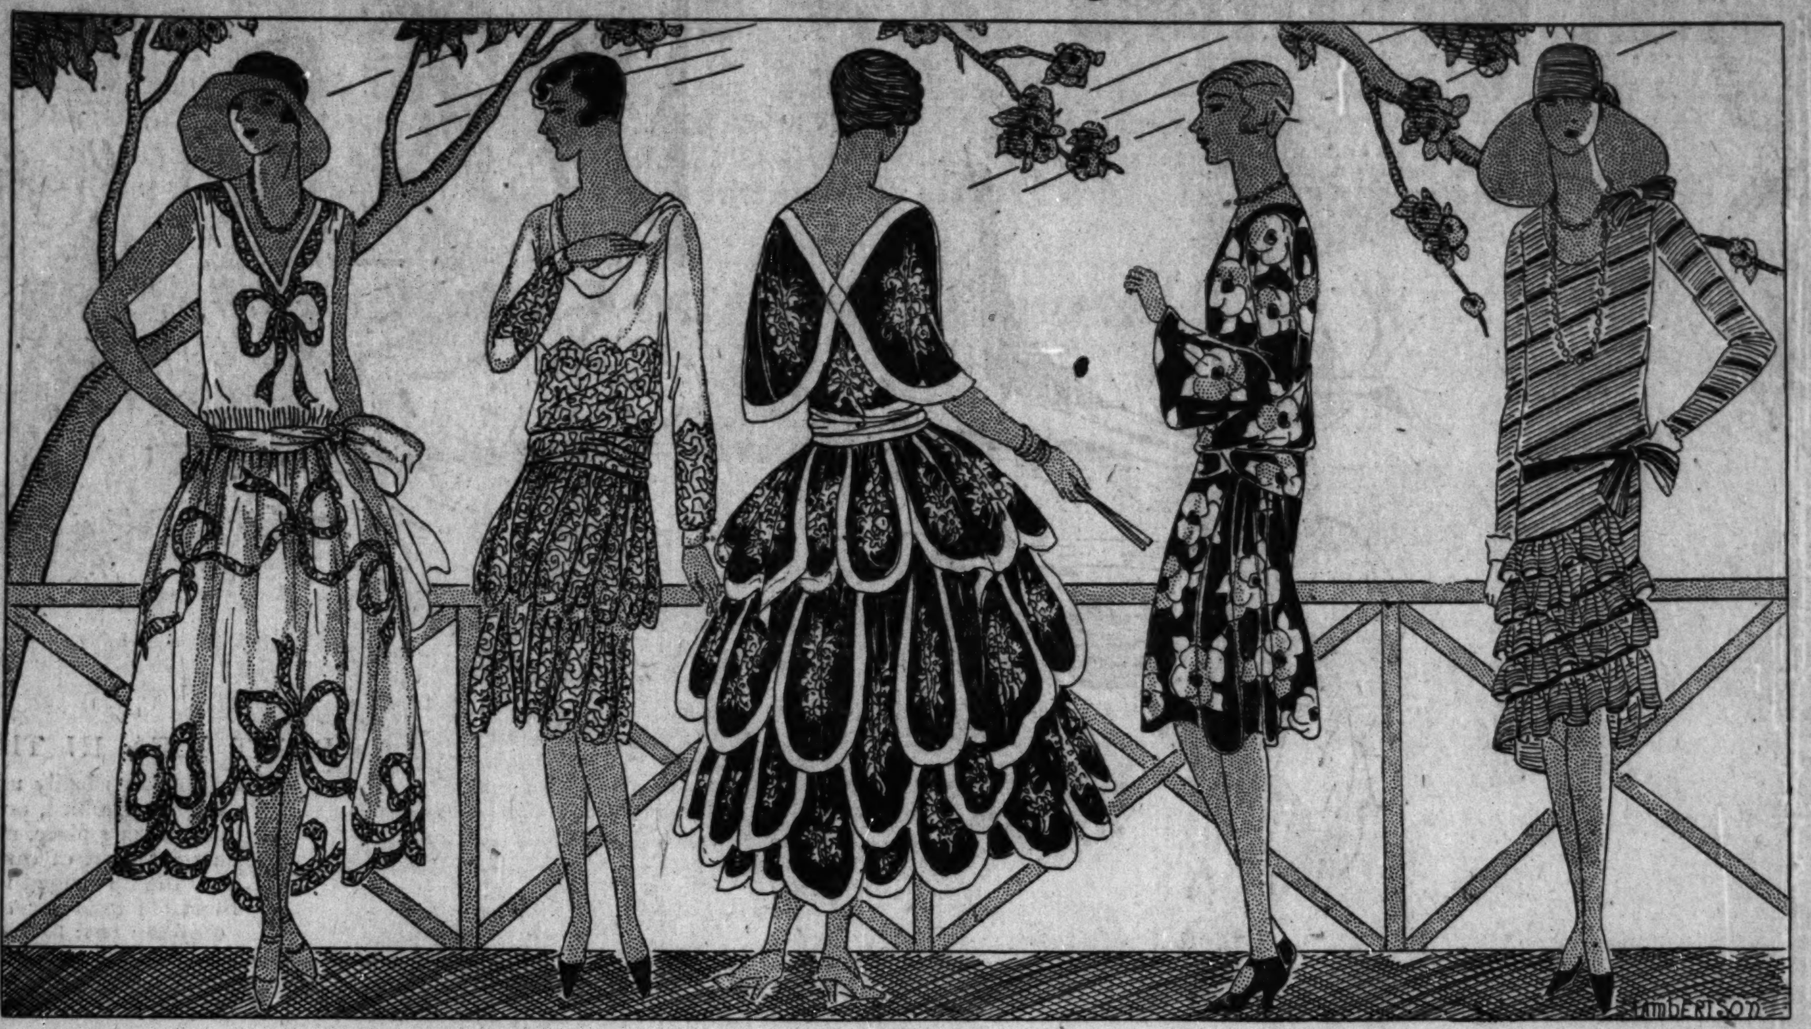
Here Are Gowns for Airy Summer Festivities

They Are of the Lightest Materials, and Wide, Full Skirts Give Them a Graceful Swing.

By Corinne Lowe.



That we are returning to the good old summer fashion of the lace insertion is evident in the Chaveriat model at our extreme left—a lavender organdy inset with cream lace.

Next, Molyneux designs an ensemble combining dove gray georgette and matching lace with an unlined coat of the chiffon collared in fox.

In the center the loveliest period frock of the summer is found in Lanvin's famous model of black embroidered and bordered in white.

Fourth, a flowered chiffon from Worth orders all fullness to the rear. Last, Premet designs an original ruffled model of striped chiffon.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—It is as hard for the average writer of fashions to gasp as it was for the famous little boy in Grimm's Fairy Tales to shudder. Yet even we, calloused spectators of the changing mode, now and then express some height of emotion in the presence of an especially beautiful creation. For example, there is the frock illustrated in the center of today's page.

Last spring I was privileged to be present at the presentation of Jeanne Lanvin's summer modes and when this particular frock appeared a little ripple of delighted surprise ran through us chroniclers of fashion, us habitual nonconductors of that emotion. Yes, we gasped—even we gasped. Really, the creation was too beautiful. White flowers against the soft night! A line of Chinese poetry! An exquisite antique urn with its white design cut chaste and cold from the black background.

For many seasons Lanvin has been creating the period gown, but she has never done anything more glamorous than this same frock. Whether it be carried out in black mousseline de soie or black organdy it is equally lovely—this skirt made up of manifold petals each embroidered and bordered in white and the corsage with its graceful bertha falling to the elbows.

Now here, completed by broad brimmed black hat trimmed in white, is an ideal garden party frock for slim young debutante or matron. It is undoubtedly the most arresting model of this type which Paris has sent us. Yet it is, after all, only one of many gowns designed to express the feminine mood of a summer afternoon set among flower beds, hedges and trees.

We in America have not had so much practice with garden parties as our British cousins. Yet we are now doing five finger exercises and in time we are going to become real virtuosi. More and more, in fact, we are utilising our beautiful lawns and our superior climate for the out-of-doors festivity. Teas and bridges, weddings and just plain parties—all are being celebrated out of doors and this fact has given a tremendous stimulus to frocks that breathe the spirit of a long summer afternoon.

Organdies and batistes, chiffons and crêpes, lace and mousseline de soie—all these are the natural element of this picturesque type of frock. Here the period gown is at its best and here all the fluffiest and most feminine of accessories come as naturally as a silk cushion to a Pomeranian. Broad brimmed hats of hair and Leghorn and all the new Burbanked straws! Parasols! Costume jewelry! Slippers of delicate kid and satin! Sheerest and most fairylike weaves of hosiery! Ah yes, in the setting of the garden party woman forgets that in the morning she ran out for her dip in the sea clad in a costume which could not be distinguished from that of her brother. She forgets the boyish sports clothes, the shingled hair and the aridity of silhouette—all that long era of change separating her from the ringleted beauties of the past. Here woman is herself—her old hereditary self.

Yet, feminine and summery as are many of these creations, they breathe often a spirit of greatest simplicity. In fact, nothing could better demonstrate this fact than the model at the extreme left of our page. For here Chaveriat, that master creator of the lingerie gown, has expressed the garden party mode in its truest sense.

This frock is of either organdy or mousseline de soie and it may be of what tone you please, including black and white. Here we show it in lavender organdy trimmed with insertions of cream lace. The bowknot motifs of this lace are exceedingly effective, especially in conjunction with the scalloped hemline. As will be noted immediately, the skirt dips in the back.

As in all the Chaveriat models, this summery frock achieves its charm through exquisite hand-work. In addition to the lace, finest of tucks run horizontally around the skirt between the insertion and under a sash, which may be either of self-material or of satin in slightly deeper tone. One perceives more of this hand-tucking—here in perpendicular mode.

This model presents again the activity of lace in our summer modes. For many years we have not seen much of the good old insertions of lace with which our summer wash frocks used to be encrusted. Always, of course, there have been a few to preserve the tradition of summer. This season, however, lace is up and about its old chores. More and more of it is being used in insertion and medallion form and today many of our flounces are either of lace or they are applied with a heading of lace.

Now that we are again on the subject of lace we are bound to speak of its eligibility to the garden party. The all-lace, the lace combined with chiffon or georgette and the lace trimmed—frocks of all three characters are an instantaneous thought in connection with our summer afternoon al fresco. Indeed, nothing could be more eloquent of the manner in which the lace gown fits into a summer landscape than the model designed by Molyneux, which we illustrate second from the left.

Like so many of the "lace" gowns of the season, this one is combined with georgette forming the upper section of both corsage and sleeves. The georgette is of dove gray and in this case the lace matches exactly. Incidentally, one must remark here upon the popularity of dove gray in the daytime model of lace or lace combination. This tone, together with the blonde sometimes known as "queen's hair," black and a certain lovely blue, are today given fashionable preference.

Of course, it would be perfectly correct to utilize here one of the colored laces in collaboration with that top of the modish dove gray. Rose lace would be charming and so would light blue. Even if, however, harmony rather than exact duplication of color is encountered, the coat of the ensemble is of the same gray of the frock. It is a wrap of unlined georgette and it is collared in fox slightly darker in tone.

As I wrote some months ago, some of the Paris designers ordered all fullness to the rear. Others maintained the side emphasis which has so long been identified with our skirts. The chiffon frock from Worth shown in our fourth sketch demonstrates the former in a delightful flowered chiffon which is one of the authoritative choices for our garden party.

Of black chiffon figured in great white roses with green leaves, this charming model adopts a skirt with a decided dip in the back and that dip is accentuated by the godets that are massed there in contrast with a plain front. The corsage is slightly bloused and the sleeves with their deep flounces represent one of the popular ways of finishing off a summer frock.

These flowered chiffons in all their various and ingenious pomp of flounces and ruffles and diagonal lines and draperies remain the most popular choice for the occasion of which we have been speaking. In fact, wherever there are afternoons, there are these flowered chiffons. One simply cannot get away from them.

And, of course, there are the other figured chiffons which are not flowered. Our last model, for instance! In this Premet supplies a chiffon with stripes—black, white, red and gray—which shows the present system of tempering the tailored ideal with the feminine exuberance which the present day requires. Although not quite so much in the spirit of the garden party as our other models, this is a youthful and smart frock which will be at home almost any place of a summer afternoon.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS by Sara Moore

YOU CAN'T PLEASE 'EM!

"My wife," moans the husband, "does not understand me!"
To ladies who listen and sigh at the cue,
How cross he would be, how resentful, if ever
The confidante ever admits, "But I do!"

'NOTHER NON-STOP RECORD.

I winged my heart and let it soar
To heights it never reached before. . . .
Nor was, it seems, the act too rash.
I'm waiting yet to hear it smash.

RIGHT IDEA IN THE WRONG AD.

Bright ideas badly used,
Bungled, fumbled, or confused
In the wrong place, rank as waste,
Lost for want of care and taste.
How the lip rouged world regrets
Blindfold tests for cigarets!

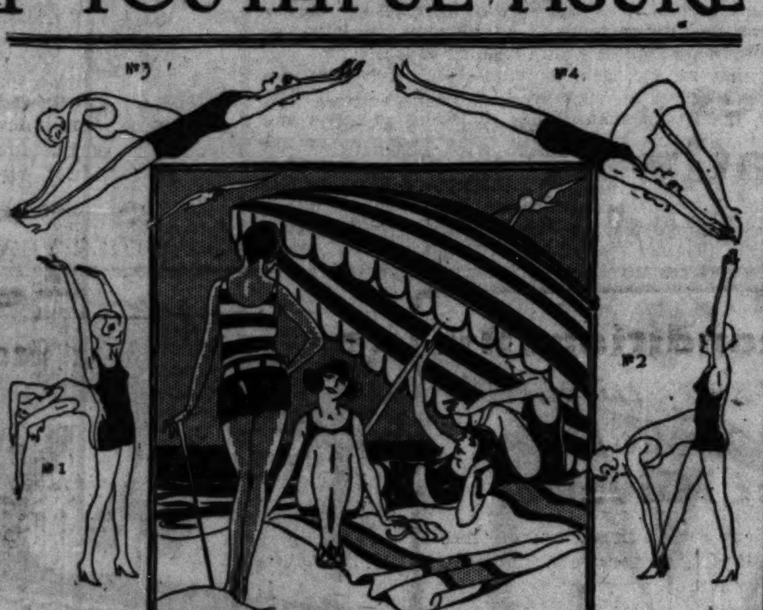
KEEP THAT YOUTHFUL FIGURE

These Exercises Will Give You That Slender, Trim Appearance All of Us Are Craving

by Antoinette Donnelly



NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—It's one thing to get your abdomen flattened down on a more or less strenuous diet—but it is another thing to keep it to the desirable flatness.

Perhaps because stomachs and abdomens, to most of us, are anatomical parts about which there is a certain delicacy of discussion, the point isn't emphasized often enough that a figure is no younger than the abdomen. Yet it is the plain truth.

Your arms and your legs may be thin, but if that midsection is puffy and bulging, the glory of the younger features is perceptibly dimmed.

The truth is, I do not think many women begin to worry about their surplus weight until they catch a profile view of their figures with the protruding abdomen and its frequent accompaniment, a similarly unflattened rear. I repeat that these parts are the pivotal centers upon which the youth or age of a figure revolves. It doesn't matter so much if the bust is well developed so long as the development doesn't extend beneath it.

A Common Type.

There is a type of mature figure seen often which emphasizes the point I'm trying to make. The woman is usually under five feet six, her bones are small, her hips narrow, her legs and ankles slender, but her full torso more nearly resembles a pouter pigeon than anything else. The same woman, with her well developed bust, but with flattened abdomen and slender hips and legs, would be a "fine figger of a woman," as little Pip's Uncle Joe used to say.

The bustless figure, I might remark incidentally, appears to have gone out of popularity with the boyish haircut. So that, unless they are abnormally large, there is no point any longer in confining them behind those unhealthy, forbiddingly tight brassieres of an earlier season. The 1928 figure is not a boyish chested one. It's ultra-feminine, with curves graduating into a willowy flatness over abdomen and buttock. Hips are slightly rounded—but with no more fat on them than hips gather when the abdomen and waist line are watched with censorious eyes.

If there is grossness in the regions to which I refer, of course, it will be necessary to call upon a dietary régime to hasten the work of flattening. Exercise alone would bring slow results if a burden of fat were to be lifted first.

If the padding is just beginning to be felt, the exercises I'm offering you today will be effective enough. But my object in presenting the abdomen and buttock exercises is more to keep that section of the figure they affect in such youthful condition that fat will not settle there. Not, of course, that they will not work in a reformatory way. They will, of course, and if you're wise you'll do them along with your reduced menus for the reason that they'll harden the muscles against an early return of the fat dissipated through diet.

Corsets are Expensive.

I've never been a strong advocate of women of a certain poundage going corsetless. My objections were solely on esthetic grounds. But a physical instructor whose work inspires my admiration claims that it is more advisable for a woman with a fat abdomen to go about without a corset in public as much as possible, since there is no better spur to keeping the abdomen flat than the feeling that somebody is noticing it.

And speaking of corsets, an "ad" of a 5th avenue woman's shop tells the story of a new corset innovation upon which designers brains worked prodigiously to accomplish the promised flatness fore and aft of the ideal figure. But that isn't the half of the story. My eyesight is good and I read the price of this marvelous "flattener" as $100.

Shades of our grandmeres who'd get a carload of steel thrown in with their corsets at $6.50!

Save the Hundred.

Now, if you need an impetus, you can save that $100 by using your own brains [and brawn] to accomplish the ideal shape. You can make a perfectly elegant corset for yourself out of muscle and the only cleaning bill you'll have to worry about is the cost of soap used in the daily tubbing.

To the younger women—in the twenties, say—I urge the daily figure treatment to be found in these flattening exercises. Need I emphasize again the direct value of good posture on the mid-part of your figure? Standing, sitting, walking, hold your abdomen flat, buttocks firmly contracted, chest up, and back and shoulders flat.

Exercises.

1. Stand about a foot from the wall with feet apart. Stretch the arms back overhead and slowly bend the body backward from the waist. Knees straight. Bend back until the hands touch the walls. Work further and further down the wall with your hands. But do not overdo at first in your zeal.

2. Stand with one foot extended far, hands raised overhead. Bring the hands down to touch the heel of the extended foot. Back to position. Then extend the other foot.

3. Lie down on the floor with hands stretched above the head. Raise the body to a sitting position, then on forward till hands touch toes. Keep the feet on the floor. Keep the back relaxed.

4. Lie down on the floor. Now swing the feet up and over the head, touching the floor behind. When you become more expert the feet will be able to touch the hands extended behind the head and an all-around swinging movement can be made by combining exercises 3 and 4.

5. Get down on all fours. Jump, bringing both knees up under the chest. Return to extended position.

6. Lie face down, arms extended beyond the head. Raise the head and legs as high as possible. Return to original position. When this comes easier you can make a rocking horse movement of it.

BEAUTY ANSWERS by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimple, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

T. Y. B.: FAT ARMS AREN'T beautiful. With vigorous exercise performed daily at a certain time and for a certain length of time, you may rid yourself of them. Stand erect, abdomen flat, knees straight, arms extended full length, straight out from the shoulders. Describe circles beginning with small ones and increasing to those of as large dimension as you can describe. Do this on the forward and backward movement.

H. L.: A GIRL OF 17, FIVE FEET five inches should weigh 125 pounds. You are twenty pounds overweight. The candy and ice cream sodas are undoubtedly responsible for much of the excess. You must eliminate them, and other fattening foods. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for my booklet on reducing, giving exercises and proper foods.

I. H. B.: THE AMOUNT OF EXercise necessary depends largely upon one's occupation. The houseworker gets sufficient muscular activity, whereas the girls in offices doing sedentary work require a certain amount of gymnastic exercise to keep them fit. Walking is excellent for them. If it isn't convenient, I have a set of exercises to be done at home, which may be had for a stamped addressed envelope.

H. T.: BRUSH YOUR HAIR EVERY morning and night for five minutes, and brush vigorously. This cleans the scalp, prevents dandruff and stimulates the growth of the hair. Dandruff cure may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

A Dollar for Your Dreams

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you'll mail us an account of your prophetic dream we'll pay $1 for every letter published. Address Dreams, Chicago Tribune.

Guarded from Death.

In 1913 I returned to the U. S. A. on the steamer Lusitania, but before sailing for home my friend, Mrs. Willy, spoke of her return to Chicago soon, when we would plan a return to Europe for a motor tour.

Mrs. Willy came, and we planned to go to Europe on the Lusitania. One night I had a vivid dream of being on a big steamboat. In the dream a sudden explosion aroused my curiosity. But I looked out on a calm sea, with the sun shining overhead, so I returned to unpacking my things, when another explosion of tremendous noise and horror sent me forcibly against the other side of the cabin. The ship listed terribly and my struggle to keep on my feet did not avail. With another effort I stood in the center of my room, awake and wondering for a few minutes where I was.

On my way down to cancel my engagement with the company I met Mrs. Plamondon, who laughed at my fears, as did Mrs. Willy. Both women sailed on the Lusitania, and both were drowned.

Many dreams have safeguarded me from harm. S. E.-W. D.

Insurance Had Run Out.

After having owned eight cars and spending literally hundreds of dollars in insurance without once getting a cent in return, I decided that an easy way to cut down on expenses was not to renew the last insurance which ran out on a Friday. My sister was using the car in a distant city.

Saturday night about 11 o'clock my roommate woke me, saying I was screaming.

"Well no wonder," I answered. "I thought our car was being stolen and I was yelling at the thief. Guess I've already begun to worry about letting the insurance run out."

The next morning on first waking I again began to think about the insurance on the car and decided it was worth the money to have the worry off my mind, so I wired my sister to take out insurance right away. And then came her answer. The car was stolen from in front of a theater Saturday night shortly before 11.

Understanding this is beyond me.

Heard a Voice.

It was a warm day in August. I had finished my household duties and thought I would rest awhile before making my usual visit to my mother, who lived a few blocks away.

Suddenly I heard some one call, "Go home at once. Your mother wants you."

Very much frightened, I ran to the door but found no one there. My neighbor was sitting on her porch, so I asked her if she had seen any one and told her what had happened. She said she had seen no one and I must have been dreaming.

I could not rest and so hurried home to find my mother sick in bed and she greeted me with, "Where have you been all day? I wanted you so."

Four days later she died. M. C.

A Happy Match.

A friend of mine had been going with a fellow for a few months. He was quiet and backward yet she though he liked her and she said she liked him. One day at a picnic they were with a cousin of hers, a boy and his wife who were recently married.

She said, "Why couldn't we marry and be happy like them?"

He answered, "I'll accept you and we'll be married tomorrow, but I was too bashful to ask you and I'm so glad you said what you did."

They are married and extremely happy and she often laughs and says she had more nerve than he did or she wouldn't be his wife today.

Small Choice.

Helen had been waiting patiently through many years, for bashful Dick to propose. Finally, her patience exhausted, she decided to take advantage of Leap Year, and do the proposing herself.

One evening in March, six of us, including Helen and Dick, were having supper after the theater, and we were talking of June brides, when Helen said:

"I wouldn't mind being a bride this June. Let's see! Bob could be the best man, Ella, the maid of honor and Flossie and George, attendants."

Turning to Dick, she said jokingly, "What will you be, Dick? The only choice left is either groom or flower girl. Which do you take?"

Dick took the part of the groom and this June, Helen was married, according to her wishes. A. L. P.

Why Procrastinat with Deafness?

THERE'S ONLY ONE WAY to find hearing, and the health and happiness that go with it. And that's to look for it. Each day that you put off the search is only another lost day of nervous irritation and social embarrassment.

So why not look for hearing today? And why not start the quest in the private consultation rooms of the

New Acousticon

We honestly believe that you will find it there, as so many others have, through the medium of the new and finer Acousticon—a scientific hearing aid with a tiny receiver, or earpiece, no larger than a silver dime.

TEN-DAY FREE TRIAL.

Take the instrument home with you if you wish. Test it for ten days. Be sure that it's the sort of hearing aid you've always hoped to find. Learn how clearly, how distinctly it transmits sounds to subnormal ears. Probably you'll keep it, but if you don't you may return it without charge or obligation.

If you find a call impossible, merely send your name and address to Dept. 73 for a free home test.

Back-Stage Secrets

By Edna Wallace Hopper

APPEARING several times daily on the theatrical stage taxes the skin to the utmost. The make-up meant for footlights is not the gently compounded range of tints used in the boudoir. Between acts make-up must be removed . . . in the most protective, delicate manner possible. And, in my case, quickly—because my numerous interests leave little spare time. In fact, my forty-odd years on the stage have taught me split-second efficiency in caring for my body.

You can follow my program at a cost of—

Ten minutes and Less than 8c } a day!

With the cosmetics I use you need only devote ten minutes a day to your own hair, skin, teeth and hands. The methods I recommend to you have preserved the petal-like fineness of my skin. In my sixties I appear to be a girl of twenty. European scientists each year ask that I submit to physical tests during my summer vacation abroad. My reactions are those of a young girl.

But it never has been my ambition to figure as a beauty culturist. Prolonging beauty is a pleasure to me—and a necessity, because my fame and fortune were won by beauty and upon it my career depends.

My Personal Invitation

So that you may try my program I have prepared a Beauty Set of the most important cosmetics I use daily. In addition I have added samples of Wave and Sheen, my hair dressing, and White Youth Clay. The Art Panel box is a happy achievement. You will be glad to have it for your dressing table or traveling case. Full sizes of the 7 beauty aids you will receive in this box would cost over $4. Send the coupon today with 50c to partially cover cost.

FREE! I will include a free Certificate for a 50-cent tube of Quindent, the milk of magnesia tooth paste. So the cosmetics really cost you nothing.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Summer Suits Worn in the French Capital Are Frilled, Plaited, and Made to Look the Acme of Femininity

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—It is common knowledge that if you want to find any one in Paris you have only to sit in front of the Café de la Paix, the most international of all the cafés in Paris, and eventually the person you are seeking will pass by.

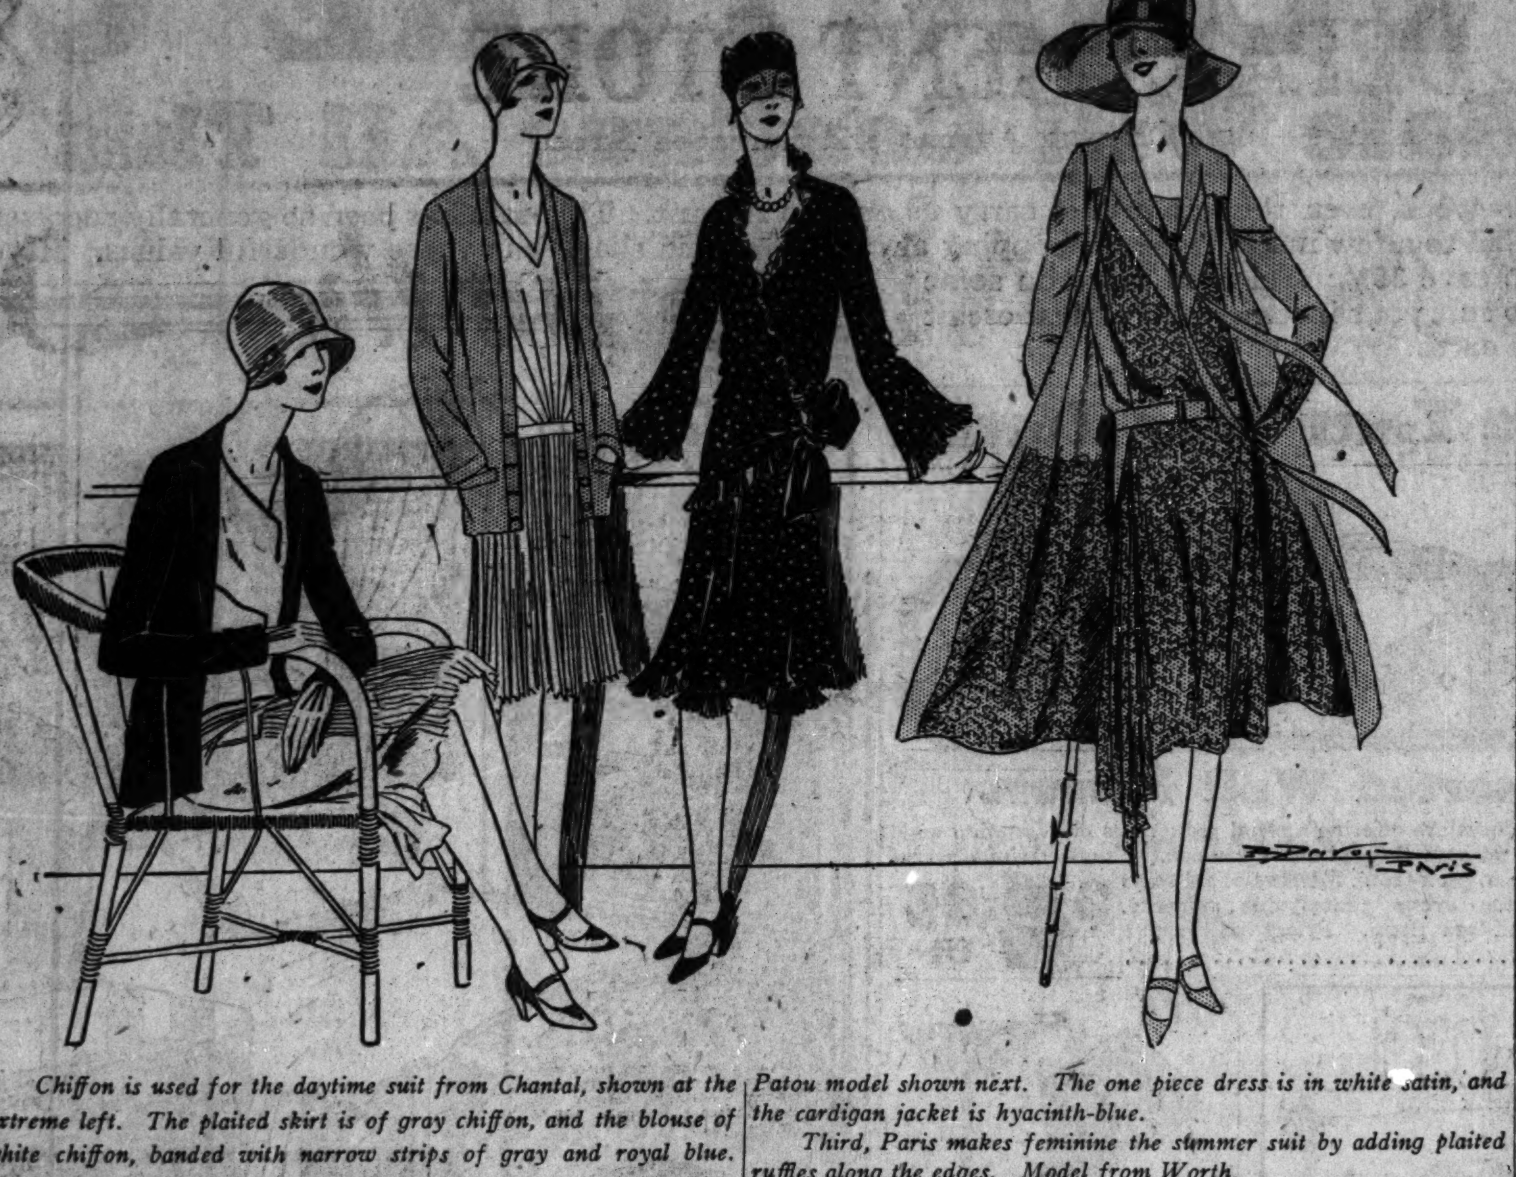
It is also known to all of the intelligentsia of chic that if you want to see every smart woman in Paris you have only to sit in the celebrated couloir in the cote Vendome of the Ritz, and they will pass you as a mannequin parade passes in the salons of the grande couture. You may have to devote an hour between 12:30 and 1:30 every day for a week to see all of the stars of fashion, because, contrary to the usual idea, there is no one certain smart day in this smartest of hotels. And, if you are not familiar with the faces of the aristocrats of chic, you will need a guide to point them out—a sort of verbal program, as it were, to give you the names—because every woman who sails by in gorgeous raiment it not among the elect. In fact, these women whose clothes are the last word in taste and fashion are, more often than not, inconspicuous.

But what they wear has a bearing on the styles for the world in general, and this season THEY are wearing, with much frequency, the suit. By this I do not mean that every smart woman wears the suit all the time, nor even half of the time, but that the suit is one of the numerous stars of the summer style firmament.

Earlier in the season the strictly tailored suit of wool was smart, but with warm weather it has disappeared, and another type has taken its place. The summer suit cannot be described as "strictly" anything—certainly not tailored. The suit for hot weather is just as feminine as the frilliest printed frock you see, and sometimes it is given the ruffle treatment just like a dress. Again the suit is made of lace, and only its construction of jacket and skirt connect it with the name.

Frequently the summer suit is cut on the lines of the sports suit, with short simple jacket, skirt and jumper, or it is composed of jacket and one piece dress. Such suits, which are worn a great deal by the famous forty smartest women in Paris, do not, however, resemble the sports costume beyond their cut and lines. They are made of more elegant, softer and more feminine materials, and the color scheme is distinctly different.

I have seen a good many satin suits this summer, suits with collarless cardigan jackets and plaited skirts worn with blouses of satin or printed chiffon in contrasting tones.



Chiffon is used for the daytime suit from Chantal, shown at the extreme left. The plaited skirt is of gray chiffon, and the blouse of white chiffon, banded with narrow strips of gray and royal blue. Royal blue crepe marocain makes the jacket.

A novel use of satin for sports suits is illustrated in the Jean Patou model shown next. The one piece dress is in white satin, and the cardigan jacket is hyacinth-blue.

Third, Paris makes feminine the summer suit by adding plaited ruffles along the edges. Model from Worth.

Last, Philippe and Gaston make this ensemble of beige georgette combined with lace, which shades from beige to brown.

A good many women are wearing printed suits, and these are often cut on similar lines, or they are made more feminine by a treatment of plaited or circular flounces and jabots.

A few women are wearing chiffon and georgette suits for evening. The cardigan jacket, the upper half of the smart suit, is on the way to become a classic garment for evening, and every woman of fashion has one or two such jackets, in satin, in lamé, in velvet, in all-over beaded crêpe, in chiffon, or in georgette, to slip over her evening frocks and to make them less formal.

Chiffon, as a material for the daytime suit—that is, part of it—is one of the novelties Paris has introduced this summer. Our first model, at the extreme left, makes use of this material and gains an unusual distinction thereby. The summer suit illustrated here has a jumper blouse and skirt made of white and gray chiffon. The blouse is of white chiffon, and Chantal has banded it with narrow strips of gray and of royal blue, these bands being places in two asymmetrical Y-motifs at the neckline and below and straight around the bottom of the jumper.

The skirt has a fitted yoke, with triangular scallops at the bottom, banded in blue, and it is plaited in front below this yoke. The short jacket is made of royal blue crêpe marocain. It has a simple tailored collar. A number of the great Paris dressmakers place such collars on cardigan jackets, and in this way give them a slightly different air. This jacket, which contrasts in color and fabric with the rest of the suit, may be worn with a variety of costumes.

Our second model shows the smart summer tailleur, which has the classic cardigan jacket and plaited skirt that are connected with the sports costume. Jean Patou, however, lifts this suit out of the sports clothes class by making it of heavy and lustrous satin.

The one piece dress is made of white satin, with a straight blouse trimmed with sunburst tucks in front and back. This blouse is sleeveless, and the plaited skirt is joined to it at an almost normal waistline. The belt is a simple, stitched-on band of white satin. The jacket is made of hyacinth blue satin, cut exactly like a knitted sweater, with side pockets and flat band around the closing. Four blue buttons fasten this jacket at the bottom.

The most feminine version of the summer suit is shown in our third sketch, which is a black and white printed crêpe costume from Worth. The jacket has three-quarter length sleeves, bell shaped, and having scalloped plaited ruffles at the bottom. The full bishop sleeves of the lace blouse show beneath.

The surplice closing of this jacket is outlined with a narrow plaited ruffle of self material, and it is attached with a big bow on the left hip. The skirt is almost a complete circle of the printed material, so that it flares in graceful folds around the hem line. A plaited ruffle is placed around the bottom.

Our fourth model shows a summer ensemble of beige georgette combined with lace which shades from beige to brown. The coat has a yoke at the shoulders and is gathered on below, the lower half of the three-quarter length coat being made of shaded lace. The scarf collar is a smart detail. The one piece lace frock has a yoke, belt, and under arm panel of georgette.

The Home Harmonious

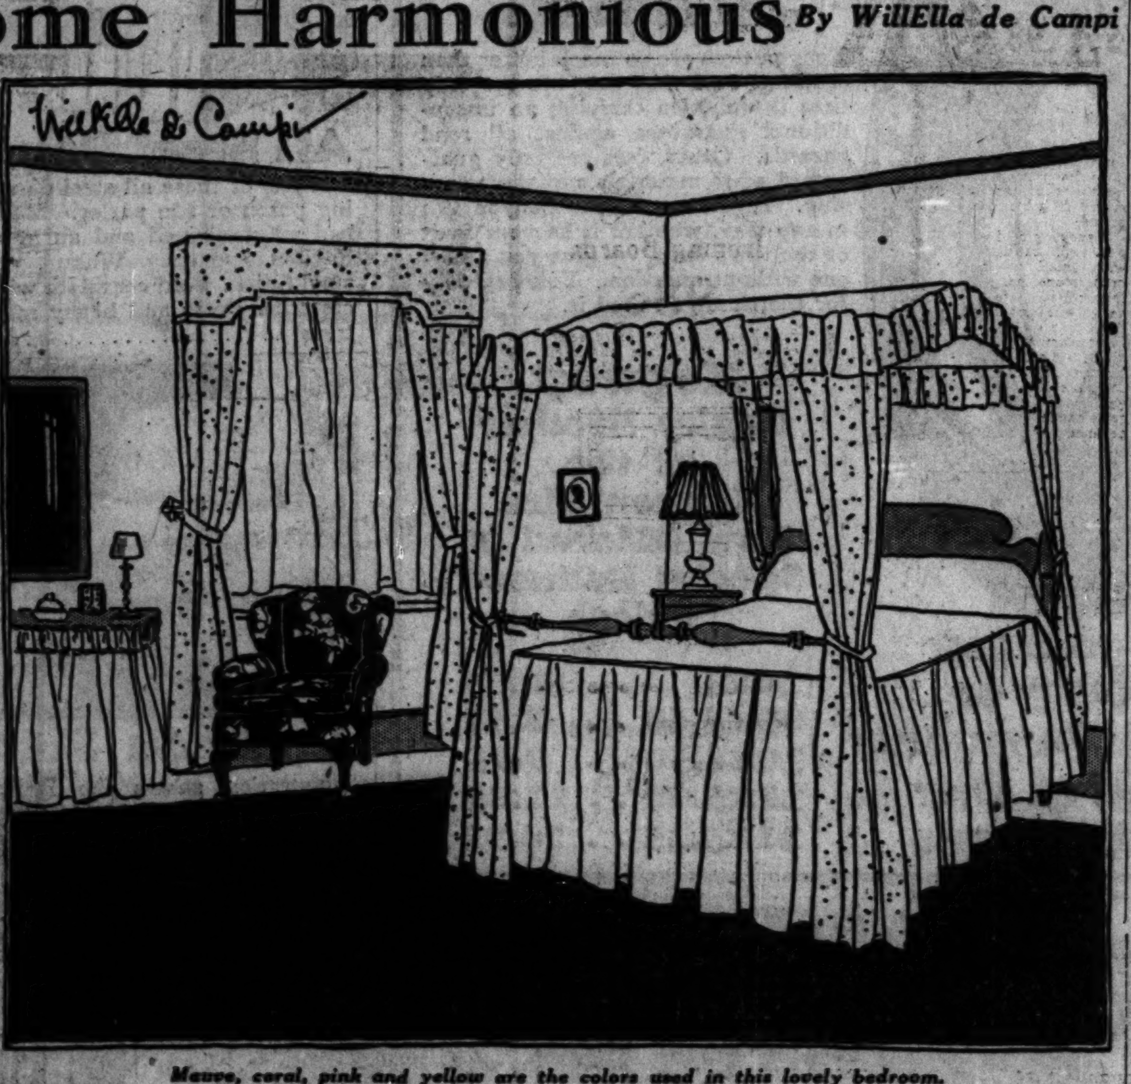
This Model Home Has Many Helpful Suggestions for the Bride, or for One Who Wants to Add New Touches to Her House

WillElla de Campi will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home furnishing. Address your letter to WillElla de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.



Mauve, coral, pink and yellow are the colors used in this lovely bedroom.

DECIDING upon the furnishings for a new home, or selecting some piece to add to one room or another is always a trying problem. It is difficult to stretch the imagination far enough to enable a clear visualization of interiors completely decorated, furnished, and equipped with all of those necessary little touches which make perfect comfort.

In order to help householders of moderate means, many furniture and department stores have created sets of model rooms. These give a pleasingly definite idea of "what the well dressed room will wear." In nearly every case price lists of the furniture, accessories and materials used can be had on application. In this way the careful housewife may figure to a cent what it will cost to make her new home livable or to brighten up her old rooms with a few additional touches.

Exceptionally lovely and filled with worth-while suggestions is a model now being exhibited by an eastern firm. As in so many instances, the rooms are arranged in sequence, to resemble a modern apartment. They are, of course, equally adaptable to small house use.

The first room is an entrance hall. Woodwork and plastered walls are parchment color. At the one window glass curtains of parchment colored silk gauze hang straight to the sill. Over-curtains of amethyst casement silk reach to the floor and are topped by lambrequins to match.

Against the wall space opposite the "front door" is a carved oak settle. A brass tray hanging above the settle is flanked by a pair of brass sidelights. These have shields of natural colored parchment, simply bound with amethyst grosgrain ribbon. Marbleized linoleum in large squares of parchment and black covers the floor.

As there is a wide open doorway leading from the entrance hall into the living room, walls, woodwork, and windows are done in the same parchment color. This makes a satisfactory background for use in almost any room, as it is neither too glaringly bright nor too neutrally cool. The draperies here, too, match those in the hall.

Three windows are grouped at one side of the room. In front of this group is placed a dropleaf table which holds a selection of magazines, a few books between bronze book ends, and a cloisonné lamp. The lamp shade is of pale copper colored plaited silk, bound with black. At one side of the table, drawn out a little from the wall, is a Coxwell chair, and at the other is a Windsor arm chair, with rush bottom seat.

Placed against the wall opposite the windows is a sofa upholstered in wool tapestry with figures in old blue, amethyst, and sand color on a deep brown ground. At each end is a small table. One holds smoking accessories and a pottery lamp with a shade of plain plaited book linen in coral pink. On the other is a bowl of flowers and a few books. A wrought iron reading lamp stands near by.

In the center of the wall space across from the doorway leading in from the hall is a secretary desk. It is accompanied by a chair with a black and taupe denim seat and by a reading lamp with a batiked paper shade. Sharing this lamp is a club chair with a low, convenient table beside it. Taupe carpeting is used. Although there is no fireplace to act as central unit, it is hardly missed in this room, because the furniture has been arranged in such well balanced groups.

Walls and woodwork in the adjoining sun room are painted a lighter parchment. Wicker furniture is enameled a lovely blue-green, the color of the peaceful ocean of a clear summer day. Cushions are of brilliant cretonne in modernistic design. The same cretonne makes draw curtains at the many windows. Black marbleized linoleum is waxed to a soft polish.

The walls in the dining room are divided into panels by means of wood moldings, and all are painted soft sage green. Criss-cross curtains of peach colored theatrical gauze with ruffled edges and with valances and tiebacks to match are most unusual and effective. As the room has only one window, overcurtains are dispensed with. The furniture is walnut. Diaper patterned mohair in a combination of copper color and black upholsters the chair seats. A two toned green rug completes the scheme.

Today's illustration shows part of a most delightful bedroom. The walls and woodwork are painted mauve. Window and bed draperies are of glazed chintz, with tiny, multi-colored flowers on a coral ground. Glass curtains are of pale lemon yellow voile. The deeply flounced bedspread and dressing table valance are of rep in the same pale yellow. Giving a pleasing note of contrast to the color scheme is the wing chair upholstery. It is large flowered glazed chintz on a black ground. Deep plum colored chenille is used on the floor.

Reply to Query.

C. C. C.: As a general rule it is considered best to have roller shades at the windows of sleeping rooms, unless there are somewhat heavy draw curtains which could be used in their stead. You might use casement curtains of rep, in colors to harmonize with the schemes of your different rooms. It is usually advisable to use rugs instead of carpeting. Raisin colored chenille rugs would be nice in the downstair rooms.

Keep Your Skin Young

Remove all blemishes and discolorations by regularly using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store and use as directed. Fine, almost invisible particles of aged skin peel off until all defects, such as pimples, liver spots, tan, freckles and large pores, have disappeared. Skin is beautifully clear, soft and velvety and face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and age lines, use this face lotion: 1 ounce powdered Saxolite and 1 half pint witch hazel.

FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

New Suit Would Help.

"Mrs. H., the mother of a large family, bedridden with cancer for the last two years, has a son, aged 16, who is chunky in build, five feet five inches tall and needs some clothes. He remains at home helping to care for his mother, and they cannot afford to buy him a suit. If any of your readers has one to fit him, it will be greatly appreciated. W. W."

If you have a son about this boy's age, you can probably find some discarded wearing apparel to pass on to him. Things are being pretty hard for him now and although he's not thinking about clothes, a new suit might help a bit.

For an Invalid.

"I have a reading desk to be used in bed which I should like to give to some invalid. Can you place it for me? C. M."

The bedridden patient who likes to read will find this arm rest or reading desk a most comfortable device. If you know of someone who can make use of it, let me know. Please do not telephone me, but write me.

Wants to Play Golf.

"I wonder if one of your readers has a set of golf clubs. I am going to school so I cannot afford to buy them. I am five feet four inches tall. "D. E."

Have you a niblick, or a driver, or a mashie, or even a discarded bag, to donate to this young golf enthusiast? Even one would help to start her collection.

Want to See Jackie Coogan? Here's Your Opportunity

By Sally Joy Brown.

WE all like to see famous people, don't we, girls and boys? That's why I know you're all anxious to win invitations to my next party, because on Aug. 9, a week from Thursday, we're going to see one of the most famous boys in the world—Jackie Coogan, appearing in a wonderful act with his father at the Uptown theater. Won't that be something to remember?

There's no need to tell you about Jackie Coogan, how he became famous over night when he appeared in "The Kid" with Charlie Chaplin, his wonderful successes in "Oliver Twist," "Peck's Bad Boy," and others. You will be glad to know, though, that we'll see parts of his famous pictures, so we can compare Jackie as he is with his appearance in the pictures that made him famous.

And there's a wonderfully interesting story to tell about the act Jackie and his father will present, one that you'll all be interested in hearing. I'll tell that story later, though, because I know you're anxious to get started on your letters to win invitations. That will be easy. Just as usual, all I want to know is which hundred girls and boys will enjoy the party most. So in your letters tell me why you will enjoy especially seeing Jackie Coogan and all the other features the Uptown theater will present. Give your name, your street address and your age, and mail your letters in time to reach me Thursday morning.

When I'll select the hundred, and their names will be in next SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE. So remember that the party is to be at the Uptown theater, corner of Broadway and Lawrence, on Aug. 9, a week from Thursday. Mail your letters quickly, because they must reach me by Thursday morning at the latest.

Just a word, in closing, to my guests for the Rodeo party on Thursday. Your invitations will be mailed tomorrow with all the details about when and where we'll meet, and you should have them by Tuesday. If they don't come please telephone me right away, because we're going to have a wonderful time and I don't want any of you to miss it.

SUGGESTIONS FOR GIRL JOB HUNTER

Doris Gives a Few Words of Advice That May Save a Lot of Time and Woe Later

By Doris Blake

Reg. U S Pat. Off.

THE thousands of girls who were graduated from school in June are, no doubt, looking for jobs by this time or have already been placed in employment somewhere.

It is a serious moment in the affairs of a young woman, and our hope is that she escapes the misery of an uncongenial occupation. Through force of economic pressure or local limitations, it is the misfortune of some to be forced to take a job for which they have neither taste nor leaning.

For those who may take a little time to choose, let me urge you to consider the fact that the work which will bring you the most happiness and success is the work for which you are most fitted by training or natural gift. Don't rush into the most easily procurable job if you have confidence in yourself that you have a talent for another line of work. By the easiest job we mean clerking and stenographic work. There is the greatest demand for young women in these fields, and, given the qualifications necessary to make a good stenographer or a good saleswoman, there are no end of opportunities in these occupations. But in this day and age girls do not need to rush heedlessly into these two popular fields. Look around and study the lists of vocations open to women and be sure before you make your choice that its work inspires your enthusiasm and its opportunities your hope of a good future.

Too Many Misfits.

There are so many misfits in the working world and unhappy young people, as a consequence, who cannot themselves put their finger on the reason for their personal discord, that this matter of finding the first place should be thought out with the greatest intelligence. The whole face of your future life revolves around the decision you young women are called upon to make in the choice of a vocation. Nothing will bring out the best that is in you like finding the right job, and nothing is more destructive of happiness than having to do, day after day, duties that have become distasteful.

In the beginning you may not feel your unfittedness for the job nor the job's unfittedness for you so much. The first money earned is thrilling. But it is when the novelty has worn off and you begin to wonder where you're getting that the folly of the unconsidered placing of yourself begins to bear down on you. It is time lost that you can very well save yourself by seeking expert advice on the subject of vocations for women and your special fitness for a particular one of them.

Field Widens Each Year.

Each year the field of opportunity is extended for women. In this year of our Lord 1928 a girl may start out for herself in a field that no one ever thought of before her and earn nothing from the community in which she is known but braves for her pluck. The former influx of ambitious young girls to the big city is being curtailed somewhat by the discovery that in one's local community there are opportunities for earning money by starting hitherto untried ventures.

There always will be the young woman, and hundreds upon hundreds of her, who want to go to the city. No amount of persuasion will keep her away. Of course, the great numbers of successful young women who have run the gamut of lonely hours, disappointments, and disillusions about big city life and have come out gloriously on top will encourage others to come on and do likewise. If they have sufficient strength of character to see them through the early days of struggle, all well and good.

But there is a pitiful other side to the picture that is not broadcast so widely among local acquaintances. Those girls who go down and out under the struggle, or girls who grasp at any vocational straw to keep bread in their mouths aren't so liable to be heard from.

Good Capital to Acquire.

However, no matter what line of work you choose or have thrust upon you, your contacts with people are going to have the greatest influence on your happiness, after all. Whether you are going to become affiliated with an organization where you will meet many co-workers, or whether you are on your own, there are still these contacts to reckon with. You can't escape people and be a part of the business world, no matter how small.

Occasionally you may hear of a grouch who manages to amass a fortune in spite of his unpopularity, but generally speaking it is the popular one who reaches the goal of success most quickly.

Don't Sit in Judgment.

It will not be expected of you that you make an intimate of every other girl in the office or store. But do not make the mistake girls have been known to make of being harsh in your judgment until such time as you know for an absolute fact that a co-worker is an undesirable person to be shunned for very good reasons. There are few of these in employment long. They're weeded out quickly, once their reputations are known.

Another phase of this sitting in judgment prematurely is met in a girl of superior educational advantages, or superior schooling, we'll say. Her manner is often distinctly "high-hat" and often laughably so, if she only knew it. She may have to unlearn a number of things before she is, in the eyes of presiding officers, as blessed with the all-around business intelligence that a girl of lesser schooling may have.

Bide your time with your superiority. If you've honestly got it, it will be recognized. But you'll never show it by underestimating a worker whose work to her employers is sufficiently satisfactory to keep on insuring her her job.

Respect the Rights of Others.

The overconfidence of youth is more often provocative of this type than any meanness of disposition. But it is just as well to give the other person her due, leaving the matter of her incapacity to the hiring and firing committee to attend.

In business contact the easiest way to get on with people is to respect the rights, opinions, feelings, customs, beliefs, and liberties of others.

Be big about people. It's the easiest way in the world to have other people be big about you, which in turn means that your shortcomings will be lost in appreciation of the finer, better things about you.

$5 APIECE FOR BRIGHT SAYINGS

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributons. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune.

Six year old Jane's golden hair, with a natural marcel, is much admired. She also has a 4 year old brother, Billie, of whom she is inordinately proud. Billie is very shy, usually standing quite close to sister, with a tight hold of her hand.

A caller was making quite a fuss over Jane's hair, apparently ignoring Billie. Sister stood this as long as she could, then, pulling the small brother forward, said, "Mrs. Denton, here's Billie."

Rita's aunty planned to give her niece a birthday party, but as the day came on Thursday she said she would wait until Saturday so all Rita's little friends in the first grade could come.

When grandma came over with the usual birthday gift she said, "Let me see, honey, how old are you today?"

"'Course I'm 'sposed to be 6, but my party isn't till Saturday," she said.

My Bleach for Tan and Freckles

"I continue my photographic posing all through the summer," says Miss Emily Boyle, noted New York camera model, "and being inclined to tan and freckle, I have to have a bleach that will keep my skin white and flawless and at the same time is harmless.

"For my bleach I use no ready-made preparation, but simply get three ounces of Orchard White at the drug store and mix it with the juice of two lemons. This makes a quarter pint of a perfectly marvelous bleach for a few cents. Rubbed into the face, neck and arms, it bleaches away tan and freckles and makes any dark, sallow or discolored skin beautifully clear and white. This is the bleach all the studio models learn about soon after they begin posing. No ready-to-use preparation can equal it, because, for one reason, you use it while it is still fresh."

by ELIZABETH JORDAN

The Life of Mary Martin Was Painted in Soft Colors and Shadows; Devotion Was Its Keynote; the Spotlight of Appreciation Never Illumined the Canvas.

MRS. JOHN HENRY MARTIN, large, fresh faced, admirably dressed, radiating energy and efficiency, and carrying her forty odd years as if they were a banner, breezed into her husband's office and settled into the chair facing his desk with a swish of silken draperies. John Henry regarded her with the look of tolerance which was his most human expression. It was one of his unwritten laws that he was not to be visited in his office by members of his family, but, like other unwritten laws, this one was sometimes broken. Unless he was very busy John Henry did not object to these occasional violations. Under his reserved, almost forbidding exterior lay unsuspected depths of devotion to his wife and children. They and his business were all he had, as he would have put it if he had been in the habit of putting anything into words. He was not in the habit of doing so, nor had he a habit of demonstrativeness, or a habit of making friends.

His business associates respected him and felt for him a certain grudging admiration. Martin had a way of putting things over, and, though it was sometimes a coldblooded and ruthless way, it certainly "got results." His employés also respected him, and everybody felt a slight awe of him. John Henry Martin, sitting in his office as solidly as a bronze Buddha and looking not unlike one with his dark coloring, heavy features, and impassive expression, knew exactly what was thought of him and accepted the knowledge with almost oriental phlegm. But the reason why he was willing to have his wife and son and daughter occasionally drop in on him was that these normal, exuberant human beings proved to his little world that after all he, too, was human. They were his—happy, prosperous, obviously the family of a successful man and "a good provider." That his son and daughter, like his business associates, were rather in awe of him annoyed him a little, though he never betrayed the emotion. His wife, he knew, was not at all in awe of him, and John Henry admired her so profoundly that he was sometimes almost in awe of her. She was a woman in a million—in ten millions. This morning she would prove it anew by going straight to the object of her visit.

She justified his faith in her opening words, but, to his surprise, there was a hesitating quality in her first drive from the conversational tee.

"I'm sorry to disturb you, dear," she began. "But you know how impossible it seems to get in a quiet chat at home, and I want to talk to you about Mary."

Her husband opened his lips and closed them again. He knew that the increasing difficulty of getting in a quiet chat at home was due to the fact that the efficient and executive Mrs. John Henry Martin attended board meetings and trustee meetings several evenings a week and either entertained friends or was entertained by friends on most of the remaining evenings. He had followed his wife's increasing activities with the nearest approach to disapproval her conduct ever caused him; and this, possibly, was a good time to mention that it might be worth while to spend an occasional evening at home. But in the same breath she had spoken of Mary and John Henry Martin's attention was caught and held. Aside from his wife and children, Mary Martin was his only kin—his spinster sister. He didn't see much of her. He was usually away from home when she came to the house. But he knew in a general way that she came often; and, also in a general way, he was glad she got on so well with his family.

"Mary dropped in to see me yesterday afternoon," Mrs. Martin was now saying. "I was frightfully busy and couldn't give her much attention; but I could see that she had something on her mind, and at last she got it off. It seems that the boarding house where she has lived so long is closing this month. The woman who ran it is going out of business. Of course that rather upsets Mary. She's so vague and unbusinesslike that she has no idea of how to go about the job of finding another place, and she's so shy that she hasn't made friends who might advise her or take her in. It was clear that she was all at sea about what to do."

John Henry made his first contribution to the "quiet chat."

"Well," he said slowly, "I guess you could give her some points, couldn't you?"

His wife shook her handsome head, in which the dark hair was slightly graying at the temples.

"No, I couldn't," she surprisingly admitted. "If she had been a working girl looking for a cheap lodging house, or one of our bright young professional women with a good income, I could have told her just where to go. But a middle aged spinster with an annuity of only seven hundred a year is a difficult proposition."

"She doesn't fit in with either class. I must admit that I'm glad she'll be out of the boarding house," Mrs. Martin interpolated. "I disliked her living that way, and—well, the truth is—the children did, too. That's why we haven't seen much of her except when she came to the house. I realized that she ought to have a different environment, yet with her small income I didn't see how she could get it."

"Marion, if what you're aiming at is that Mary needs more money," said Mary Martin's brother, "I'll give it to her. How much does she want?"

"Don't be silly, John. You know perfectly well she wouldn't take it." A sudden reflection struck the speaker and she stopped. "But I suppose you don't know," she went on, more slowly. "You've seen much less of Mary these last years than any of us. Come to think of it, I don't suppose you've had a real talk with her half a dozen times since we were married. Yet how she adores you! I never saw anything like it. She spends all the time we're together telling me about your childhood; and she's got the most amazing collection of souvenirs of you—little mittens and shoes and toys——"

Observing a gathering look of impatience on her husband's face, she broke off.

"However, what I started out to say," she went on briskly, "is that, though she seems so quiet and shy, Mary is extremely proud. She wouldn't take a penny from you. I know her well enough to know that. She told me once that her greatest comfort in life was the little income her old Aunt Jane left her. It's only an annuity, you know, and of course she has to practice the greatest economy——"

John Henry's look of impatience deepened into a frown. Marion, usually so direct, was positively beating about the bush. She had something to suggest that she was afraid he wouldn't like. Well, let her get at it. Time was pressing and he wanted the thing over, whatever it was. He leaned toward his wife and brought down a big flat hand upon the desk, not heavily, but sharply enough to bring her to the point.

"Marion," he demanded, "what did you come here to say?"

Even then the woman actually tried to sidestep the question.

"Mary has been helping us a lot the last few years," she resumed. "I don't suppose you realize that, though I've often mentioned it to you. Since the children have been going out so much and we've given so many parties Mary has been the greatest comfort to me. You wouldn't think it, because she dresses so plainly herself, but she has an extraordinary love of pretty clothes and a marvelous knack at making them. She makes most of Carrie's house dresses and my overblouses, and even trims some of our hats. And the way she decorates the table is wonderful. She has a gift for arranging flowers. So every time we have given any sort of entertainment Mary has come to help us to get ready for it. She has loved doing it. The truth is, she seems to be working for us all the time in one way or another, so I thought—I thought——"

JOHN HENRY knew now what his wife had come for. She had come to ask him to give his homeless sister a home—and she knew him so little, after all these years of marriage, that she who never seemed in awe of him was actually afraid to put the request into words. The moment was one of the bitterest in the man's life.

Instinctively he dropped his eyes that she might not see the expression in them.

"Does she want to come?" he asked abruptly, bridging with the question all his wife had not said.

Marion's high colored face took on a deeper hue.

"I didn't ask her," she said reproachfully. "Naturally, I wouldn't before consulting you. Besides, the idea didn't come to me till after she had gone. As I've said, I was busy at the time, and I couldn't put my mind on her problem. But she's coming back today to bring a new blazer she had finished for Jack and I thought if you approved"—she hesitated again as if even yet she could not take her little hurdle.

"She'll probably stay to lunch," she resumed as he did not speak. "She usually does when there's a lot to do and since I have so many outside duties. So if she's there when I get home suppose I suggest her coming to us for a while anyway. That won't commit us to a permanent arrangement till we see how she fits in—though I'm sure it will be a success, for Mary is the gentlest, most unselfish creature I know. I've really become very fond of her."

ON a sudden impulse John Henry leaned over and patted the back of his wife's gloved hand. In that instant he forgave and forgot the pang of the moment before. The caress was so unusual and so unexpected that Marion's fine eyebrows unconsciously rose. But she understood and her face brightened. John Henry approved her plan.

"I thought I'd put her in the little blue room on the third floor," she went on in a more assured tone. "Of course we can't spare either of the guest rooms on the second floor, for Jack and Carrie are always bringing home their friends. But she likes the blue room. She's had it several times when she stayed so late to help us that I was actually afraid to let her go back to the boarding house alone. And, John"—again it was clear to John Henry Martin that his wife felt herself on uncertain ground, but now she went on gallantly—"there's another point. Mary admitted to me long ago that it was costing her about all she had to pay for her room and board. The rates went up so much, you know, during the war. I know she hasn't had any new clothes for several years. Of course she'll want to pay us board, but—we don't need the money. It occurred to me that it would be awfully nice to give her a home and let her use her income hereafter for the pretty things she loves. She has a perfect passion for beauty, but she never seems to have anything pretty herself, though she has given the children such lovely presents."

"How about your presents?" Martin abruptly demanded. "Haven't you and the children given Mary anything at Christmas and on birthdays?"

His wife looked amused and repentant.

"That's another story," she admitted. "Of course we've given her things, but you know how it is at Christmas. One has so many demands. So they've just been trifles. And on her birthdays I've usually given her something practical—something I could see she really needed. Last year it was a sweater. She has made two for each of the children and one for me, but none for herself. That's just like her. She's always making something for us. I don't see quite how she has managed it. It must have meant sacrifices——" She was speaking reflectively, as if for the first time thinking the thing out.

Again John Henry dropped his glance to his desk that his wife might not see his expression, but, as always, he was inarticulate.

"Better have her come," was all he said.

"You see, she'll really work it out," Mrs. Martin went on thoughtfully, smoothing her velvet hand bag with an absent touch. "Looking at it in one way, we are hundreds of dollars in Mary's debt. I'd have had to pay a decorator and seamstress a small fortune for what she has done for nothing. And of course she'll keep right on doing it," she added comfortably. "She'll want to. She'll want to pay her board, too, for she's always talking about how she enjoys her 'labors of love.' But I think I can talk her out of the board paying."

"All right."

John Henry straightened in his chair as an intimation that the interview was over, and his wife obediently picked up the hand bag and rose.

"I'll ask her to stay to dinner tonight," she suggested. "We're not having any guests, for once. Then you can talk it over with her."

Her husband shook his big head. Something like an inner panic seized him.

"Good Lord," he exploded, "I don't want to talk it over! Fix it up between yourselves," he added more mildly. "You've got the right ideas. But keep her to dinner," he ended, as his departing spouse crossed the threshold.

John Henry was late for dinner that night and, following another unwritten law, his family did not wait for him. He was often detained downtown, and he had crisply intimated that he didn't care to picture a circle of increasingly hungry and impatient home faces awaiting his return. Now, entering the dining room while the soup was being served, his keen eyes sought and found his sister in the little ring around the table. He gave her a special nod and included her in the inarticulate mumble with which he acknowledged the family greetings. She was seated at his left, between him and his son, and from her plain little face shone a soft radiance. As he ate his soup John Henry glanced at her out of the corner of his eyes.

He had never considered Mary pretty. No one did. And now she was almost 50, and her hair was an unbecoming mixture of brown and white. She was very thin and rather pale, and she had taken on the indefinable look characteristic of a certain type of "settled" spinster. But she had what is called a "nice" face. Privately John Henry rather admired it, and every one, of course, admired Mary's eyes without qualification. They were unusual eyes—large, clear, deep, like brown pools—and they had a trick of shining when Mary was happy, like the eyes of an ecstatic child. They were shining tonight, and their glow lent that surprising softness and sweetness to Mary's face. John Henry remembered that look. He had seen it often when Mary was a little child. He had not seen it often since then.

For just one instant, when he came in and their eyes had met, he had been swept back forty years, to the memory of a little figure in a sunbonnet and a gingham frock, blissfully trudging by his side on some childish excursion. Then his daughter Carrie continued the description of an experience she had had that day—Carrie was always relating her experiences—and the family had listened.

The Martin table was a cheerful one. The children's awe of their father may have sometimes checked their individual approaches to him, but it never checked their conversation or dampened their youthful enthusiasm. They had learned not to expect him to talk. They poured forth their unconscious self-revelations, and their silent father, missing no word and hardly a glance of theirs, learned more about his son and daughter at these family meals than they dreamed he knew. Tonight, as usual, he said nothing, and Aunt Mary, also as usual during her rare meals with them, remained silent, too. But unconsciously each of the other four at the table responded to some subtle influence of the new, shining-eyed, silent figure. It was almost, Marion Martin whimsically reflected, as if another light had been lit in the room. She smiled over her own imaginative processes. Mary was happy. That was all.

Later, when the son and daughter had departed together to see a new picture play, John Henry settled beside the reading table with his evening newspaper, while his wife and sister consulted over the new blazer. It was a beautifully made garment and Jack had liked it very much—so much, indeed, that he had asked for another of the same pattern, but in different colors, for a sport suit purchased that day. Aunt Mary joyfully promised to begin the new garment the next morning.

SHE went home at 9 o'clock, that she might be up early and start out for the materials right after breakfast. Again, as she was leaving, her brother met for a moment that shy but shining glance. It gave him an odd sensation—almost made him feel as if he were a small boy again, going manfully about his various affairs with his adoring little sister invariably at his heels. Mary had never been more than a leash length away from him in those childish days. Sometimes, as when he visited the swimming hole, she had been a bit of a nuisance, but on the whole he had liked having her around, probably because he was so used to it. Occasionally, of course, he had run away from her. That had been the one thing Mary could not endure. It had always sent her into a sort of panic.

He remembered vividly the cries she sent after him at such times, and, just as vividly, the smile with which she forgave him when he came back. Odd how they two had drifted apart in later years. The break had begun, of course, when he went to college—there hadn't been enough money to send Mary to college—and after his graduation he had gone to another city to begin his life work.

From that time he hadn't seen much of Mary. She was teaching school in her native town, and boarding with one of their old neighbors. She had come to his wedding—he remembered that; and after Aunt Jane's little legacy fell to her she had suddenly given up her teaching and come to John Henry's city to live. At the time he had thought her rather foolish. She couldn't teach in the big city. She wasn't up to the job. Indeed, she wasn't up to any job, and evidently she realized this, for she did not try to get one.

She lived on her little income and did things for John Henry's family. He realized now that this must have been her life for the last ten years. He had wondered, at first, on the rare occasions when he thought of her, whether she was not missing the friends of her home town. Later he had learned from Marion that Mary had not had many friends. Her old associates had died or had gone to other cities, or had married and become absorbed in their own affairs. Mary's move had seemed justified as years passed. Certainly, on the few occasions when he saw her, she had never seemed lonesome.

Sitting now with unseeing eyes on the open page of his newspaper, John Henry wondered why he was thinking so much about Mary tonight. Probably because of the revelations in that talk with his wife, and because of Mary's shining eyes and the soft little breathless rush with which her parting words had come out when she was leaving.

"It's so very, very kind of you and Marion to let me come to you for a while, John Henry. I can't tell you how happy it makes me and how grateful——"

Then John Henry had nodded again and raised his hand in the old, abrupt gesture that checked speech, and Mary had checked her speech and hurried away. Odd how like the little Mary she had seemed—the little Mary of more than forty years ago. Mary was two years younger than he was. That meant she was 47 now. It suddenly occurred to him that, after all, Mary must have been lonely in the boarding house. In certain ways she was like himself—slow to make friends, slow to express herself to those around her. He wished he had said something in response to her shy words—something brotherly and hospitable. But the habit of years had been too strong for him. However, he knew that Mary understood. Mary, he remembered, always had understood in those early days, and there was no reason to believe that she had changed.

He yawned and glanced at his watch. Incredibly, he had been thinking of Mary for half an hour! He detached his thoughts from her with something of the effect of a mental jerk and returned to his newspaper.

After that his interest in Mary dropped like a pebble going to the bottom of a clear well. It was there, in view, if he took the trouble to look for it, but he didn't. His thoughts touched his sister only when she crossed his line of vision or when, at intervals, after Mary was settled in the blue room, his wife gave him a few bulletins concerning the newcomer's place in the household. On one of these occasions, just after Mary's arrival, Mrs. John Henry brought out her bulletin with a perturbed air.

"Mary simply insists on paying board," she announced in the solitude of the conjugal chamber. "I wish she wouldn't, for since she has come I realize more than ever how close to the wind she has been sailing financially. Her clothes are actually shabby. She hasn't a thing to wear."

JOHN HENRY did not attach much importance to this announcement. He would have preferred to give his sister a home, but he admired the self-respect which made her insist on paying for it. As to the matter of her wardrobe, he took the easy masculine view of that. No woman ever admitted that she had any clothes. Carrie and Marion were always murmuring that they "hadn't a thing to wear," yet their closets were bulging with garments. No doubt Mary had all she needed.

Within three months he learned that Mary had changed her decision to pay her board. Mrs. Martin announced this with a satisfaction her husband shared.

"She seemed rather upset about it, though," Marion added thoughtfully. "I could see that she didn't want to do it. It was as if she were in a tight place and simply didn't have the money. Her poor little face blazed as she spoke of the matter. But I'm glad it's all settled. Now she can have her income to buy comforts and pretty clothes. The poor creature is almost in rags."

John Henry had winced a bit under those closing words. They lingered in his mind, and that night at the dinner table he looked at his sister more closely than usual. He saw nothing wrong with her appearance. She was very plainly dressed, but she had always dressed plainly. Evidently she liked to dress plainly. She was thin, too, and rather pale, but these conditions were also familiar. The one thing John Henry saw clearly was that her brown eyes were still shining. This was so reassuring that he forgot her again.

Marion, however, proceeded to take a friendly interest in her sister-in-law's wardrobe.

"Mary," she began one morning, with brisk kindliness, "you need some new clothes. Suppose we go on a shopping expedition and get some for you."

The effect on Mary Martin was surprising. She shrank back as if from a physical assault.

"O, no," she said hurriedly. "Thank you, very much, but I don't need anything—really I don't."

"Nonsense!" Marion's tone was good-humored but firm. "Of course you need things—you need lots of things." She ended with an argument she felt would prevail. "If you don't care for them yourself, get them for our sake. You see, your position now is different from what it was. You're here among us, meeting our friends. Naturally, we want you to look your best."

The next moment she bit her firm lower lip, wishing she could recall the words. She had hurt Mary horribly—had hurt her and humiliated her. That fact was tragically clear. The shining eyes clouded. The blood rushed to the thin face. Mrs. Martin cried out in compunction.

"My dear, I'm so sorry! You know I didn't mean anything unkind! It was just affectionate interest——"

"I know—I know," Mary Martin was not inarticulate when some one else needed words of comfort. "I know just how kindly you meant it. You're always considerate. But the—the truth is I—I'm rather short just at present. I—I simply can't buy anything."

"Then forget all about it," Marion said with a friendly tap on the thin shoulder. "You always look nice. Some day when you get around to it we'll get the new wardrobe and make a picture of you!"

The subject never again came up between them, but the radiance of Mary's shining eyes was dimmed a little from that hour. She grew self-conscious, slipped away when callers came, had "headaches" which kept her from the table when friends dined with the family. Marion saw and understood.

"I wish I had kept my mouth shut," she told herself reproachfully. "But what, in heaven's name, is she doing with her income?"

She would have had the answer to the question if she had overheard almost any of the conversations between her children and her sister-in-law.

THERE had developed an increasing intimacy between Jack and Carrie and their Aunt Mary. In the beginning the young things were lured into the sewing room, where Mary spent most of her time, by the discovery that she was always ready to sew on buttons, or tack ripped linings, or come to their rescue in small domestic crises. Then, one morning, young Jack, standing at the window with hands thrust deep in his trousers pockets and gloomy eyes gazing unseeingly out upon the world, swung around to face Mary Martin under the impulse of a sudden inspiration.

"Say, Aunt Mary," he blurted out, "I don't s'pose you have $10 you can spare for a few days, have you?"

"Why, Jackie, of course I have!"

Young Jack loathed being called "Jackie," but he graciously permitted the name to pass this time. Aunt Mary was all in a flutter over his unusual request, over this unique opportunity of doing something for her nephew. She fluttered up to the little blue room, fluttered back to the sewing room, and joyfully pressed the bill into the boy's willing hand, inwardly thanking her gods that she happened to have the money in her purse. He took it avidly and then, on an impulse of genuine gratitude—for the loan was helping him out of a difficulty—put his arm around her thin shoulders and gave her a bearlike hug.

"You're an old peach, Aunt Mary," he emphatically assured her. "You're the real thing. You've helped me out of an awful hole."

He swung out of the room, turned on the threshold for a final affectionate grin at her, and added an afterthought.

"I'll pay this back next Saturday," he promised, "when dad gives me my allowance."

Mary nodded speechlessly. Her thin shoulders still ached under the force of the first spontaneous caress the lad had given her since he was five and her heart swelled till she could hardly breathe. The boy actually liked her—was grateful to her—John Henry's son! She was so grateful to him that in that hour she would have died for him.

The affluence revealed by young John Henry in the next few days attracted the attention of his sister Carrie—a young person who combined powers of keen observation with a suspicious nature.

"Where did you get so much money all of a sudden?" she demanded. "You were trying to borrow a dollar from me last Tuesday."

Young Jack tried to sidestep the investigation, but his sister got the truth out of him. She was a sleepless sleuth on the trail of any information she desired, and on the whole it was less trouble to confide in her than to try to avoid her interrogative pounces. The revelation, when she obtained it, made Carrie look thoughtful. She, too, was frequently short of money, for John Henry Sr. never paid allowances in advance, and one of the domestic rules which his wife was required to follow implicitly was that she must not lend her children money.

Aunt Mary knew nothing of all this. She knew, very soon, that her nephew and niece were always short of money and that they were ruthless young cormorants once they had discovered a new source of supply. The ten dollar loan to Jack was followed in a day or two by a five dollar loan to Carrie, neither of which was returned, and by innumerable loans from that time on. To do them justice, the young folks intended to return the money promptly, but both were heavily in debt to friends of their own age, both had expensive tastes, and both were members of affluent sets! It seemed clear to them that Aunt Mary had plenty of money.

And she was so willing to wait! Indeed, it gave her pleasure to wait, just as it obviously gave her pleasure to lend, and to be hugged and patted on the back by Jack and kissed and petted by Carrie. What did not give her so much pleasure was the interview with her sister-in-law in which, after several months of "lending" to her niece and nephew, she had been forced to accept Marion's suggestion of a home board free.

For Aunt Mary was no fool. She read the handwriting on the wall. She saw herself committed to a definite amount of lending and an indefinite amount of repaying. She had grave doubts of the wisdom of her present course. But it was such delight to have the "children" come to her as freely as if they were her own, and they were such nice children! They were constantly running into the sewing room to tell her things, to "jolly" her, even to ask her advice.

This last experience was the most thrilling of all. No one had ever asked Mary Martin's advice before. The children did not often take the advice she gave them, and in her heart she knew they wouldn't when she gave it, but such friendship and intimacy with young things was worth everything. At last she had not only a real home, but a family of her own—a family whose members accepted her

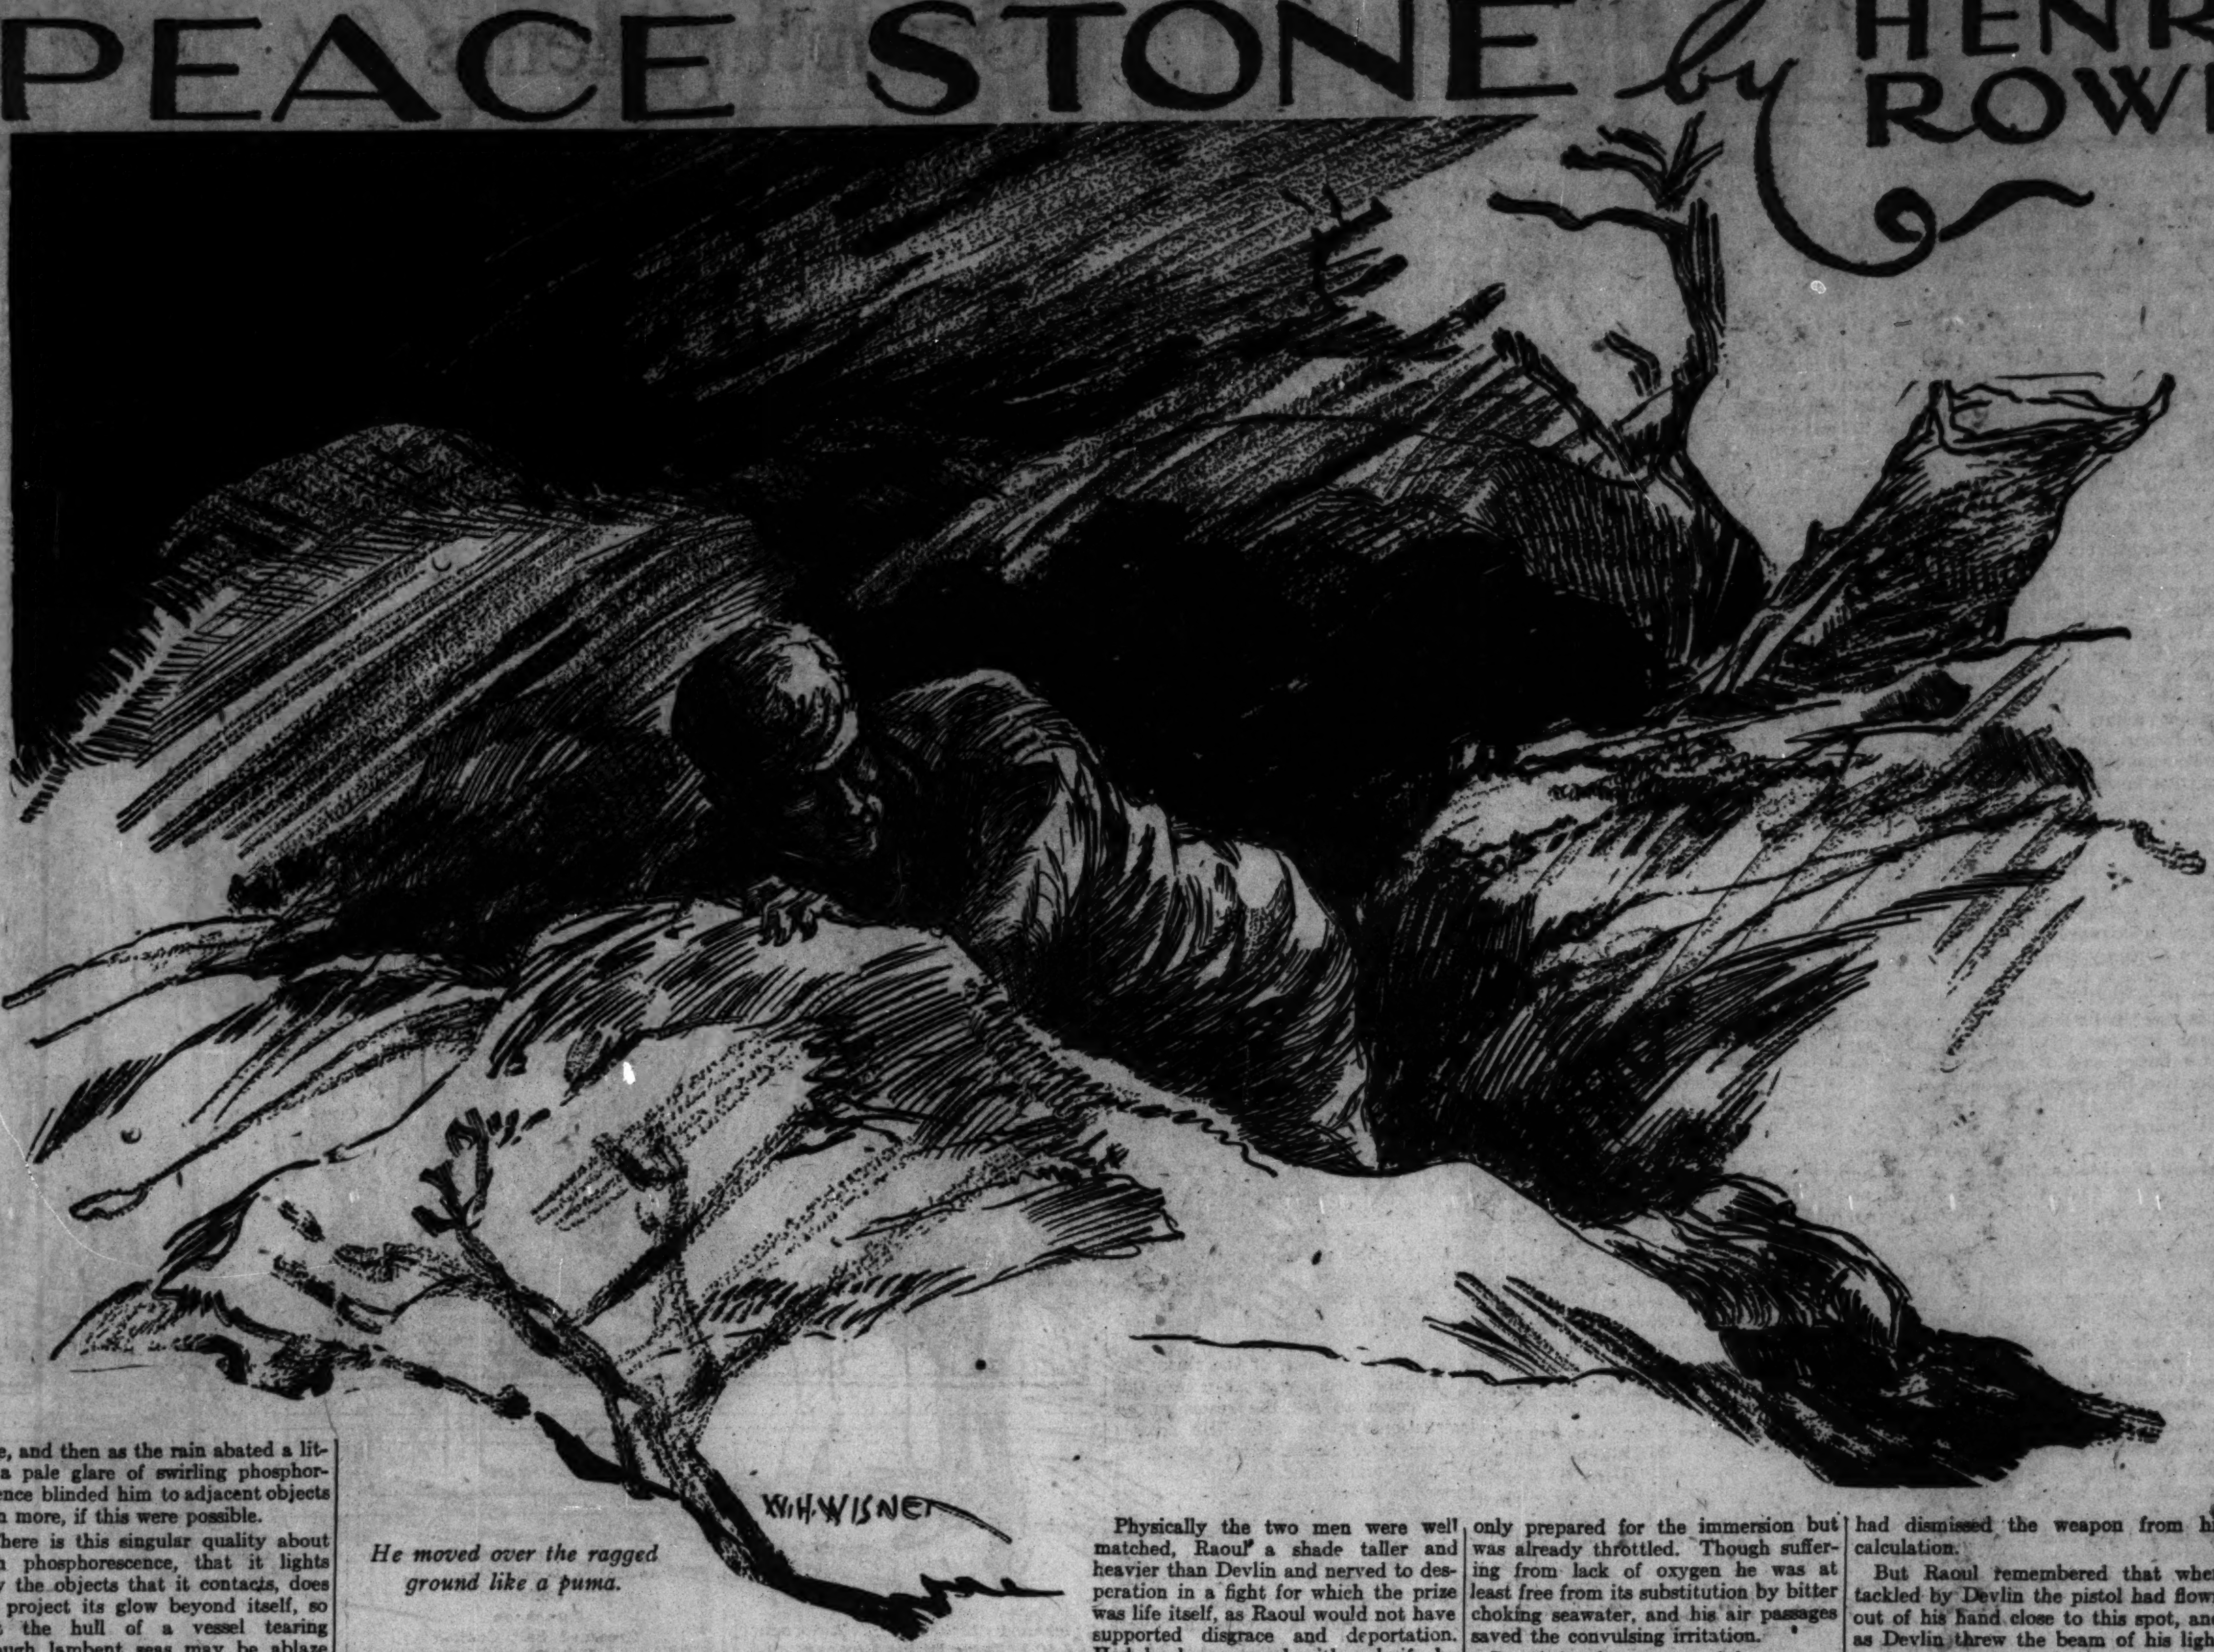
The PEACE STONE by HENRY C. ROWLAND



He moved over the ragged ground like a puma.

THE STORY HITHERTO:

THE PEACE STONE is a priceless rose diamond, a traditional sacred talisman that has been in the custody of the French family of De Marsac for two centuries. Originally it was confided to a De Marsac on pilgrimage to Palestine by a dying holy man of a mystic order for delivery to Estaban Mordecay, Cadiz banker; but Mordecay had vanished, and the De Marsacs through the years sought a rightful heir to the jewel. The Comte de Marsac, present custodian of the stone, has a son, Vicomte Armand, French naval lieutenant, and two daughters, Jacqueline and Annik. Jacqueline is in love with Raoul de Rimbec, a distant cousin. Raoul calls on Easter Mordecay in Washington, posing as Armand. He announces that Easter has been proved heir to the jewel and that the comte wishes to present it to her. Easter voyages to France with her guardian, Wayne Carter, and Mrs. Carter. They are accompanied by Carter's son, Devlin, a nomadic savant. Easter accepts the diamond. Raoul abducts her and holds her and the Peace Stone aboard a fishing vessel for ransom. Devlin Carter charters a boat and, in company with Jacqueline, goes in search of Raoul and Easter. During a storm both vessels take shelter in an island haven. Raoul and Easter go ashore. Devlin, following, is fired upon by Raoul in the darkness. He hears a woman calling.

INSTALLMENT IX.

The Stranglehold.

THAT, Devlin decided, would be Easter at no very great distance and distressed at being alone in such a dark stormswept abomination of desolation. He conjectured rightly that Raoul must have stowed her in some sheltered spot along the shore and started back to reconnoiter the yacht when glimpsing Devlin through the mist. It was in a sense reassuring to hear this voice that could only be Easter's. Raoul of course would hear it, too, and Devlin tried to decide what he would do about it.

Then to Devlin's astonishment there came suddenly an answer to this feminine appeal in the sound of one similar.

This rose more distinctly from down on the shore, abreast of Devlin's position. It could only be from one of two throats, Jacqueline's or that of the mousse. Its pitch was too high for a man's hail.

Again came the faint ululation, this word exact. It was answered immediately as before, though it seemed to Devlin that its position had advanced a little.

Jacqueline, he decided, had managed in some way to get ashore. Devlin did not believe that Jules had disobeyed his orders. A Breton boatman does not take any such chances with the earning of a five hundred franc note, especially when already rewarded by such a gratuity. Whatever her moral fiber, Devlin reflected Jacqueline's mental and physical structure was strong and supple. She had very likely managed to slip over the side and swim for the beach or hauled herself ashore along the bowlines.

Again came the feminine hail and its response, like two sea birds, separated in the wind and rain and dark, maneuvering to join. There was at this moment a sort of lull. It would not be of long duration before the next blast, but while it lasted the audibility of sounds was good.

Devlin heard another and different sound. It was not loud nor as near as the bulwark behind which Raoul had sought cover, and if Devlin's ears had not been keen and trained he would not have noticed it at all. Even then it might have escaped him but for the fact that his head was close to the ground.

This significant noise was the clatter of one flat stone against another, like an earthen dish on a tiled floor. Devlin guessed its significance. Raoul had broken cover and was slipping back to get in contact with Easter. Naturally he would not wish to flash his torch, and his feet groping in the dark had pressed on the edge of a flat stone and tilted it to cause a clatter.

The three of them, therefore, must be converging, soon to meet. Devlin remembered that the satchel containing the ransom money was in a cabin locker. If now Jacqueline had been forehanded enough to secure and slip the strap over her shoulder on jumping the ship, then it looked as if the grim affair might arrange itself without further action on Devlin's part.

He laughed. He was pledged to Jacqueline to carry out the business in this way, and although his relations had been altered by Raoul's murderous attempt, yet it would not be easy for a man of his word like Devlin to repudiate his agreement, to pay over the ransom money on Raoul's restoration of Easter and the Peace Stone.

Devlin rose and, feeling his way with infinite care like a man without a light in the depths of the Mammoth cave, set off in the direction of Easter's cry. His sea sense now combined with his experience as a hunter, collector of curious birds and beasts—for he had combined always a pursuit of natural sciences with his jungle archaeology—stood him in good stead. He moved over the ragged ground like the puma or jaguar that in some respects he resembled physically, in powerful anatomy.

Also he made singularly rapid progress. He had shoved the pistol back into its holster under his left arm, pocketed the torch and now moved along, partly in the plantigrade, sometimes in quadruped fashion, arms thrust forward and strong hands gripping projecting ledges.

Another squall roared down. The very force of the blast made Devlin's balance even more precarious. It was a little like getting forward on his small stanch schooner in a gale of wind at night to lash down something that had fetched adrift. He could tell presently from the wash of water beneath that he was near the low cliff's edge, and then as the rain abated a little a pale glare of swirling phosphorescence blinded him to adjacent objects even more, if this were possible.

There is this singular quality about such phosphorescence, that it lights only the objects that it contacts, does not project its glow beyond itself, so that the hull of a vessel tearing through lambent seas may be ablaze where it disturbs them and its upper structure lightless, invisibly opaque.

Devlin worked his way along the brink of what seemed to be a deep fissure in the low cliffs. It sheltered a little sandy beach that glowed with pale blue fire, then dimmed again as the waves washed it. The place was full of noise until Devlin got up to the head of it, where the splashing was subdued and the wind noises a remote diapason, sheltered as this nook was and tucked in at its foot under the ledge. Right here the flanking ground rose a little to make a perfect lee. The sudden hush was like that of entering a cellar, and it was about as dark.

THEN, in curious contrast to this hushed gloom, a girl's laugh rippled out directly under the jutting ledge along the brim of which Devlin was creeping cautiously on hands and knees. There was an eerie note of mockery, as if some siren had just discovered the body of a sailor she had lured to destruction washed up on the beach.

"A pretty rendezvous," Jacqueline's voice cried. "And where is my confrère?"

Raoul's voice said in a clipped tone, "He is up there amongst the rocks. He shot at me."

"Did you shoot back, Armand?" Easter asked. "I heard two reports."

"I shot back, but not to kill. Merely to discourage him and keep him under cover."

"Well," Jacqueline's voice said, "here is the money you demanded and here is Easter. Where's the Peace Stone?"

"I'm—wearing it," Easter said.

"Good." Jacqueline gave a nervous laugh, then, evidently to Raoul. "What are you going to do next, mon ami?"

"Clear out, as soon as the storm breaks. Take you with me if you still feel the same about it."

Easter asked in a puzzled voice, "What do you mean, clear out, Armand?"

Again Jacqueline laughed. Devlin perceived that Easter was still in ignorance of Raoul's true identity. Jacqueline, calm in any situation, answered promptly.

"We can't go home after this. Papa will repudiate us. He was furious at our thinking we were entitled to some share in the Peace Stone. He said we were a disgrace to our name. Untrue to our sacred trust. Let me tell you it has been none too pleasant for me at the chateau all this time, and now it would be insupportable."

"What a pity," Easter said.

"Is it not? But that is how we are placed. I have wanted to go away for a long time, but had no money to go with."

Easter said quickly: "We have felt all along that you and Armand were entitled to a share in the value of the Peace Stone. There was absolutely no need for Armand to kidnap me. I've been telling him so all the time."

"There are complications," Raoul said. "You do not understand."

"Well, that's your affair," Easter said. "Can't you get your rowboat, Armand? Jacqueline's all wet. We'll break our necks trying to clamber over the rocks."

"Very well," Raoul said. "If Carter finds his way here better say nothing about seeing me."

"Why not?" Easter asked.

"He'd be furious that Jacqueline brought the ransom."

Devlin, crouched overhead like a puma on a ledge watching a timber wolf beneath, drew up his knees a little. The cavern directly under him, in which the three were sheltered, was no more than a smooth ledge jutting at an angle to the beach and high enough at its brim to clear their heads by a foot or two, and it was on this brim that Devlin was poised, so close that had it been still they could almost have heard his breathing.

He could not have seen them had it been light, as they were under the edge, and it is doubtful if he could have seen them now, even had they stepped out from under. The night was like a black wall flecked with white paint in its contrast of absolute darkness and the churning phosphorescence along the shore, and beyond wherever a rock projected, and still farther from the brushing of the wave crests. Between these bands and splashes of luminosity one could see nothing at all.

Devlin might not have interfered at this juncture if the ransom had not been mentioned. He was willing to waive Raoul's murderous attempt to kill him; willing to forgive the kidnaping of Easter, or at least not to avenge it, since she had evidently suffered no ill treatment. Devlin would have been content from the first to have the De Marsac children receive such share of the diamond's value as they felt they might justly claim. He did not feel them bound by their father's altruism. Good stewardship is entitled to its reward, even when no interest has been earned. Devlin had always sympathized with the cautious steward of scripture.

But he was not of the fiber to support being shot at with intent to kill then left presumably for dead or dying amongst the rocks.

Devlin no longer felt himself bound by his agreement to Jacqueline to pay over the ransom, take Easter and the diamond, and let Raoul go his way unhindered. Raoul's act in firing on him and now Jacqueline's treachery in taking the satchel of money and slipping ashore to hunt out Raoul had canceled this obligation.

Moreover, there was now presented that very chance that Devlin had hoped for of taking Raoul alive and forcing him to say what had become of Armand. Devlin felt that they owed the Comte de Marsac this much, at least. One does not accept the faithful discharge of such a duty as the restoration of a unique and priceless gem with no more than a "merci et au revoir."

So now, as Raoul said, "I'll go get the boat," Devlin drew his knees up under him, rested his palms on the rock, and bowed his head and shoulders over the brink in an effort to locate precisely his quarry. His position was more than ever that of his animal prototype. Also his manner of attack would be grotesquely identical. The puma dropping down with stealthy might on its no less savage enemy, the wolf.

The absence of any light at all and the fact that the noise of wind and waters and the muffled reverberations of voices did not precisely locate their source interfered with the precision of Devlin's attack.

Crouching lower, he reached down one arm gropingly in an effort to touch Raoul, determine his position. But the man had stepped from under the overhanging rock out of Devlin's reach. A second or two later Devlin located his exact position by his dark mass that eclipsed a sector of the phosphorescent wash on the beach that swept up in a broad luminous band.

This spoiled the advantage to be gained by dropping down on Raoul from above. Also it required Devlin to drop from the brink for about eight feet on to the sand to make a rush. This, he realized, might be fatal were he to land unevenly, lose his footing, and be forced to scramble up again to rush Raoul. So quick and cool a hand might readily find time to draw his weapon and fire into Devlin at or even before it came to a clinch, the more so as Raoul was by no means sure that he had put Devlin hors de combat back there in the rocks. Raoul would have been alert through all this interview.

There seemed no help for it. Their present distance of some few paces apart was as close as Devlin could hope to get.

At the water's edge Raoul paused and looked back. "I shan't be long. Don't call out."

The water swirled luminously about his feet. The first few steps carried him abreast of Devlin's position. Then, as he passed on, Devlin vaulted down from the brink.

He landed squarely on his feet in fine loose sand. His balance was lost, as was inevitable in the dark and springing from such a height, but his equilibrium swung outward in the direction of Raoul. Devlin's forward pitch carried him down on to his hands rather in the position of a sprinter on his mark, waiting tensely for the pistol.

This simile proved exact. Devlin landed on hands and feet, instinctively working the latter for a better stance. Raoul, on hearing the thud close behind him and at his side had spun around and fired in the direction of the sound. He was able to do this all the quicker because he had drawn his weapon on leaving the shelter of the rock.

It is therefore probable that what had for the moment appeared a disadvantage to him actually saved Devlin's life. If he had dropped down on Raoul's shoulders he might have been killed. But as it was, Raoul fired at a blind moving splotch against an inky background that gave it no relief. He was one of those rare natural marksmen to whom the use of a weapon is more an instinct than an art, shooting without the use of sights and as accurately as one would point the finger at some object, or extend the motion to touch it. Devlin himself could not have beaten Raoul's shooting, but he could anticipate it. He had known that Raoul would fire instantly on hearing a thump behind him on the sand and catching sight of a smear a little darker than the rocks. Devlin's position was nearly prone as the bullet hissed over him, exactly in line. But it was not inert. With the flash and the report Devlin made a scrambling dive at Raoul's legs, round which the luminous water was at that moment swirling.

This low tackle was delivered with force enough to knock out Raoul's underpinning, so that he pitched forward over Devlin's body. A man's instinct on being thus violently thrown down, especially into the water, is to fling out his arms to save himself. In doing this Raoul loosed his grip on the pistol, which flew wide, higher up the beach, clear of the wash. The chances are that Raoul's whole impulse was now to struggle free and to escape. Jacqueline had given him the satchel containing the ransom money and he had slung it over his shoulder by its strap. It must have flashed through Raoul's mind that if he could get clear of Devlin and back aboard the Grace-a-Dieu he would put off, gale or no gale, and win his way to the mainland. Devlin would scarcely try to follow him on such a night with the little yacht.

Physically the two men were well matched, Raoul a shade taller and heavier than Devlin and nerved to desperation in a fight for which the prize was life itself, as Raoul would not have supported disgrace and deportation. Had he been armed with a knife he would quickly have finished the affair. Being now weaponless, the fight resolved itself into the most primitive sort of duel, to be finished with natural resources alone in the pitch dark, the sluicing rain, for another shower came tearing down, and in about a foot of swirling brine.

The two girls may have screamed at the report of the pistol, but neither was that silly type of helpless heroine who stands shocked and nerveless when the man in whom lies her salvation clashes with a dangerous antagonist. Jacqueline was the true daughter of a race in which every past generation has seen its struggle for national existence, with no lack of civil warfare between such crises. Easter had her pioneer ancestry not so far remote, while both were animated by the strongest urge next to the maternal. Jacqueline saw her lover in danger of a worse end on a worse island than the Petit Glennon. Easter dreaded another report at any moment that might let out Devlin's soul to be whisked off in the rush of wind and rain.

WHEREFORE, as the two strong, active men lashed about like battling sea monsters the two young women of their kind plunged into the mêlée, which their blind efforts served merely to complicate. Devlin, a former football star and kept in the pink by sea life aboard his little schooner and jungle explorations, was by far the fitter of the two for this sort of athletic event. But his struggle with Raoul was now hampered not only by Jacqueline's tuggings and haulings at different parts of him but by Easter's interference. In the pitch dark it was impossible to discriminate between the salients of two anatomies so interwoven, and actually the efforts of the two girls were less partisan than to prevent either contestant from doing the other mortal damage then and there.

Thus floundering about and swept occasionally under water by a sand filled surge, Devlin presently laid himself open for a grip that Raoul was quick to seize. This was a strangle hold round Devlin's neck and throat, the right arm clinched well under the angle of the jaw and Devlin's throat in the crook of the elbow. Raoul reinforced the pressure brought to bear by a grip of the elbow in his left hand. Thus locked, the efforts of the two girls would not avail to break the hold before Devlin was choked into insensibility.

Devlin realized this immediately. He had caught a deep breath as Raoul put out the full force of a strangling pressure that was also intensely painful. They were lying face to face on their sides, Devlin slightly undermost. A less resourceful man must have been done for, choked before he could have loosed that fearful hold enough to catch a gasp. This also would have been the case had the struggle been high up the beach.

As it was Devlin seized his one chance of escape. By a tremendous effort he managed to twist his body half round so as to get a knee hold in the sand. Then, with Raoul's neck lock unrelaxed, Devlin loosed his hands from their vain effort to tear off the grip, caught Raoul round the waist and struggled up enough to surge forward with him for two or three steps into water, thigh deep, down into which he plunged completely under.

This maneuver caught Raoul just as he was about to take breath for a fresh output of all his strength, so that instead he filled his lungs with brine. Devlin, also under water, had been not only prepared for the immersion but was already throttled. Though suffering from lack of oxygen he was at least free from its substitution by bitter choking seawater, and his air passages saved the convulsing irritation.

Raoul in the nature of human reflexes could not hold on. He loosed his grip, struggling frantically to rise. Another involuntary respiration doubled his distress. Devlin's own lungs were near to bursting, but he managed to keep his head. He scrambled to his feet, got a lungful of air, then gripping Raoul by the shoulders held him still under. There is no telling to what degree he might have carried on this drowning process if Jacqueline had not flung herself upon him, partly to knock him off his balance.

"Let him up—let him up. . ." she screamed, striking at his head and face with her strong little fists. Then, to mingle comedy and tragedy, Easter plunged afresh into the scrimmage, mistaking the identity of the only male combatant visible. It had seemed to her that Raoul had first choked and was now drowning Devlin and that Jacqueline's dread of the result was combined with anger at Raoul's ruthlessness.

Devlin merely sank his head between his shoulders and let the feminine storm break on him as the waves might break on a projecting rock. Then feeling Raoul's struggles growing weaker he realized that, after all, his object was to take his enemy alive.

Gripping Raoul by the shoulder he started for the shore, dragged him up on to the beach clear of the wash, but even then Jacqueline's frenzy of attack did not abate. She continued to strike at Devlin as he stood panting heavily.

His patience snapped. Swinging round he caught Jacqueline by her plump shoulders and began to shake her. For a moment she resisted, then losing strength her head commenced to wabble. It appeared in some danger of flying off when Easter, discovering her mistake from the stream of reproach seething between Devlin's teeth, cried frantically, "O, Dev, are you shot?"

"No. Hang on to this little fool. That waterlogged brute is coming to life."

Raoul was squirming up on to his feet. Having strength enough left to expel the water from his lungs, a few deep breaths of the free air in which that place was so rich revived him. He stood now like a game boxer who has been knocked down but not out and is almost back to fighting force.

Devlin suddenly remembered the ransom money in the satchel slung from Raoul's shoulder by a strap. He stepped forward to take charge of this. Jacqueline flung by Devlin into Easter's arms now mistook his intention for a renewed attack on Raoul. She tore away from Easter and hurled herself on Devlin again, throwing her arms round his neck.

"Run, Raoul," she cried. "Save yourself quick."

Devlin, whose limited fund of patience had entirely run out, tore loose Jacqueline's arms and sent her spinning toward Easter. But Raoul ignored Jacqueline's advice. In the faint phosphorescent glow and such dim light as always exists, however dark the night, Devlin could see that Raoul's body was stooped forward and swaying unsteadily. It looked as if he were sick from his deep draughts of roiled sea water.

Devlin pulled out his pocket torch that had weathered the struggle and immersion. He threw the beam on Raoul to discover better his condition and if the satchel was intact. Devlin did not think about the pistol, or at least he had not thought about it after the very start of the struggle. Since this had been in from a foot to three feet of swirling water, Devlin's mind had dismissed the weapon from his calculation.

But Raoul remembered that when tackled by Devlin the pistol had flown out of his hand close to this spot, and as Devlin threw the beam of his light to look him over the ray swept up from his feet so that Raoul, in the act of trying to locate the weapon, caught a metallic gleam at the ripple's edge. He swayed on his feet as if overcome by weakness, staggered a little to the side and in the direction of the pistol that Devlin, whose eyes were on him, had not seen, then fell sprawling with one arm flung out. His hand fastened on the pistol.

The trick must have succeeded if it had not been played in the bright, searching glare of Devlin's torch. Even then the chances are that Raoul's masterly skill in shooting by instinct would have served his desperate purpose if he had been opposed to a man a fraction less swift to think and act.

Devlin caught sight of the pistol as Raoul reached out for it. He dived at him as a trained star of the gridiron dives at the ball fumbled in a scrimmage. Before Raoul's hand could grip the pistol properly for use Devlin crashed down across his arm, and as he fell he struck. The blow was a favorite one of Devlin's when his object was merely to daze his adversary for the moment—a quick jab with the ball of his hand on the chin or jaw.

Raoul sank back, utterly relaxed, limp as a shot hare. Devlin secured the pistol and shoved it in his pocket. As he scrambled to his feet Jacqueline broke away from Easter and launched a fresh offensive. Neither she nor Easter had caught sight of the pistol, so that Devlin's renewed attack on his prostrate enemy had looked to them like an outburst of sheer and ruthless ferocity. Easter herself was appalled by it. She could not have believed Devlin capable of springing on and striking down an adversary that had fallen from exhaustion.

"Devlin!" she cried. "Are you crazy?"

Jacqueline burst suddenly into frantic sobbing. She turned from her futile assault on Devlin and flung herself down at Raoul's side.

"You have killed him," she wailed. "Brute, assassin, Yankee murderer!" Sitting in the luminous wash, she drew Raoul's head on to her lap.

"Why this last, Dev?" Easter asked, angrily. "Can't you see he's all in?"

"Not so far in but what he'd have got me," Devlin retorted. "That was a stage fall to connect with the pistol there in the sand. I nabbed him just in time."

Jacqueline did not hear this. She turned her face that shone pallid through the murk toward Devlin and said bitterly:

"Eh bien, you might as well finish your work and kill him!"

Devlin stepped to where the two were huddled and stared down at Jacqueline. "That man has tried to murder me several times tonight. I'm taking no more chances with him. Get out of the way."

"What are you going to do?"

"Tie him up. If you make any more trouble I'll tie you, too. Get up."

Jacqueline obeyed. The fight already shaken out of her was now submerged in despair. She sank down on the sand again, pitched forward, and, holding her face in her hands, began to cry like a heart-broken little girl. Easter, overwhelmed with pity, dropped down at her side, drew Jacqueline into her arms, and tried to comfort her.

Devlin stooped over Raoul, who was more dazed than stunned and did not resist as Devlin turned him on his side, drew back his arms, then tugging off his own necktie of woven silk, bound his wrists together, making a tailorly job of it.

It became apparent then to Devlin that he was confronted by a sort of fox and goose and bag of corn problem. They were all water soaked, and though still warm from their active efforts, must soon be chilled. He did not dare leave the three and go for the boat lest Raoul wriggle free or break his bonds. Easter was not, he thought, a safe custodian.

He disliked to send either of the girls alone to fetch the boat.

"Get up," he said to Raoul, then gripped him by the shoulder and dragged him to his feet. "You two come here under the rocks."

They made their way to the shelter of the grotto. Jacqueline checked her sobbing.

"Are you badly hurt, cherie?" she asked Raoul.

"No," he answered briefly.

EASTER said resentfully, "You needn't be so rough with Jacqueline, Dev. You can't blame her for standing by her own brother."

"He's nothing of the sort," Devlin growled. "He never was her brother. He's a guy named Raoul de Rimbec and he's a bad actor."

Easter was speechless trying to adjust her ideas. Devlin said briefly:

"Before we go any further, where's Armand?"

Raoul did not answer.

"Speak up," Devlin said. "His sister claims you haven't done him any harm, but I'm not so sure. Where is he?"

"Safe enough," Raoul answered, curtly.

"Well, where? You tell us and make it snappy or I'll lug you down the beach and show you a real water cure."

"He's aboard a ship."

"What ship? Speak out now. I want the whole of it."

"He was shanghaied aboard a German bark at Bordeaux. She was loading wine for the Argentine."

"You doped him and got him shanghaied?"

Raoul was silent.

"You're going to make me sore in a minute, and then God help you!" Devlin said. "If you want any mercy for this——."

"I'm not asking any."

"O, tell him, Raoul," Jacqueline begged.

"Well, then, I knew the plans about handing over the Peace Stone to Easter Mordecay. I wanted to get it for Jacqueline so that we could clear out together. I drugged Armand and got his papers and bribed the captain of the ship to take him aboard."

"Did you know it was only the replica he had?" Devlin asked.

"Of course. Armand told me all about it and showed it to me. He was sore about it. Why not? The Comte's act in handing it over was insane."

"Then," said Devlin, "you planned all along to pull off precisely what you did?"

"Yes."

"I see. Wait until it was delivered to Easter, then manage to get it away from her by continuing to impersonate Armand, whom she had no reason to suspect. But why the devil didn't you clear out with it when you'd got it?"

"I didn't want the Peace Stone. All I wanted was money to get me out of a mess. Then I'd have gone away somewhere and started fresh with Jacqueline."

"Well," said Devlin, "you might have done that, too, if you'd played the game up until now."

"So I did," Raoul said. "I didn't shoot to kill back there."

"You're a liar!" Devlin twisted the sleeve of his raincoat, then threw the torch on the bullet tear at the elbow. "What about that? Only I ducked in time you'd have got me, as you thought you had. He threw the light on his face and touched the raw, smarting brush burn above his eyebrow. "That was where your second shot wiped me."

"Well," Raoul said sullenly, "then in the dark I shot closer than I meant. I had to make you keep under cover."

"Maybe. Let it pass. You tried again here on the beach."

"What do you expect when a man rushes you in the dark?" Raoul demanded. "Self-defense."

"You're one smooth worker," Devlin said. "Then Armand is outward bound for Buenos Aires? I wish I could be sure."

"You can be. How would that help?"

"It might help you quite a lot if I believed it. On Jacqueline's account. How did you get ashore, Madame?"

"I swam."

"Then made your way along the beach? Did you come on the mousse?"

"Yes. He's in his boat between here and the Grace-a-Dieu."

Devlin handed Easter his torch. "You and Jacqueline go back along the beach, and if the mousse is still there have him set you aboard our boat, then send him back here for me. If you try any more tricks, Madame, it will go hard with your Raoul."

Jacqueline said angrily. "You are not polite."

"And you," Devlin retorted, "are not honest."

"You dare call me a thief?" Jacqueline blazed.

"Why not? I came here with all good faith and you tricked me. You took the satchel of ransom money that was not yours out of my locker in the cabin. If that doesn't rate you crooked then there's no such thing."

"But you promised me——"

"Don't argue. You've got no case. First you snatch my letter and shut the gate in my face, then double-cross your father. Now you try to double-cross me. You take the word of this fripon, swindler, thief, kidnaper, attempted assassin that he has shangat one of them. Those things were priceless, but Mary paid all she had for them.

By Elizabeth Jordan

She paid over her income to the children, and she expended her strength, which was almost as limited, on work for the household. Little by little its management was turned over to her by a mistress increasingly absorbed in outside affairs. The machinery ran with beautiful smoothness. Mary Martin was a born homemaker, and the servants respected the little gentlewoman who could do their work better than they did it and whose rule was so invariably considerate. She worked with them, too, day and night. She was always sewing or knitting or redecorating or rearranging. Katie, the chambermaid, freely admitted to the cook that "Miss Mary" saved her a lot of stairs.

"It isn't herself that stands at the top of them and yells for you to come up to her," Katie admiringly commented. "She comes down!"

SO it is not surprising that after eighteen months of this Miss Mary "came down" in earnest with a heavy cold that developed into pneumonia. At first—indeed, for two days—no one but herself realized that she was really ill. Mary realized it because she discovered, to her horror, that she could not lift her head from the pillow. It was simply dreadful, she felt, to be helpless and to cause others so much trouble. Why, Katie climbed those two flights of stairs at least four times the first day to ask if she could do anything, and even the cook came up in the evening to suggest a little custard or junket to tempt Miss Mary's appetite.

Miss Mary was so grateful that her brown eyes filled with tears. Every one was so wonderfully kind to her! That is what it meant to have a home and a family. Mary had always known that it could be like that, but she had not dreamed she herself would ever experience such joy. "The children," too, rushed upstairs to see her, and sat on the side of her bed, which made her rather uncomfortable, and talked in loud, cheerful voices. She had not noticed before that their voices were so loud. She was actually almost glad when they left her, and reproached herself for the feeling. But immediately afterwards Marion came up and insisted on calling a doctor.

Mary protested vigorously. She knew them—rest and hot baths and no food, knew exactly the right treatment for what was the matter with her. It was only a cold. In the past she had suffered dozens of colds just like it. She never ate at such times. And wouldn't they please, please, not go to any trouble? She simply could not endure the thought that she was making any trouble for anybody.

SHE had her way for forty-eight hours, and lay quietly in the little blue room thinking how wonderful it was to be ill at "home" and not in a boarding house. Then Mrs. Martin climbed up to her on the evening of the second day and resolutely summoned the family physician, who shook his head over Mary's temperature.

After that surprising things happened. A trained nurse was engaged, then a second nurse for night duty, and cots were installed for them in the third floor hall. The two nurses worried Mary very much—not personally, for they were agreeable and highly skilled women. But they would have to be paid, and who would pay them? Mary mentioned this to Marion when the latter sat beside her on the third evening. She explained that her next quarter's income was not due for another month, and that she was rather short, and that she had always understood that nurses expected to be paid every week.

Marion quieted her with gentle firmness. It was all right about the nurses. They were to be paid by John Henry. John Henry had given orders that everything was to be done for his sister. He had even sent for a big specialist, so he could be sure that the family doctor and the nurses were doing all that was necessary. Mary's eyes filled with tears. Such a wonderful sister-in-law and nephew and niece! But she could not get over all the trouble she was making. That was terrible. And she must, she really must, repay her brother for the nurses' services when she got well and her allowance came.

Marion Martin soothed her gently. Everything should be exactly as Mary wished. But the episode made her wonder anew what Mary Martin was doing with her income. Certainly she was not spending it on herself. She was even shabbier than she had been when she came. Was she misguidedly going on investing her money instead of enjoying it while she could? Marion's mind was so full of the problem that she mentioned it to her daughter and thus learned the truth.

Raw Material . . .

Yes, Hilda was raw when Mrs. Mary Randolph descended on the employment agency and picked her out to pick on her. A diamond in the rough—and what a polish she took! . . . A delicious short story of food and oil millions and matrimony by Evelyn Campbell

Next Sunday

Carrie, wide eyed and frightened by the shadow that lay over the house, suddenly burst into tears.

"Is she going to die?" she wailed "O, I hope she isn't going to die. Don't let her die! Mother, mother, I want to tell you something. Jack and I have been awfully selfish. We've borrowed a lot of money from Aunt Mary—a whole lot—and—and—we haven't paid much of it back."

The details came out and Mrs. Martin listened to them with set lips.

"If your father knew this he'd never forgive you," she said at the end. "I don't know whether I can forgive you myself. But we'll make it up to her," she added more calmly. "I, too, have a lot to be forgiven for. As soon as she's well we'll pay her every cent you children owe her and we'll buy her a new wardrobe as a gift. I promised her when she first came that we would make a picture of her some day. When she is a little better you must tell her how sorry you are——"

To herself, being just a woman, she added, "Who am I to blame them? I've used her myself from beginning to end."

Mary did not get a little better. Instead she grew steadily worse, and finally drifted out upon an uncharted sea on whose calm waves she lay babbling for hours at a time. She talked of red apples and of "Johnny," and of the swimming hole and "Johnny," and of hay rides and "Johnny," and of games and school and "Johnny."

John Henry didn't come into the sickroom himself because he was so big and clumsy and no good there, but he asked about his sister every day and gave orders that she was to have anything and everything she needed. Privately, Mrs. John Henry saw to it that these things included some new garments for sickroom wear. Poor Mary was really appallingly under-supplied. She appeared to have only two nightgowns, both carefully mended, and one thin and faded bed jacket.

The children crept upstairs once a day to glance into the sickroom and nod and smile. They were not allowed to enter now, or to speak to the patient, but sometimes she knew they were there, and smiled at them and waved a thin hand.

"So good, so good," they heard her mutter. "One's own family——"

JOHN HENRY himself, making his first visit to the sickroom on the morning of the fifth day of her illness, stood beside his sister's bed, looking down at her and listening. She was saying something about fishing with "Johnny," and about a picnic and "Johnny." Several times she called out sharply to "Johnny" to wait for her. She appeared to think he was running away. "Johnny" stood over her, listening and frowning.

"She talks about you all the time," his wife told him as she expertly tested a hot water bottle, "and she usually seems to think you're running away from her."

"She's goin' to get well, isn't she?" John Henry jerked out.

"Of course, she is."

Marion's words were reassuring, but her voice was too maternal. It was almost cajoling. Her husband's heart sank. It was in this voice that his wife always spoke to him in their domestic crises, when she was trying to prepare him for a possible shock—as when the children had diphtheria, and when young Jack had his operation for appendicitis. The voice had told him that Marion was very anxious.

But the great specialist who came again a little later continued optimistic.

"I've seen worse cases than this pull through," he said cheerily. "And you have splendid nurses. A whole lot depends on nursing. Don't despair."

The family physician was less reassuring.

"No constitution," he said, crisply, "and no vitality. No staying power. Heart all worn out. What's she been doing? She wasn't like that when she came here, less than two years ago. I thought then she was one of the wiry type that could stand anything. Has she been worrying—or overworking?"

John Henry did not hear these comments and questions. He was endeavoring to drop Mary from his mind. It was a comfort to do so. For some reason the thought of her had become intolerable. He plunged into his work with an absorption surprising even in him, and made a new record of achievement between ten o'clock and five on the sixth day of Mary's illness. Then, abruptly, and to the great surprise of his efficient young secretary, he suddenly leaned forward over his desk and took his big head in his hands. The telephone rang compellingly. Before his secretary could do so, John Henry lifted the receiver from its hook.

"Better come home, dear," his wife's voice told him.

John Henry nodded, replaced the receiver without speaking, and got up to put on his coat and hat. He knew what had happened. He knew, too that subconsciously he had been expecting it all day.

Mrs. Martin met him at the front door and drew him into the hall, where she helped him to take off his coat. Her eyes were red, but she spoke in her usual tones. The atmosphere of the house was pleasant and natural.

"She went half an hour ago," she said, "just before I telephoned you—very suddenly and quietly. There wasn't the least pain. That's always a comfort. Do you want to come upstairs?" she added doubtfully.

"No."

John Henry went toward his study, and his wife walked with him down the hall to its door. Then she turned to leave him, realizing that he wished to be alone; but he stopped her and stood staring at her for a moment as if he had forgotten what he meant to say.

"You attend to everything, Marion," he brought out at last. "Do it up the best way you know how."

She nodded and he opened the study door, but he did not enter the room. Apparently on a new thought, he faced her again.

"You say she liked pretty things," he muttered. "See that she has 'em. See that everything is done the way she'd admire it." For a moment he stood looking at her uncertainly. "You know what I mean," he ended heavily, and went into the study and closed the door.

Mrs. John Henry knew what he meant. With the help of her daughter and her florist and others, she carried out his instructions. Her husband went to his office the two following days. There was nothing he could do around the house. There the domestic life moved on almost as usual.

True, the place was very quiet, but meals were served on time and they were excellent meals. John Henry's appetite was not quite as good as usual, but no one observed this, nor did his family see any change in his manner. His children's faces were serious and their spirits were subdued, but they talked of their various interests as they always did at the table.

In the big living room, where the family assembled each night, the familiar open fire blazed on the hearth, the lamp, and, with one exception, the familiar figures settled into them. Only familiar chairs waited by the reading the big drawing room across the hall was closed and shuttered.

ON the morning of the third day John Henry was taken into this room to see the result of his instructions to his wife. He crossed the threshold hesitatingly, almost unwillingly, and as he did so received a surprising effect of beauty. There was nothing gloomy, nothing funereal, here. A soft but pleasant light filled the room, and there were flowers everywhere—not the white, heavy scented flowers he instinctively associated with death, but bright and cheerful flowers on every side. At the big room's far end they seemed massed into a bank against a background of soft green vines, and in this beautiful resting place Mary Martin slept. She wore a white silk lace-trimmed negligee, and she lay on her side, with one hand under her cheek and the lace of a wing sleeve falling away from it in soft folds. The position was amazingly easy and natural. Amazingly natural, too, in its peace and sweetness was Mary's worn face. Her hair had been waved and dressed. John Henry was not sure he liked that. It was not natural. But it—or something else—gave Mary a look which justified the low comment of his daughter at his side.

"You know, dad, she's actually lovely! I never dreamed she could look like this. We always thought Aunt Mary was plain. But I believe now that if she'd had beautiful clothes and marcel waves and other things like the rest of us she'd have been a picture."

"She's a picture now. She looks really beautiful."

It was Marion Martin who spoke, and as she spoke a sudden sharp memory awoke in her. Standing beside her husband, and looking down on the still features of his sister, she remembered a certain promise she had made to Mary.

"But there's an expression I can't understand," she continued thoughtfully. "She never wore it before. She's smiling, and yet——"

John Henry Martin, an ungainly, incongruous figure among the beauty he had provided for his dead sister, did not see the still, cold figure that lay before him. Instead, he seemed to be looking down a long and narrow road, along which a shabby little child in a checked gingham frock and a sunbonnet was hurrying to meet him.

"Johnny!" Almost he could hear the baby voice calling. Or was it the echo of that last babble he had listened to in the sickroom before the voice was stilled forever?

"Johnny!" She was always calling him in their childhood. She had constantly called him in her last illness. He knew now that she had been calling him all her life, and that he had been deaf to the call. She had wanted love and beauty, and he alone in all the world could have given them to her. Yet he had given her nothing, though she—he frowningly admitted it in this moment—had given him her whole life. Instead he had run away from her, and when she had called he had not come back.

When it was too late he had told Marion to surround her with the beauty she had wanted. Marion had done her best. Beauty was here. But something else was here, too, something he had felt when he entered the room, something which after one swift look had made him afraid to turn his eyes again upon his sister. And now Marion was putting the things into words.

"It's a smile," she was saying. "And yet it isn't an ordinary smile, or anything like Mary's usual smile. It's—it's tolerant, and quizzical—yes, that's it. It's actually as if Mary felt amused over something!"

Her husband forced his gaze to rest upon his sister's face. He knew that smile. He had recognized it as soon as he entered the room. He had seen it hundreds of times. It was the smile—shy, tender and almost quizzical—with which, in their childhood, little Mary Martin had always forgiven him when he came back to her. A contraction in his breast suddenly loosened. One sob, hoarse and rather horrible to hear, broke from him.

"Amused!" he echoed. "Amused! God! I should think she would be!"

The Peace Stone ◆ By Henry C. Rowland

harmed your brother. He's more apt to have knifed him on the quay of a dark night and sunk his body in the slime of the port."

"O, you brute!" Jacqueline cried. "You don't know him as I do."

"No. A damn sight better. Now, keep still and do as I tell you or I'm apt to try a stronger method to get a full confession."

The husky note in Devlin's voice that checked with certain of his other traits was now a low growl. All his civilization, the evolution of centuries, seemed to have quitted Devlin, left him pure savage, for the moment brute beast.

Even Easter felt a tremor of fear.

SHE had never known Devlin very well, never got more than his perfunctory personality—feeling always that there were depths to sound for which she had not the equipment. At this moment he seemed to her an utter stranger, an unknown quantity. She was conscious of a relentless cruelty about him, the ruthlessness of an early conquisitador. She could understand why at college they had called him the Fair God. Cortez had been no doubt a graceful, pleasing courtier in Spain, which did not prevent his relentless extermination of a splendid race in Mexico. Easter had once heard it suggested jokingly that Devlin might owe some of his success in finding jungle buried Mayan tombs and cities to a heated gun barrel. And now this possibility seemed less absurd.

Jacqueline also got the chilled hardness of him. She may have realized for the first time that she had not to deal with a courteous American tourist of upper class, but the type of American that had puzzled the French during the war and of which certain grim anecdotes existed. A sort of laughing, reckless, lavish, overgrown boy child that might unaccountably and suddenly exhibit traits of a red Indian, so that the rumor had been rife that many American soldiers were actually of crossed blood.

She shivered, not entirely from cold, as the air was warm enough and their position sheltered.

"Hurry along," Devlin said. "If you get in any trouble, Easter, just sing out."

The two girls started off in silence, clambering over and between the masses of broken stone, for the tide had risen so that the going was more difficult than when Jacqueline had come. They had the torch to help them and they had not far to go before coming on the mousse in the boat.

Devlin took Raoul's torch and flashed it on the man, who still had slung about his shoulders the strap of the satchel that contained the ransom. Devlin slipped this off and hung it over his own. A wonder, he reflected, that it had not been torn off and lost in the fight.

Raoul sat silently leaning forward in a huddled posture, wrists bound behind his back. Devlin stood with his shoulders against the wall of rock, immobile, silent, inscrutable as a menhir.

Curiously enough, the two men had a quality in common, which was a stony self-containment, self-sufficiency, that chill sureness of procedure that is rare and goes to the making of a splendid officer, one trusted and respected if not beloved. Julius Caesar possessed it and George Washington, Wellington and Napoleon and Hindenburg and Pershing. Successful business men possess it, also successful crooks, though with these latter it seldom avails more than transiently. They are working not with and for a movement of which the motive, at least, is for ultimate progress, but against it, against the law in both its detailed and universal sense. Consequently though successful for a period, they are bound eventually to be crushed by a juggernaut against which no race or individual has ever long stood.

Something of this sort may now have passed through Raoul's mind, for he said presently as if more to himself than to Devlin:

"It was inevitable. If one is to succeed as a criminal one should be complete."

Devlin did not answer. He did not move, gave no sign of having heard. Raoul, as if unable to support a cold reticence that had always been his own forte and now seemed so relentlessly opposed to him, continued bitterly.

"That was my trouble, incompletion."

Devlin broke his silence and said, curtly, and as if reading Raoul's mind, "I'll say you're right. Why didn't you steal the diamond and beat it when you had the chance?"

"I don't know," Raoul muttered.

"All you had to do," Devlin said, "was to take the Peace Stone, go aboard your boat and run for Spain. You might have got away with it."

"I know that," Raoul said.

"Well, why didn't you?"

"I tell you I don't know. The night after I brought Easter aboard, she sat on the edge of her bunk staring at the diamond. I was looking down through the hatch. She didn't see me. The diamond was like a glowing ember. I've always heard that no man with a streak of the pirate in him could look at a jewel like that without determining to have it at any price. But this one works the opposite."

"Some truth in the tradition," Devlin said.

Raoul answered, heavily, "Call it superstition, that's where I'm incomplete."

HE stared up at the sky. The wrack overhead was higher, thinning, the scud flying with great velocity. It seemed also to have altered its course a little.

"This gale's not going to last," Raoul said. "Never can tell at this season." And he added then without motive the one thing, the only thing perhaps, that could have stirred in Devlin the slightest note of sympathy.

"I swept the channel ahead of a convoy once on just such a night as this—working with some of your American fish boats."

"I remember," Devlin said. "Some night."

Raoul nodded. "Big swell. Never knew what minute it might drop us on a mine. Pity for me it didn't."

There was another short silence. Devlin stirred uneasily, then said in a curt voice. "Stand up."

Raoul obeyed. Devlin stepped up behind him, felt Raoul's hands. They were cold, hard, and swollen.

"They'll last," Devlin said, briefly.

Another silence endured for many minutes. If the leaven of pity was working in Devlin it did not manifest itself.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Neither Oven Nor Pot Can Produce a Product Comparable to the Direct Fire Cooked Meats from the Broiler

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

SOME ONE might doubt the statement that today in these United States no summer cooking is so newly popular as the roasting of meats, and beef in special. You may see one sign of this as you motor across country, or state, or even within the narrow bounds of a county. It is those barbecuing fires with great pieces of meat revolving before them, basted from the dripping pans below and finally sliced and sauced for the barbecue sandwich.

Presently we think the beefsteak will get that renewed attention which will lead to its being not only, as ever, one of the most popular of meats, but one subject to far better cooking than is general now. Beefsteak cooking has truly been at a low ebb, and only a great revival of interest in meat cookery can lead to the exploiting of ways of doing this work better. Tons of beefsteaks, cooked, are served that are not one-fourth as excellent, if that, as they ought to be.

Traveling Far for a Steak.

There is a story which is somewhere near a hundred years old, on the subject of broiling beefsteaks, that is worth new attention. When people still had to travel by stage coach, those from the more easterly parts of New England, like Boston, were always anxious to reach New Haven, Conn., because there they could get a BROILED beefsteak. Probably fried beefsteaks were mostly seen everywhere in New England then, as for a long time afterward. These broiled beefsteaks were to be had at "a public house," as hotels were then called, kept by a man named Butler who became famous for the delicious steaks he always cooked and attended to himself.

An old description of this man's cooking reads thus: "You would find him, with his white cap and apron on, before a heap of live hickory coals, in front of the great wide old fashioned chimney, having a long handle attached to a large double hinged gridiron, with a fine steak fastened up in it, so that he could keep the steak turning, first on one side and then on the other, that not a drop of the fine gravy should drip off.

"When done, it was dished up, and placed steaming hot before the hungry traveler, who never failed to do ample justice to the efforts of the cook, who, by these means, built a reputation as well as a fortune—by the knowledge of broiling a beefsteak."

The English Beefsteak club, founded in 1734, which became a great builder of beefsteak traditions, gave its recipe in verse, but it is not as good a recipe as the above, or, at any rate, a bit of detail given in it is not anything to follow. Some of the most entertaining and illuminating stories about beefsteaks were written by a New York master butcher of sixty years back, and it is in his book that we find that story about the origin of beefsteak which may have been founded directly on Charles Lamb's story of the origin of roast pig, but is not the less entertaining for that, since clever adaptations or imitations usually pay their way.

The Origin of Beefsteak.

The story given in that old book about the origin of beefsteak reads as follows: "The discovery of the chief sources of human enjoyment has all been attributed to some fabulous origin in the ancient world. The story of that important feature of dinner, the beefsteak, was thus given in the middle ages: Lucius Plaucus, a Roman of rank, was ordered by the Emperor Trajan, for some offence, to act as one of the menial sacrificers to Jupiter; he resisted, but was at length dragged to the altar.

"There the fragments of the victim were laid upon the fire, and the unfortunate senator was forcibly compelled to turn them. In the process of roasting, one of the slices slipped off the coals and was caught by Plaucus in its fall. It burned his fingers, and he instinctively thrust them into his mouth. In that moment he had made the grand discovery that a taste of a slice thus carbonaded was infinitely beyond all the old sodden cookery of Rome.

"A new expedient to save his dignity was suggested at the same time, and he at once evinced his obedience to the emperor by seeming to go through the sacrifices with due regularity, and his scorn of the employment by turning the whole ceremony into a matter of appetite. He swallowed every slice, deluded Trajan, defrauded Jupiter, and invented the beefsteak!

"A discovery of this magnitude could not be long concealed; the sacrifices began to disappear with a rapidity and satisfaction to the parties too extraordinary to be unnoticed. The priests of Jupiter adopted the practice with delight, and the king of Olympus must have been soon starved if he depended upon any share of the good things of Rome."

Carbonaded Meats.

The Spanish for a broiled beefsteak is carbonada, but some of the Spanish definitions of this variously spelled word show that it is used for what we call in English barbecued meat or that type cooked on a grate over a bed of coals. In international cook books carbonades of one sort or another are given, and in one of the greatest what is cooked "a la Flamande" is really beefsteak and onions.

The cut of meat used is "lean shoulder or cushion of beef," and this interests me because I have been at work on just such a cut.

A Beef Shoulder Story.

It happens that I have a deep broiling oven in which I can do roasting easily enough, and, I think, better in most cases than in the baking oven. Also, it happened one day in my coursing around in markets and grocery stores that I entered a rather quietly reserved butcher shop where on the counter at the side, and under glass, was a five pound cut of beef shoulder, two inches thick and so long that for a minute one might think it was a thick beefsteak, with the round bone.

I bought this and took it home, but in the end felt rather provoked at myself that I had not thought about where it was lying—the high character of the shop partly prevented that. It had been lying in an enamel pan, and when I turned the meat I saw that the pan had not been even housewife clean—not to speak of surgically clean—and had been warm enough to draw out the juices. Meat is somewhat cold boiled when it lies in the wet, although not at all cooked. It is hard to give a really adequate and convincing description of what happens in such cases to change the fresh color to dull and, worse, to injure the flavor of the meat.

Besides this, the bone was dirty from the saw or something. Was this of any importance? It was to me, for I was planning to have its sweet marrow fat boil up and over the meat to baste it, and help to make its texture as close as that of fine pound cake.

An Experiment.

The experiment tried was to cut this piece of meat in two, cooking the half with the bone on the grid in the deep broiling oven, heated exceedingly hot as a preparation for this piece of cooking. The other part was pot roasted because the butcher had assured me that the cut was a pot roast, although it would have taken the largest of iron Dutch ovens to have held a piece of meat as long as this was.

The second part was treated in the conventional way, with no water and no seasoning vegetables. To have been absolutely fair to this piece, some other than its own fat should have been used, but in this way a wonderful beef gravy was secured which needed no additions save a bit of salt to be quite supreme—with no thickening because it was not thin—though really good enough to be thinned. But the meat was stiff and dry as compared to the other half, which was cooked in the broiling oven. Salt had not been added to it until it was two-thirds cooked.

When cold and cut in the thinnest slices and dipped in French dressing it was serviceable. Like the other it was made compact with small steel skewers.

Beef Shoulder on the Grid.

Over the piece of shoulder with a bone I put some thin slices of onion, as I did over the piece cooked in the kettle, and besides this, and to protect the top from the fire, I put a thin layer of chopped salt pork, and then poured over the whole at the start some hot salt pork fat. The reason that it is necessary to chop the pork is that next the fire slices of pork, as bacon is curled in a frying pan, will curl and the edges will quickly burn. In cooking with a fire at one side of a piece of meat, burned edges must be avoided, because they flavor undesirably, or to the real ruin of the flavor.

After the hot fat was poured over the meat with its top layer of protection and seasoner, it was shoved into the truly hot broiling oven, the flame lowered to the limit that it would not go out, and the door was closed. There was a half cup of water in the pan to which the fat of the pork, and soon that of the cooking meat was added, and this was used for the two or three bastings the meat received in three-fourths of an hour of cooking.

Remember that the marrow boiled in the bone, and flowed out to the advantage of the meat. The salt pork brought some salt, and a little more was finally added.

The flavor of this meat was far superior to any fine roast poorly cooked. It was fine cold meat. The gravy was not half as good as that in the pot roasting kettle because juices did not cook out.

Pot Roast Cuts of Meat.

The best pot roast of meat I ever cooked was a piece of chuck meat and next to that the heel of the round. In making statements like this one should qualify them by saying that different grades of meat make great differences in quality.

But this piece of shoulder meat described was from high quality beef, and I surely would never recommend it for the pot roasting kettle unless many seasoning vegetables were added, and perhaps not then, but it might do for open oven braising if basted every ten minutes. At all odds avoid steaming effects, no matter what the utensil.

The Chuck Pot Roast.

A great cook once laid down the law that no sauce or gravy could equal the fine flavor of the outside of roasted meat when it first leaves the fire. He was railing against the cooks who let meat cool because then it carves better and then pour a hot sauce over it and serve it as hot meat when it is usually but lukewarm. If a pot roast is well seared, and the cut is right, and the cooking of the best, one can get a beefsteak or fire browned aroma from it, but there are all those ifs.

First it must be made clean, and made as compact as possible with skewers, then rub it all over with a mixture of a heaping teaspoon of flour—if there is but a pound of chuck to be cooked—a level teaspoon of salt and an eighth of a teaspoon of freshly ground pepper. Have a little tried out suet and salt pork fat in the kettle—they must never get scorched first nor last—and sear the prepared meat all over it. Then cover and cook, basting now and then with the fat in the kettle to which may be added a bit of water only, but best none at all. The cooking must be slow.

Fat to protect the surface, with direct exposure of meats to the fire, condenses the moisture of meats, and so may give that fine close texture that has its influence in the flavor. But any wetting of the meat should be avoided by trimmings and scrapings. Bone ends must be clean, too.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

THE low placed circular fullness in the skirt of pattern No. 3319, with a hip yoke in a pointed outline in the front, achieves a charming, slender line. It is a design that will be becoming to many, and as it isn't difficult either to cut or make, it should prove a favorite. The long waisted bodice is cut in two pieces—front and back—and the deep Vionnet neckline in front is cut in a scalloped outline, the effect being especially youthful. There are full length one piece sleeves made close fitting by means of a dart up the outside. The deep hip yoke with a pointed lower edge in the front aids in giving that much desired slender silhouette. To this yoke a circular skirt is joined. This circular skirt is cut in two pieces front and back, both being circular.

Always compare your own measures with those of the pattern before pinning the various pieces on the material, and if there are any changes mark them clearly on the pattern, allowing for them as you pin the pieces in place. Be sure not to fit the yoke too close. It will look better and keep its shape better if it is reasonably loose. Perforations and notches on the pattern chart show just how and where the different pieces are joined, and you will often save time by first pinning seams or parts of the garment together before basting.

In setting the skirt on the yoke hold the skirt next to you, pinning it to the yoke at the center front and back, and at the side seams, before basting.

The only trimming the dress needs is the bias binding used around the neck, on the edges of the sleeves, and around the bottom of the skirt. Sometimes these bindings can first be stitched in a narrow, wrong side seam. Then the opposite edge is turned over the seam and hemmed down by hand. But usually the result will be more satisfactory if the whole is done by hand. Sometimes one sees a sort of twisted look to parts of bindings on clothes that quite spoils the beauty, and this comes from slightly stretching the edge that is to be hemmed down. If you keep watch of the right side as you hem this edge down, you can avoid any twists.

Of course the dress should be hung up for several days to allow for stretching, before finishing the bottom. It takes but little time and material to make this dress, and it adapts itself to supple silks, sheer crêpes and the new, smart cotton fabrics.

Pattern No. 3407 is a darling design for a dress for small girls. Making these clothes is one of the most fascinating branches of sewing, and small children never look more attractive than when wearing some fresh, clean wash dress. Navy blue dimity with tiny white dots, with yokes and bands made of white organdy, candy stripped tub silk, pale blue chambray, printed sateen, and printed linen with white linen contrasting are materials suggested for this small outfit. The little dress has shoulder yokes attached to straight bands that join the front and back with clusters of shirring at either side.

The long sleeves are in one piece and are gathered at the wrists into narrow bands, while the short ones are simply hemmed as a finish. There is a narrow French beading that is ideal for joining seams, for instance, where the front and back skirt sections are set on to the straight bands. Or, if you use a solid color for the dress, set the parts together in a French seam and then, using white mercerized floss, cover the joining with a single featherstitching, taking short stitches. This could also be used on the sleeve bands, or if the sleeves are short, just where the seams are stitched.

The pattern provides for two skirt lengths, and bloomers are included in this pattern. These, of course, will be made of the same material as the dress.

The design of pattern No. 3403 will be sure to delight many women, with its slender lines and the flattering jabot at either side of the front panel with a Vionnet neckline, that adds a feminine touch. The back of this dress is cut in one piece, while in the front there are four pieces besides the panel and jabots. The circular skirt fronts form plaits at either side of the center front, that flutter gracefully when in motion. The dress is left open a way on the left shoulder to make the slipping on and off easier and small straps are used to fasten.

Collar and jabot are cut in one piece and make an unusually attractive finish, particularly if the jabots are of the material used for the panel front. The sleeves add to the smartness of the whole by being full length and allowed to flare at the wrists. An unusually smart effect is attained for afternoon wear by using black chiffon printed in exquisite coloring, with plain black chiffon for jabots, panel, and belt. Printed silk crêpe with plain silk crêpe in the predominating tone of the print, black lace with chiffon, sheer tweed with silk crêpe, and navy blue georgette crêpe are interesting suggestions for this design.

Today's Children Should Celebrate

Marion Meyer Drew's weekly articles are presented solely for the entertainment of readers. Separate answers to individual questions cannot be given.

By Marion Meyer Drew.

THE last three days of this month are strangely contradictory to own for birthday anniversaries in 1928—Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday of this week all offer to their children strong aspects for wealth and public prominence, and then with the other hand hold up indications of social deceptions, losses, or illness, depending largely upon what time of day one happened to be born.

I will go on record, however, as saying that Sunday of this week cannot help being counted as a wonderful day upon which to celebrate, if one will determine to count those advantages and squelch those obstacles with all his courage and optimism throughout the course of the ensuing year. To women particularly does this hold out promise of possibilities; their moon's aspects are unusually powerful and will mark their progress during the months of the last part of 1928 and the first part of 1929, depending upon their hour of birth as to the exact time that this planetary vibration stirs them.

Astrology does not teach that human beings are entirely dependent upon "the stars" for all their actions, and no one is more mistaken than he who believes that the astrologer relies upon some mysterious force to show him the ins and outs of every deed. What the astrologer labors so strenuously to impart to others is his knowledge that mankind is able to see the path ahead through the use of a perfectly natural law of power—just as natural as the use of electricity or radio-activity — and thus enlightened to make his own decisions as to present or future actions with a little more wisdom than he might have used in the past. If anything, it emphasizes the strength of judgment, perception, and determination, and if the first result of horoscopy is a trifle more seriousness and precaution devoted to the minor matters of life, who is there to insist that this is a mistake? Certainly not these July 29th, 30th, and 31st people.

Their lives through the coming twelve months will be far more constructive and progressive if they deny the impulses to change, to waver in affections, and to accept political or public contacts of any kind. Old friends and old plans will be the more profitable and the more practical; these people must not use their favorite method of judging by the surface this time but must delve into the earth—in both real and symbolic cases.

The 1st of August will bring an eventful year for its sons and daughters. The coming period will be marked off by travel, by law or governmental activities, by difficulties with the women relatives; and by troubles with health if that subject is allowed to become a source of discomfort. Our health is subject to our observance of the rules of right living, and if we force our bodies to submit to the standards of hygiene we will never be so very far from the limits of ideal vigor, and even the effects of accident or violence will be less difficult to control. This would be well for the 1st of August people to remember along about the end of the month or the first half of September. The first two months of 1929 will be very lively, however.

Thursday will be a birth date introducing a rather calm and uneventful year. These people should make up their minds that 1928-1929 is a time for study, reflection, mental progress, and the preparation of their resources for other and more stirring responsibilities. One of the best times immediately ahead should be the period around the middle of the following month, but it is a time for mental profit rather than material riches alone.

Friday and Saturday are birthdays which begin years more memorable for older people than for the younger generation, while those connected with any business dealing with the sick or with heavy materials or dark, ponderous objects should find this a rather profitable year in their work. The month of February should prove highly eventful.

MY GREATEST THRILL

Engrossed in a Story.

During my high school days I read mystery stories night after night, and on one of these occasions I had a thrill I never shall forget. It was long after midnight on a cold winter night. I sat near our wood stove, with my feet up on it, and my chair tipped back on its two hind legs.

I was in a most thrilling part of a story, in which a mysterious hand with a pistol in it was appearing in a window and pointing toward the hero whom I admired very much. Many mysterious things were happening at the moment, but this one was a sort of a climax—and just as the gun was set for the shot that would kill my hero, a chunk of wood in the stove fell against the side with a bang that sent me sailing backward and my book flying in the air. Never to Be Forgotten.

On our way to Catalina Island, Cal., on the boat, while vacationing a few years ago, we noticed the posters inviting us to make the return trip on the hydroplane. The posters gloriously described the 17 minute trip, and as the boat takes two and one-half hours and one of the party was especially susceptible to sea sickness, we figured the trip on the hydroplane would relieve her of that inconvenience, as well as give all five of us a real thrill. However, we didn't bargain on such a real thrill as we did get.

It was just dusk when we went out to the plane in a small boat, the water being too rough to bring the plane to its customary landing place. After three or four terrific bumps on the water, the going was beautiful. The ocean appeared as smooth as a mill pond. Ominous masses of fog clouds in the west seemed to become less significant. The moon looked out occasionally from behind other clouds as if she envied us the trip. And then!

The pilot knew we were a hayseed bunch from the middle west, four of us never having seen the ocean. Here was a chance to give a real thrill. And so he swooped us down near the water and then up again, roller coaster style. We gave squeals of delight or excitement, as the case might be. Fine! Another swoop! When putt, putt, putt, even an amateur could tell there was something wrong with the engine. We gradually neared the water, and this time we actually did hit it with a bang guaranteed to knock your false teeth out; I thought the ocean water was soft!

After examination, the pilot reported a broken rocker arm, and added we would have to stay there all night, or until some one picked us up. Protesting minds inquired if we could not "taxi" in on top of the water. We could, if the gas lasted that long. Didn't have much gas. So we started.

We were like the frog who tried to get out of the well—sliding back one jump for every two we went forward. The overheated engine sometimes shot out flames a foot and a half long. Waves constantly "shipped" over us. Three times one of the party had to go out on the very tip of the wing to steady the plane while the engine cooled, and idled. Any minute might find us out of gas, free to be buffeted by relentless waves.

We felt like shouting Hallelujah, indeed, when we at last sighted the light house at San Pedro harbor. And when some time later we crept into the harbor, we met a speed boat on its way out to look for us. M. M. H.

A Risky Crossing.

One of the greatest thrills came to me recently while visiting in the river cities. A friend suggested crossing a trestle bridge over the Mississippi leading to an island on the other side. This bridge was built just for street car purposes during the summer months and not for foot passengers nor for autos. It is made of logs a foot wide and a foot apart—no railing. It was a windy day and the water seethed and roared and rushed underneath.

I walked at a snail's pace, not daring to stop for fear the wind would blow me into the water, nor to look up and admire the glorious scenery for fear my foot would slip and I would go down into the black mass.

I can truly say my heart was in my mouth and never was any one so glad to touch terra firma as I when I finally reached the other side. Needless to say, we came back on the street car. M. E. B.

My Most Embarrassing Moment

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moment, The Tribune, Chicago. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

Pig's Feet on the Street.

I am an employé of one of the main divisions of the stockyards and am in the habit of bringing home various foods at different times. On this particular day dad had ordered me to bring home a jar of pickled pigs' feet.

It was raining and the cars were terribly crowded, and I was pushed and trampled on. On alighting from the car, instead of walking to the curb, as I usually do, I slid, and with me slid my jar of pickled pigs' feet.

We both were stopped by the obstructing curbstone. I arose whole, but, alas! not so did my jar of pigs' feet. The jar crashed to crystals and pigs' feet bedecked the rainy street and sidewalk. Embarrassing moments! This has been an embarrassing month, for my fellow employés have never forgotten it. M. C. C. R.

A Forgotten Invitation.

I invited my neighbor and her mother in for tea for an approaching Sunday. In the meantime I was busy and forgot all about it. Besides, I am well over 70 years and am sometimes very forgetful.

At about five o'clock that Sunday, they came over, but I still didn't remember having invited them. I thought they acted queerly and I wondered why they came at such a time—especially on a day when I had nothing in the house to give to company and couldn't ask them to stay for tea!

I didn't ask them to remove their wraps and our conversation seemed somewhat strained—and finally—all of a sudden—I remembered having invited them. I jumped up, helped them remove their coats, excused myself and dashed into the kitchen.

In little more than an hour we all sat down to as nice a meal as any one ever had—fried chicken—one bought from my next door neighbor at a moment's notice, and hot angel food cake made of eggs begged from the same neighbor at a serious moment!

I've never told them that I had forgotten, but I've often wondered if they didn't notice my embarrassment when I suddenly remembered having invited them. T. C. H.

Posing.

One day our office manager said she was going downtown to do some shopping and wouldn't be back for perhaps several hours.

After she had been gone for about twenty minutes, and thinking the road perfectly clear for a few minutes of stalling, one of the girls suggested that we play the game "statue" as we did when we were kids. Of course, I took her up on the suggestion and she started to twirl me and I was just in the midst of posing with a vase of flowers in my hand when in comes the office manager.

That, to say the least, was my most embarrassing moment.

Practical and Fancy Needlework

Lingerie Takes to Laces and Ribbons as It Breaks Away from Tailored Lines

LACES and ribbons are much used on lingerie today, which is breaking away from the severe tailored garments that have been popular. Of course, each garment must be perfectly cut and fitted, and there is never any unnecessary fullness anywhere. Beautiful crêpes de chine, washable satins, georgette, and the sheer white cambrics and handkerchief linen are among the favored materials, and the laces used are in most cases guided by the amount you wish to spend on them. Alençon, point de Paris and Valenciennes are among those well liked.

Making lingerie is fascinating work, and the more of it that is done by hand the lovelier the finished garment. Rolled hems, tucks and plaits, hemstitching and felled seams are all hand done and, of course, all laces are set in by hand. This isn't difficult, but it should be particular work, carefully and beautifully done.

The material to which lace is to be applied must first be made perfectly smooth. Then lay it on something flat and pin the medallion or whatever else you may be using in position—using fine, small pins. Baste down all edges and go slowly enough to avoid fullness—this is the next step. Then with a fine needle and thread hem the lace down all around, working from the right side. Take the bastings out and cut the material away underneath, leaving one eighth of an inch margin everywhere. Working from the wrong side, hem the raw edge down to the lace in tiny stitches, so that every bit of raw edge is covered. This method has to be followed where the outline follows small, successive scallops, or any other irregular edge.

Where the lace edge has fewer small curves, the raw edge can be turned back, so that the edge of the insertion or lace on the right side is in the edge of the fold; then overhand in small, closely taken stitches taken directly over and through the insertion edge, and through the material also. In this overhanding the raw edge will be caught in and rolled by itself, and when straightened out the last will look as if it were woven in the cloth.

Lace insertion may be made to follow any sort of line by basting one edge down along the bottom or wider edge of the curve first. Then by pulling up a thread in the opposite edge of the insertion the fullness is adjusted to follow the desired line perfectly. The material is then cut away underneath, leaving an eighth inch margin on each side, and the raw edge is rolled back and hemmed down, or the material is creased back and the finishing done as described above.

Let Children Play as They Please

Toys Are More than Mere Objects to Youngsters—They Are Spurs to the Imagination and to Initiative

By Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans

I AM continually fascinated by coincidences in the study of children. Two or five or fifty mothers who have never met and probably never will meet, who are thousands of miles apart, in writing me play upon the same theme in the great symphony of childhood. Sometimes it is a small theme in a minor key. Sometimes it is a great fundamental motif in the recognition of which the mothers show rare intelligence or great spiritual understanding.

From far away comes this:

"Now won't you write some time how we mothers shall let our children play with their toys? Shall we try to get them to play with them as they were intended to be played with, or let them follow their own ideas?

"My 4 year old gets her pleasure in taking everything apart and reconstructing it nearer to her heart's desire. My aunt says I am encouraging in her a great destructiveness. But it seems to me she is developing initiative and a creative instinct in doing this, for she always makes something out of the pieces. And they really are her toys, after all.

"When I was small my mother bought me lovely dolls, but they had to be played with in a ladylike fashion, and I was not allowed to follow my dramatic instinct—which usually ended in tragedy.

"One glorious day my father bought me seven dolls with the injunction that I was to be allowed to do with them exactly as I wished, even if it meant smashing all in one day. They didn't go quite that fast, but I never enjoyed any toys as much as those and I have never forgotten what now seems to me my father's rare understanding."

More Than Mere Toys.

How clearly this episode of the dolls makes one realize the exact part that toys play in a child's life. They are not just objects of certain dimensions and color and texture in the eyes of a child. They are that, of course—but so much more. They are the thing around which his imagination plays. They are the stimulus that starts his imagination working. We grownups see their toys with the naked eye—the eye of the flesh. He sees them with the eye of a child's spirit.

"I had this borne in upon me once some time ago when in unpacking some old trunks that had not been opened for years I came upon two dolls of my childhood. I looked at them hard and searched again in the trunk, thinking to myself, "Can these be those beautiful beloved dolls of my little girl days?" I remembered they were bought at some personal sacrifice by my mother and were called Bébé Jumeau. They were even considered charming by adult opinion. But in my eyes there was a glory about them that no grown person could see and that no material doll could ever have intrinsically possessed.

Now as I looked at them I saw them: denuded of that glory—and I scarcely recognized them. To so great a degree do toys serve as racks for children to hang their dreams on.

He Knew What He Wanted.

Another mother, a thousand miles nearer than the first, tells me of her experience with her boy's making of marionettes. He had very definite ideas as to how they should be constructed.

While he worked on them she constantly made suggestions, being so interested that she couldn't keep her finger out of the pie. She had seen marionettes and she tried to tell him how his could be improved here and there. But she couldn't budge him an inch from his own plans.

At last his father said to her, "Let him alone! Let him alone! Let them be his creation, even if they are full of mistakes." And then she had a sort of mental illumination and did let him alone. She realized that the important thing was not for the boy to make a professional's marionette or an adult's marionette, but for him to express his own idea of a marionette, no matter how faulty and strange it might be.

This boy was creating something. He couldn't create from what lay inside his mother's mind. He could only create from what lay within his own.

Let It Be Theirs.

If we could only keep our hands off their creative impulses and the product of them! It is better for children's development to produce an elementary, a rough, an impractical object that is a part of their being than to produce a smooth finished looking piece of work that is half of some one else's idea. Doesn't this often show in the shine with which a child says, "I did it all myself"?

Before leaving the boy and the marionettes, it will probably amuse you to know—though it has no bearing on the principle involved—that his puppets turned out to be an excellent job. A woman who had just finished writing a book on her own marionettes saw the cruder creations of the boy and found that he had solved several mechanical problems in operating them that had escaped her.

Her Own Discovery.

And now as a last instance of the coincidence of experiences that people have with children is this one which comes from a place geographically between the other two, but which makes note of the identical situation that they do:

"My little niece was given a kind of building block set. Houses, bridges, towers, etc., are made from the pieces. She asked her father to help her build a house—then discovered that chairs could be made from the blocks and was quite pleased to think she had originated something. It did not strike her father that way and he tried to get her to quit the chair-making, but she would not.

"Finally he said, 'Well, if you won't do it the right way I won't help you. These things are for houses, not chairs—and you are not supposed to make chairs with them.'

"I am glad to say that my little niece did not do as her father said; but there was no unpleasantness on her part—only a quiet determination to keep on in her own way."

Each of the children in these three cases was fortunate in having a mother or an aunt or a father who had the perception to see the value of the qualities that were indicated by the way in which the children played. They realized that if damage occurs to a toy in the constructive use of it—paradoxical though that may sound—that that is nothing to lament. Those are the vicissitudes of legitimate play.

But, most important, they realized that play is the creative activity of a child's life. They perceived that with this creativeness are often linked initiative, determination, and imagination—invaluable qualities that we want to foster, not frustrate.

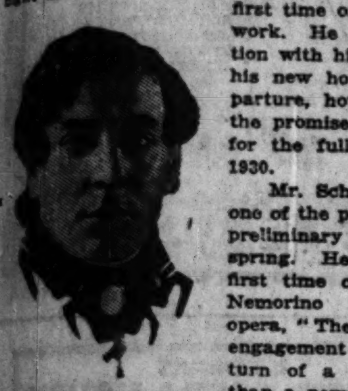
JULY 29, 1928.

Tito Schipa Will Join Opera Cast This Week

By Edward Moore.

SEVERAL items of news appear in the Ravinia schedule for the week, among them the presentation of an opera entirely new in this part of the country, the departure of Giovanni Martinelli, and the arrival of Tito Schipa.

Mr. Martinelli will make his last appearance Thursday night as Loris in "Fedora," which, by the way, will be the first time of the summer for that work. He is leaving for a vacation with his wife and children at his new home in Italy. His departure, however, is preluded by the promise that he will be back for the full seasons of 1929 and 1930.



TITO SCHIPA
Reappearing at Ravinia Saturday night.
[De Guelder Photo.]

Mr. Schipa's engagement was one of the points in Mr. Eckstein's preliminary prospectus of last spring. He will appear for the first time on Saturday night as Nemorino in Donizetti's light opera, "The Elixir of Love." His engagement classifies as the return of a favorite artist rather than a new engagement, since he was one of the Ravinia members in the 1923 and 1925 seasons.

He has just been making a tour of Europe which included both operatic and concert engagements, and in London, Paris, and various other important centers he has been scoring just the same sort of triumphs that he has been accustomed to making all over several different continents for seasons past. Before the summer is over he will appear in many of the rôles toward which the public rises up and shows approval.

Given for the First Time Here.

The new opera is "Marouf," and from all advance views and reports, it would seem destined to be an uncommonly agreeable addition to the repertoire. It is an amusing tale of the Arabian Nights, made into a libretto by Lucien Nepoty and with music by Henri Rabaud. It is bulletined for Wednesday night.

The composer was for several years a conductor at the Opéra and later at the Opéra Comique in Paris, and it was during his engagement at the latter theater that he wrote the score and gave the work its first hearing. This was in the spring of 1914. New York heard it in 1917 at the Metropolitan, at which performance Leon Rothier sang the part of the Sultan of Khaitan, his part for the coming Ravinia rendition.

Yvonne Gall is to appear as Princess Saamcheddine, a part which she learned under the personal direction of the composer and those who first brought the opera into being, and which she has sung many times at the Opéra-Comique, for the opera is a favorite in the opinions of the Parisians. Mario Chamlee is to appear as Marouf, a new part for him; Vittorio Trevisan is cast as the vizier, Julia Claussen at Fattumah, and there are other parts for Mr. Mojica, Mr. Cehanovsky, Mr. D'Angelo, and Mr. Paltrinieri. Ruth Page will lead the ballet, and Mr. Hasselmans will conduct.

A Comic Tale of a Cobbler.

Were it possible, this department would gladly use some space this morning in a foretaste of the music, for the score is a sprightly affair, with good tunes, oriental colorings, and stimulating rhythms. Unfortunately, telling about music is not the same thing as hearing it. On the other hand, it is possible to go into more detail regarding the story.

It is a comic tale of a Cairene cobbler married to an unamiable wife. She orders him to bring her a cake sweetened with honey; the pastry cook gives him one with cane sugar instead; in a customary rage she goes before the cadi and accuses him of having beaten her.

The cadi decrees 200 strokes on the back, and with a commendable desire to evade the sentence, he escapes, joins a company of sailors, and flees to Khaitan, a country described as being somewhere between China and Morocco. Here he is shipwrecked and washed up into the arms of a former friend who is a practical joker. He persuades Marouf to pose as a wealthy merchant who is awaiting the arrival of a rich caravan. The news of his supposed wealth reaches the ears of the sultan, who arranges a marriage with his daughter, Saamcheddine.

The two promptly fall in love, but the vizier is suspicious and tricks Marouf into confessing that he is not a merchant but merely a poor cobbler. Once again flight is advisable. The young couple run away, but while working in the fields, Marouf uncovers an iron ring with magic powers. When rubbed it produces the customary results. A djinn appears, and upon being ordered, calls into being the necessary caravan. The sultan comes along just in time to apologize for his unworthy suspicions, and all ends well, except, perhaps, for the first wife who is still waiting in Cairo for her cake sweetened with honey.

Concert of Italian Music Today.

Other Ravinia news is that the third national concert will be given this afternoon, with Italian music occupying the central position. The Chicago Symphony orchestra will play an Italian program under the direction of Eric De Lamarter, and Jacques Gordon, the violinist, will be the soloist. Dr. Antonio Ferme will be present. He is the royal counselor commissioner of Italy, and he has been delegated to speak by L. Zunnini, Italian royal consul general.

"Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" will be the operatic bill of this evening. In the first Edward Johnson will make his first appearance of the season as Canio, with Queena Mario as Nedda, Giuseppe Danise as Tonio, and George Cehanovsky as Silvio. "Cavalleria Rusticana"—the two are in reverse order from the customary—will be sung by Elisabeth Rothberg as Santuzza, Gladys Swarthout as Lola, Armand Tokatyan at Turiddu, and Desiré Defrere as Alfio. Mr. Papi will conduct both.

Polish day will be celebrated a week from this afternoon. Here the orchestra will function in the music of Poland, Michel Wilkomirski, violinist, will be the soloist, and the Filharmonia Singing society directed by B. Rybowiak and the Filareci Singing society directed by A. M. Hess will sing. The evening performance will be "Carmen," with Ina Bourskaya in the name part.

Germans Will Give "The Ring."

Speaking of opera, George Blumenthal is distributing information about the arrival of the German Opera company, prepared to give Wagner's "Der Ring des Nibelungen" without cuts, just as it is given at Baireuth or in such other places as are disposed to take their music in large quantities. New York will be the first place and the middle of January the time, with Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Louis, and the Pacific coast as other points on the itinerary.

Nothing has been disclosed about the artists, except that there will be double casts for the operas, and that Eduard Mörike, at present conductor of the Dresden Philharmonic orchestra, will be the conductor. The time schedule for the performances will be that "Das Rheingold" will begin at 8, "Die Walküre" and "Siegfried" at 6, and "Die Götterdämmerung" at 4, with an intermission of an hour after the first act of each except the first which has no intermissions.

This does not sound altogether encouraging, since American theaters, as a rule, are not equipped with the opportunities for rest and solace between acts such as occur at Baireuth. A certain amount of relief is offered, however, by the further statement that such cities as desire to absorb their Wagner in the abbreviated versions may have them in

"THE COP."

Produced by De Mille Pictures.
Directed by Donald Crisp.
Presented at the State-Lake theater.

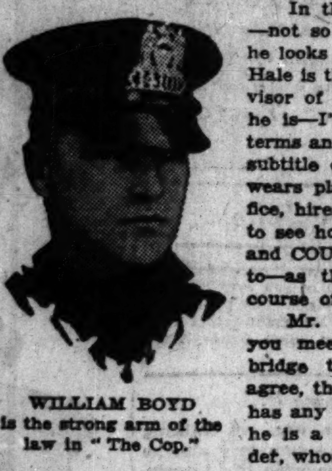
THE CAST.

Pete Smith	William Boyd
Mather	Alan Hale
Mary Monks	Jacqueline Logan
Scarface Marcas	Robert Armstrong
Officer Coughlin	Tom Kennedy
Louie	Louis Natheaux
Lord Courtney	Phil Sleeman

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

That engaging combination, William Boyd and Alan Hale, who made "Skyscraper" such a tall success (punk pun), is again yours for the price of a ticket in "The Cop." And "The Cop," I should say, is apt to take in quite as much money as "Skyscraper."



WILLIAM BOYD
is the strong arm of the law in "The Cop."

In this piece young Mr. Boyd—not so young, they tell me, but he looks that way—is the cop. Mr. Hale is the man higher up. Supervisor of police—or something like, he is—I'm a little hazy on police terms and have forgotten what the subtitle called him. ANYhow, he wears plain clothes, sits in an office, hires Mr. Boyd, scouts around to see how well he mans his beat, and COULD fire him if he wanted to—as the story reveals in its course of unreeling.

Mr. Boyd is not a cop when you meet him. He is a simple bridge tender—simpler, you will agree, than any man in public life has any right to be. (Pome.) There he is a simple, lonely bridge tender, whose only visitor, practically, is huge Officer Coughlin, who whistles for crossings somewhere in the neighborhood and drops in of a moment now and then to leave some cigars from the hatfuls he is daily presented with by motorists, who desire to stand high in the favor of the law and court a tolerance they fear may some day be needed.

Pete Plays the Good Samaritan.

But one night Pete, the bridgetender, has another visitor. A sinister gentleman, bleeding at the shoulder. He offers no explanations, but Pete asks for none. Just fixes the dark, silent sonofagun up from his little emergency kit; gives him food; hides him from Coughlin, and—awakes one day to find him gone, having left this note behind him:

"Chump: Good-by, and I have taken your overcoat, and the twenty-five dollars in the table drawer. Good-by, Sucker——"

"Coughlin," says Pete, when his friend appears, "how does a guy get to be a cop?"

Instructions are forthcoming, and behold sweet William—Pete—in uniform, being shown all the unpretty pictures in the Rogues' Gallery by Mr. Hale—Mather—whose shrewd eye detects the gulp in the throat and the rising flush on the cheeks of his new patrolman when comes into sight, side and front views of a mug that is none other than the scarred visitor of the gentleman who had bled so freely, in more ways than one, at the bridge.

"Know that guy?" inquires Mather.

"No, sir," lies Pete—not so well—"Who is he?"

He is, it seems, Scarface Marcas, who runs a haberdashery shop that is, in reality, anything BUT a haberdashery shop. It is, in other words, a "racket."

They Meet Again.

Well, Pete and Scarface meet again. I wouldn't tell you why, how, or when, but—just to tickle your interest—be informed that in Scarface's hocus pocus shop works a girl named Mary Monks. Love interest? Yes, ma'am. Yes, sir!

There's some pretty good gang stuff in "The Cop" and a smashing encounter between the police and veterans of the underworld, that has, I should say, knowing no different, the elements of naturalness about it.

The entire story is told with directness and honesty and the cast is a dandy.

SO—if you value this correspondent's not at all humble but often despised opinion, jot down "The Cop" as a cinema worth seeing. (No charge for the extra c's.)

Bits aBOUTem.

PAULINE STARKE, whom we haven't seen for a long, long time—at least I haven't seen her for a long, long time—have you?—is coming back to us in a Technicolor feature called "THE THRALL OF LEIF THE LUCKY"—a story of Viking days of a thousand years ago. House Peters will play the title rôle. Included in the cast will be Anders Randolf, Roy Stewart, and Claire McDowell. Miss McDowell plays the only other feminine rôle in the film.

TALKING SEQUENCES will be an important feature of Gloria Swanson's next picture for United Artists. The picture is tentatively titled "The Swamp."

* *

ALMA RUBENS, whom we like so well and see so seldom, is said to have the finest rôle of her career in "The Devil's Mask," John Gilbert's picture that is now in the making.

REMEMBER BEN WILSON? He's directing some features and novelties at the Chadwick studios.

LOUISE FAZENDA has completed her contract as a Warner Brothers star and is now free-lancing.

TOM MIX and TONY are busily working on "Son of the Golden West" for F. B. O. In this the small boy's idol is seen as a pony express rider of the sixties.

IT IS REPORTED that Maria Jeritza, Metropolitan star, has signed with an American producer to sing in a sound picture. This is the second offer made her. The first is reported to have guaranteed her $10,000 a week.

* *

WHILE "THE DIVINE LADY," Corinne Griffith's new picture, was in the making Jean McNaughton, script girl for the director, Frank Lloyd, had the novel experience of finding herself a lone woman on a ship with twelve hundred men. The crew made her queen and mascot of the ship.

* *

PHOTOPLAY overheard this conversation recently in a studio:

"What's the verdict on the picture?"

"Well, the producers don't know whether to shelve it or release it as an epic."

* *

THE "TALKIES" continue to talk money. Big picture men say that sound pictures are putting the silent ones in the shade—no matter what players or directors the latter may have. Says Variety: "While the talkies seem likely to cloud the value of picture names temporarily through the novelty of the new type of production, a new crop of picture names is expected eventually to spring up. These new names may be people with speaking voices, with established, or newly discovered stage and picture talent."

See you tomorrow!

Hatred of Women as an Economic Influence

By Clifford Raymond.

A BRITISH feminist, Rebecca West, wrote in an article recently that sex antagonism explains the difference in wages between men and women in industry. Miss West was discussing G. B. Shaw's book on socialism. Shaw said the labor market was infested with subsidized wives and daughters willing to work for pocket money on which no independent woman or widow could exist. One trade lived by sweating another.

A laborer has a family of girls. He gets thirty shillings a week and the family just manages to subsist. It can live from hand to mouth if the mouth does not require much. The father works in a brewery. The girls go to work for five shillings a week in a match factory. Each additional five shillings a week means more to the brewery worker's family than five hundred pounds additional would mean to a millionaire. An additional fifteen shillings, which three girls can earn, give the family comforts and keep them all fat. The match industry is sweating the brewery. Whatever industry pays the father is sweated by whatever trade employs the girls, and the girls make a standard of starvation wages for the independent woman. What industry would pay sufficient wages to a woman who must earn her whole living when these girls living at home can be hired?

Miss West, although professing her respect for Mr. Shaw, says this is pure balderdash, but need not be charged to him because he did not originate it. Miss West, when she has discussed several reasons governing the female wage scale, finds the chief and controlling one in this—"that men underpaid women simply because they hated them"; the natural man loves the women attached to him by ties of affection and hates all other women.

That will take a lot of proving. The case of woman in industry does not seem to present any particular departure from any rules applied generally to the labor factor. A new element breaks into industry, frequently if not always, on disadvantageous terms to itself. Otherwise it would not get in.

When southern Negro labor gets into northern coal fields it is upon conditions which the northern white worker will not accept. If they had been acceptable to the whites the blacks would not have been brought up from the south. They are acceptable to the blacks because they represent something better than what could be found at home.

New elements seeking to enter industry make their way in because at first they do accept and industry would not consider them unless they did. That is the price they pay, but the process is not fixed. As soon as a foothold has been established dissatisfaction begins, an expectable, natural thing. The limited demands on life which make a low labor market will not persist in any such country as the United States.

In a fashion women going into industry encountered about what Chinese would if they could be employed in railroad maintenance of way without organized labor protection. The only reason for letting them in at all was to get them at a lower wage.

Most employers want to base their labor factor on the family. It costs more, but it also costs less. An industry with bunk houses or barracks is shaky. One with homes and families is solid. The workman with a home, a wife and children has given hostages, unquestionably, but he also has asserted claims which cannot be denied and few great industries try to deny them.

Women in industry are not regarded as a part of this family scheme. They are supposed to be working for the support of themselves alone, a general conclusion which contains many specific injustices. Many women, in fact, work to support large families, and must do so at what they can get.

But what justifies a statement that so personal an emotion as hatred controls an economic condition? It has been a continental European and a British idea that a woman is not entitled to as many prerogatives as a man and need not expect to get them. Her comfort will not be as much considered. Her dignity is not as great. Her responsibilities are of inferior order and she is subject to command. Some of her legal privileges and exemptions are based on a theory of incompetence which hold her husband and not her responsible for her acts.

All that may indicate an unflattering opinion of women, but it does not postulate hatred. One of the expectancies of Europe has been war, and each country, not entertaining any illusions on that subject, has emphasized the predominance of the male. It has not lived by doctrines of sex equality. From cannon fodder to high command the man has been recognized as the distinctly superior sex, entitled to everything his superiority would get him. That was training for him to step out with squared shoulders, a well expanded chest and the gait of a fighting animal.

Assumptions or even realities of superiority might produce inconsiderate behavior, selfishness, rudeness and bad manners, but again hatred would be another thing. Even the British head of a family still thinks considerable of himself as such, probably not as much as a Prussian junker head of family, but still enough. It has been assumed that the American woman had broken down this masculine preeminence and had taken that position over herself.

That the American man was woman ruled has been a common observation of people who have contemplated and compared various societies. Other observers, thinking they are getting a more profound view of the phenomenon, are of the opinion that the American woman is losing power as a woman because of the American man's preoccupation with business or sport and his indifference to emotional interests; opposite conclusions, one that the man's absorptions have given woman commanding place, the other that these absorptions have deprived American women of their real influence over men. It may be either and it may be neither.

One circumstance of life in America very well may have had a determining feature in the social attitude of the sexes here. It came from the pioneer woman who remains symbolic in the national consciousness.

On the frontier the woman and the man were companions in hardship and achievement. Their dangers were the same, and the work, while it made some distinctions in favor of the woman, did not make many. The young married couple who went from the more settled community to find a home and raise a family in the heart of the woods, on the prairie or on the plains had a companionship in facing hard times, hard work, trouble, jeopardy, and although they probably were unemotional and unimaginative about it.

This would be less likely to happen in a stabilized society even if, as with the peasantry of Europe, there is an equality of hard work. It need not be insisted upon that the hard work of rural Europe made the woman a drudge, but it is no more apparent that it made her a companion facing common dangers and hardships, expected and unexpected.

It was this facing the unknown together which seems to have had a particular effect upon the traditions of American men and women. The great masses of American population now know it only as a thing of the past, but it is nevertheless in the American consciousness and it may not be stretching a point to say that if there is a marked peculiarity in the relations of men and women in American society it is derived from the frontier.

It is probable that the women of the old Germanic tribes were conscious of a fuller participation in life on terms of equality with their men than the women of present day Germany have, and for much this same reason—of equal exposure to danger, to the consequences of economic pressure of shifting homes, of aggression and defense.

When woman went into industries she created a new frontier for herself. She did, in a way, break down that community of enterprise and hazard which frontier men and women shared, but that competition has not produced sex antagonisms which are worth much here, at least as social or economic motives.

Actors Are Wrought Up Over Talking Movies

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—This new talking movie you hear so much about—is it a menace as well as a miracle? Is it going to put the legitimate theater right out of business? Or isn't it? That's what the actor would like to know.

You can imagine what the excitement is around the sarsaparilla bar at the Lambs' club. Perhaps you can also picture the more dignified but equally serious discussions in the sub-basement of the Players', where playwrights and authors frequently foregather.

JESSIE BONSTELLE
gives Detroiters good drama at moderate cost.
[Mishkin Photo.]

The talking movies are coming in, there is no doubt about that, and most of the doctors believe that with their advent the talking actor again will come in, too.

How else can the talking movie ever hope to be a success, argues he. Did you ever hear one of these movie queens talk? Or a movie hero? Even when the voice is pleasant in pitch—my dear, the diction! It's terrible! And the reading! The expression! You can't teach them expression by bawling at them from alongside a camera. No, sir.

No tuppenny autocrat of the megaphone with his cap turned hindside to fore can build a picture, listen to dialogue, develop drama and get anything from the combination, the actor will tell you. Particularly the actor who has not been working regularly the last eight or ten years.

Yes, sir, the talkies are going to bring the actor back to his old status. Even if they have to use him as a dummy for voice and reading, while Harold Highcolor goes through the lip motions, the actor figures that the talking movies are bound to recreate an interest in the speaking stage.

"That's what playgoing folks really want, if they can get it at a price," insists the actor, his faith born of the substance of things hoped for.

May Open New Lucrative Fields.

"Look at the new interest in stock companies. More stock companies this year than ever before. Doesn't that prove something?" It may. It proves at least that the spoken drama cannot be completely smothered by anything so far suggested in the way of mechanical substitutes.

Seems reasonable, too, that if the motion picture drama, with all the aids and all the improvements that have been brought to it the last dozen years; with movie cathedrals and palaces to show it in at a price the legitimate theater cannot meet; with the best writing brains of the country providing its material or trying to, and the best of native beauty and talent clamoring for a chance to pose, act, and perform miracles in its service—if all these things have met with no more complete success as a smothering competition than they have, it is not likely a canned drama that shall add to its other irritations that of emitting strange sounds shall do more.

Public Demands Human Contacts.

If the movies, as they stand, have been responsible for the doubling of the number of resident stock companies the last six or seven years, and the creation of an almost uncountable number of Little theaters the country across, I think the actor is justified in arguing that there is proof that the human contacts of the theater, the capable performance of legitimate drama by legitimate actors, still have a market and will have a market so long as humans are born human and the exhibitionist urge is what it is.

The Jessie Bonstelle civic theater movement in Detroit is concrete evidence of a crystallizing interest in a spoken drama—at prices within the reach of an average family budget—that shall maintain standards of taste in the selection of plays that can be openly approved by the intelligent citizen.

Miss Bonstelle has interested enough drama lovers in Detroit to sell them her plan to give the city the best plays at moderate cost and to guarantee the enterprise against loss. To secure the choice of Broadway productions and to effect an exchange of guest stars are among her elaborate and perfectly feasible plans.

No Longer an Experiment.

The civic stock company movement is certain to spread. The Theater Guild has proved in New York that, with intelligent direction, it can be made not only to bring great satisfaction to play followers but to pay handsome profits as well.

There is, however, one developing problem that will take a bit of settling, and that is the problem of the source of supply. Practically all plays written in America are written with an eye to their production in New York. The standards of taste in New York are different from the standards of taste in any other American city.

When plays of an extreme boldness in dialogue or situation are produced and accepted in New York, it follows naturally that audiences in other cities will have to become accustomed to them slowly, just as the women of other cities are slow to adopt New York styles in short skirts and rolled stockings. Or that men hesitate to wear bell bottomed trousers in Syracuse or St. Louis merely because they are the fashion on Fifth avenue. It is an independence that usually is short lived, but it does exist.

Wagner Admits He Was Spanked.

For example, Charles Wagner, an adventuresome free lance among the producers, had a scheme this season to bring the newest in New York plays to three stock company centers.

ENGLISH WITHOUT A DON'T

So As

By Wallace Rice.

NOTHING is more meddlesome than the pedagogical mind obeying its instinct to "Listen to what little Willie is saying and tell him to say it differently." This is evident in those "guides to correct English" and the like, which so often run counter to the higher authorities—and sometimes counter to themselves, as in the following from such a recent work:

"'So as,' conjunction, colloquial and especially characteristic of children's speech, in the sense 'in order,' as in 'We threw out the bags so as to have more room in the boat,' for 'We threw out the bags in order,' etc., or better 'To have more room in the boat, we threw out the bags,' or simply 'We threw out the bags to have more room.'

"The use of 'so as' is not grammatically incorrect, nor is it unusual to find the expression in literary style. The point is that one should guard against using the construction too frequently or when it is not necessary."

If the construction "is not grammatically incorrect," if it is not "unusual in literary style," what more should any sensible person ask for? Here a schoolmaster takes an expression correct by the highest linguistic standards, ponders it and rewrites it into language that no children and few grown people can be expected to command, contradicts his own inference that it is [merely] colloquial and childish, and ends with the impotent conclusion that it should not be used "too frequently" or "when it is not necessary," injunctions equally applicable to every imaginable locution in ours or any other language.

Listen to what little Willie is saying, by all means. He may be saying it right, even to the point where teachers and elders can learn naturalness from him.

More Comic Chaps of the Years That Were

By Figaro McGee.

THAT Frank Daniels is dead is, I find, a matter of widespread belief among the numerous theater-goers who counted him high in the list of funny-men. A recent letter to the Drama-Desk of THE TRIBUNE spoke of him as the late Frank Daniels; and the attempt, in a foot-note by the Editor, to set the letter-writer right in the matter was followed by twenty or more letters insisting that the famous little comedian was dead, indeed. The truth is that, finding popular interest in him abating, Daniels quietly eased himself into private life. A thrifty lad from the day he first took down payment for performing, he had saved and invested and planned well, and no longer needed the stage as a source of revenue. Daniels called it a career as long ago as the Autumn of 1911, when he was one of the principals in a futile attempt by Weber and Fields, backed by the Messrs. Shubert, to revive the glories of their famous company of burlesquers. When the venture blew up, Daniels quit for good. If ever the American stage has owned a personality-actor of genuine comicality, the name was Frank Daniels! He went into starhood via Hoyt's "A Rag Baby," a thin little satire on popular interest in the more robust sports—or, rather, in their practitioners. His characterization of Old Sport in that song-farce was something never to be forgotten; and he made the piece last him three years. He was even more successful and far, far funnier in another song-farce, "Little Puck," based on material in two of F. Anstey's comic tales about the supernatural—"Vice-Versa" and "A Fallen Idol." That conveyance was popular for all of six years: he took billing at the time as The Funniest Man on Earth; and the public didn't dispute the description, despite its incontinence.

FRANK DANIELS

Some of His Successes.

Daniels then went back to operetta, in which he had served an apprenticeship; and, touring under the late Kirke La Shelle (at one time a critic of plays in Chicago), he appeared in three operettas for which Victor Herbert, then in his brightest vein as a writer of melody, furnished the music: they were "The Wizard of the Nile," "The Idol's Eye," and "The Ameer." The first was the best of the three; but Daniels was immensely funny in all of them. Another piece in which he was memorably laughable was "The Office-Boy." His last appearance in Chicago was in 1910 in a dull show named "The Belle of Brittany," in what was then the Lyric Theater, and is now the Great Northern.

Only Tony Pastor, of Daniels' contemporaries, could match the funny little fellow with the big mouth in the art of putting across a comic song; and Daniels was in luck in getting good ones for his use. I am ready to lay even money that there are not fewer than ten thousand Chicagoans who can quote a rime or two from the ditty about Angela, the Human Fly, from "The Wizard of Os"; from the sequel-song, "The Tattooed Man," in "The Idol's Eye"; and from "I'm on the Water-Wagon Now," in "The Office-Boy."

James T. Powers.

Like Daniels, Powers, too, was a thrifty fellow, and able to take his exit-cue without worrying too much about the landlord and the grocer. Unlike Daniels, Powers has promptings and longings and, occasionally, offers to resume; but I doubt that he would find today a ready market as a star: he belonged, it seems to me, to his especial era. He had notable popularity for eight or ten seasons as an out-and-out star in pieces written to-order in the vein and the scheme of what were for some reason called "farce-comedies"—a locution of classification credited to Hoyt, and as absurd a label as was—and is—"comedy-drama," "musical comedy," and "vaudeville." Later, Powers held his own in the pay-roll as a cut-up in operetta and in song-plays like "The Geisha" and "San-Toy."

If you saw him in "Havana," nineteen or twenty years ago, you saw Jimmy Powers in his gamut. He was lean, dry, spry, shrill, pouncing, and staccato in his comic method, and mighty effective when his character was involved in a genuine "situation." Again to refer you to an example, there was his most recent rôle in Chicago—that of Bob Acres in Mrs. Fiske's revival of "The Rivals." Say what you will as to his lack of the requisite style and flair for Regency comedy, he was funny in the rôle—far, far funnier than Joseph Jefferson had ever been, in the belief of this humble historian; and I doubt that any other actor in the annals of Sheridan's farce had been funnier than Powers in the respective scenes where Acres sent off the challenge and where he prepares for the duel with Jack Absolute. Jefferson, Robson, Goodman, Russell: none of them as Acres touched Powers in those scenes.

A Good Actor on Occasion.

Although Powers had the reputation of one who would do anything to get a laugh—spoil a scene or kill another player's line—I have for years entertained a great deal of respect for him as an actor. When I was a gallery-boy, I saw him as Jack Point in Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Yeomen of the Guard"; and, although he could not sing Sullivan's music, he could and did speak Gilbert's lines with meaning and effect, and caught and conveyed the sense of pathos that underlies the rôle of the lovelorn jester. And Powers was in his day an exquisite and graceful dancer—something that could not properly be said of more than two or three of his contemporaries among the comic fellows of the American stage.

Doubtless, there are Chicagoans who will react to the mention of Powers in such long-ago things as "Dreams; or, Fun in a Photograph-Gallery," "A Bunch of Keys," and "A Tin Soldier." He was a comedian of the New-York Casino in "The Marquis," "Madelon," "The Drum-Major," "Nadjy," and "Erminie"; he was cast as Cadeaux in the last-named in the hope that he would make the public forget Francis Wilson in the rôle. (The public didn't.) Easier to recall, doubtless, are "A Straight Tip" and "A Mad Bargain," in both of which he had the likable Peter F. Dailey in his support. Then, strange to relate, he was in the first of James M. Barrie's plays to be given in the United States—"Walker—London." The piece was too Cockney for this country, regardless of the actors; and Jimmy wasn't too good as the runaway barber—a rôle that had been played hundreds of times to the great delight of London by the famous John Toole.

Easier still it is to evoke memories of Powers with mention of "A Runaway Girl," "The Geisha," "San-Toy," "The Messenger Boy," and "Havana." There were other pieces, although not all of them may have been given in Chicago. One was "A Princess of Kensington"; and he was capital in that as a lugubrious sailor—a rôle he actually wrote into the "classy" English libretto through the simple process of combining two minor rôles.

Powers was a good clown; and he was a good actor, also. There is no reason why I shouldn't add that he was one of the self-respecting somebodies of the stage in my day.

New National Anthem Sought.

It is time for the composers to sharpen up their pencils again, for a new competition has just been made public. This time it is for a new national anthem for the United States. Mrs. Florence Brooks-Aten of New York is offering the sum of $6,000, to be distributed in lots of $3,000 for the first prize, $1,000 for the second prize, ten more prizes of $100 each, and still another ten of $100 each in a preliminary contest for words only.

The purpose is optimistic and untampered by any belief in the historic fact that people generally have been in the habit of choosing their own national anthems and refusing to absorb or to learn what was prescribed for them, no matter how great the prize to the composer. For a minor example of this principle, one needs only to observe the late war and remember the somewhat striking differences in what the song leaders tried to make the boys sing and what they actually sang when they got around to singing.

At any rate, if you are interested, Lambert Murphy is the chairman of the board of judges, Reginald Werrenrath and Dr. Sigmund Spaeth are other members of the board, two others are yet to be selected, and you can send your manuscripts to the National Anthem Competition headquarters, 342 Madison avenue, New York.

Here and There in Music.

Wherein the editors of the musical weeklies grow disrespectful toward music, or rather, more pointedly, musicians. The Musical Courier prints this:

"In spite of every effort to keep it a profound secret, a tremendous piece of news has leaked out about the Chicago Civic opera. The item is to the effect that one of the sopranos engaged by the C. C. O. for next season is no less a person than—Mary Garden."

And in gay counterpoint Musical America has this:

"' . . . meet me at the Café de la Paix.' We thought the old place was a bit passé but Kansas City has rejuvenated the W. K. stand. Marion Talley, her mama, and little Sister Florence have breakfast at the Café de la Paix every morning . . . Marion has a new makeup . . . la vie Parisienne . . . very pale face, highly roughed lips, hair combed straight back, vampish ear rings . . . Kansas City papers please copy."

The North Shore Concert ensemble, Walter N. Pilgrim, director-pianist; Leon Miller and Palmer Myron, violinists, and George Laurer, cellist, will give a program at the Hotel Windermere West this evening.

The Juilliard foundation announces that it has selected for publication a suite for orchestra composed by Arthur Shepherd, and will coöperate with the Shubert Centennial committee in publishing Louis Gruenberg's "The Enchanted Isle." This will be the first composition to be published by the Juilliard foundation under a plan to publish annually one or more orchestral scores by American composers. In so doing it joins with the Society for the Publication of American Music and the Eastman foundation, both of which are already engaged in bringing out American scores.

Beginning today, Giovanni Panebasser, Chicagoan, will sing the part of the Prince Caliph in Puccini's "Turandot," in the Roman amphitheater at Verona, Italy. An opera season is given every summer in this enclosure, with a stage erected in the arena where wild beasts used to devour Christians and gladiators used to strive with sword and spear to put an end to one another's earthly careers. Nowadays it is turned over to the mimic deaths of opera and to music, instead of groans and screams. Zenatello, who used to be a tenor in the Chicago Opera, is the impresario of the present season.

THE WEEK AT RAVINIA

Tuesday—"Il Trovatore," with Rethberg, Julia Claussen, Giovanni Martinelli, Mario Basiola; conductor, Papi.

Wednesday—"Marouf" [first time], with Gall, Claussen, Mario Chamlee, Leon Rothier, Vittorio Trevisan; Ruth Page and ballet; conductor, Hasselmans.

Thursday afternoon—Chicago symphony orchestra, children's program; conductor, DeLamarter; followed by "A Masque of an Old Manchurian Tale," by the Academy of Dramatic Education.

Thursday night—"Fedora," with Florence Easton, Margery Maxwell, Philine Falco, Martinelli, Basiola, and Rothier; conductor, Papi.

Friday—"Andrea Chenier," with Rethberg, Swarthout, Bourskaya, Johnson, Basiola, and others; conductor, Papi.

IN A PLAY DUE IN SEPTEMBER

BASIL RATHBONE and MISS MARY NASH

THEY'RE pictured in the second act of "The Command to Love," a New-York success of last season that is among the plays promised for early-September opening in Chicago: it will be in the Studebaker. . . . Mr. Rathbone was last here in 1924 in "The Swan." Miss Nash was last here late in 1925 as co-star with her sister, Florence, in "A Lady's Virtue."

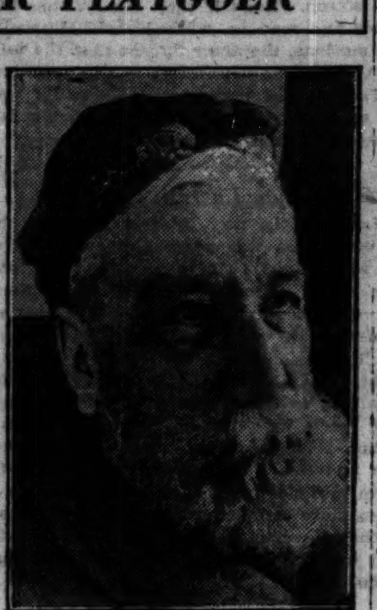
THE ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

For those who do their theater going in the armchair or who like to read the plays they see.

AT RAVINIA.

ONE of the most famous of all operas with a literary heritage is to be sung tomorrow night. "Thais" was one of Anatole France's most read books before it took the fancy of Massenet as material around which to compose an opera. That the composer was right in his choice opera goers for many years have testified by their enthusiasm for the intense story of the reformed courtezan. "Thais" is as good an introduction as any to Anatole France if you have yet to know the work of that master writer. It has long been my conviction that to start reading Anatole France with "Penguin Island," a highly satirical and subtle piece of writing, is as inept as to start reading Conrad with "Lord Jim," which is the summit of the Conradian manner. The two best known books of each of those two brilliant writers are peculiarly difficult to read unless one is used to their authors' technique. Begin Conrad with "Youth" and you will be a Conrad devotee. Begin him with "Lord Jim" and you may probably never read another of his matchless tales. Begin Anatole France with "Penguin Island" and you may go to your grave thinking him a fellow too clever for you. But "Thais" is a tale not so subtle, though written with a genius' pen. And when you have read "Thais," get a volume of France's short stories called "Mother of Pearl" and read the first story in it, "The Procurator of Judea," and you will not only read one of the greatest short stories ever written, but you will know Anatole France in his most characteristic mood.



ANATOLE FRANCE.

On Wednesday evening, "Marouf, or the Cobbler of Cairo" will be sung, and that gay opera will give you an opportunity of getting out your Arabian Nights Entertainments. The story of Marouf is a tale which you will find in the world's largest treasure chest of stories. Read it in either the Burton or the Lane translations—they are the most authenticated literarily. The Arabian Nights has provided entertainment for young and old for many years now, but you will find the story of Marouf in the adult rather than the juvenile versions of the tales. In only one edition for children can you dig it out, in Frances Olcott's "Haroun el Raschid"—in case you were planning a sortie into your child's library. While the grousers are proclaiming that life isn't what it used to be, and citing the face on the barroom floor and maidenly modesty and children who were seen and not heard, they ought to be talking about something really to be regretted—the days when all you had to do was to get yourself a ring and rub it with vigor and you had a genie all steamed up to get you either a whole stableful of Reigh Counts or a glass of bicarbonate of soda, whichever you felt most in the mood for at the moment. Marouf, who ran away from a complaining wife, fell in with an old friend, who thought it would be a joke to pass him off as the richest man in the world [though he was by way of being the poorest] came to the attention of the sultan, was gobbled up by that monarch as a prize hubby for his daughter, found her so young and beautiful that he couldn't deceive her, confessed all and was rewarded by her eloping with him, and they were out in the desert alone with the night and their love when they got a little hungry, sent a fellah who was plowing out for refreshments, did a little plowing themselves, and dug up the convenient ring that we all regret deeply has gone out of fashion. The ring reminds me of "Alf's Button," one of the funniest—one of the few really funny—books that came out of the war. It was the story of a British tommy who had got a button for his tunic made from a piece of Aladdin's lamp, which had been melted up for the emergency along with thousands of other pieces of brass. When he polished the button the genie appeared, and if you think that Tommy had a hard life at the front you are a poor judge of romance. The book is out of print now, I fear, but it is worth digging up. It's a grand yarn.

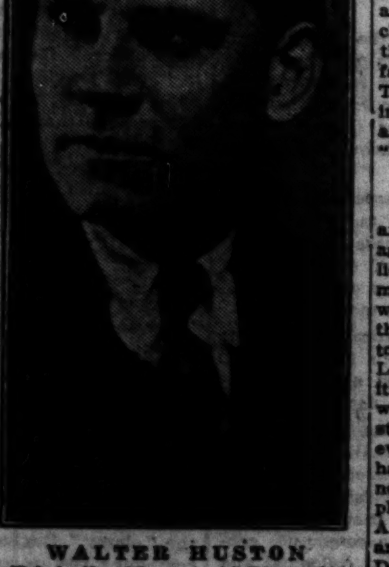
BERNARD SHAW HIMSELF.

Bernard Shaw in the talking movies [where during the last two weeks he has been meetable] is one of the thrills of a lifetime. After years of imagining what he really looks like and how he really talks, there he is, straight and handsome as a lad, with a walk which is the sheer poetry of motion. And he talks exactly as you'd never imagine—with a slight Irish accent, saying gurrrl, for girl, and his final r's hefty, but with the fullness of voice that is characteristically English. And he is amusing and not at all serious and says nothing at all with great charm. And the most impressive thing about his appearance is the fact that the movie audiences like him. They clapped with zest after his part in the program had been turned off—and they let Al Smith and his few "woids" go unapplauded.

PUBLISHED.

When "Our Betters" was written—and played—some dozen or so years ago—it shocked the theater going public. So many less satiric and therefore more shocking plays followed it that when it was produced again this year the public which had gone years before to be shocked, now remained to laugh. Like all of Somerset Maugham's plays, it reads quite as well as it acts, even when such a priceless person as Constance Collier does the part which every one remembers long after they have forgotten Ina Claire's. [I have never seen such horrible gowns in any play as the ones Miss Claire wears. A patent leather thing, in the first act, and a combination of Undine and the Dolly sisters in the second are too, too awful.] You can have almost as much fun reading it as seeing it if you have a good pictorial mind and can actually hear the characters—for there is almost no action in the play, and the conversation must be spoken in an exaggerated English accent to be most delicious. What amuses you most is the history of the play—the perfect monsoon of criticism which it caused in its youth as a play, and the rather old fashionedness of it now.

IMMENSE



WALTER HUSTON

He's in the title-part of "Elmer the Great" in the Blackstone, and is successful in making audiences believe that he is just the fellow for it. . . . The comedy by Ring Lardner and George M. Cohan really gives to Mr. Huston the first chance he has had in Chicago, although he was liked for his performing here in both "Desire Under the Elms" and "Kongo."

Rosa Raisa Recovers from Recent Illness

"ROSA RAISA, whose health has been giving musical circles in the United States a great deal of concern, has completely recovered from her recent brief illness," writes Herbert M. Johnson, manager of the Chicago Civic opera, from Milan, Italy.

"Exaggerated reports which were printed in the United States gave Chicago music lovers to understand that the famous dramatic soprano of the Chicago Civic opera had suffered a nervous breakdown. We have just returned from a wonderful day spent with Raisa and Rimini at their villa near Verona. Raisa laughs at the reports of any nervous disturbance following her illness and I have never seen her in better health. She has just returned from her annual cure at Salsomaggiore and is at the villa for a few days before going to the Swiss mountains to escape the extremely hot weather of the Italian plains.

"While in Verona, Raisa was thinking little about music, enjoying a complete rest after her strenuous season of last year. Her greatest interest at the moment is in her mulberry trees and silk worms. She is overjoyed with the prospects of an unusually good season.

Visit with Polacco.

"Musically, all Italy is taking a vacation at the present time. Every one who can do so has gotten away to the mountains or the seaside. The Polaccos have closed their Milan town house and are at the Lido, where they expect to remain for several more weeks. Maestro Polacco and I spent some busy and enjoyable hours together going over our plans for the coming season and at the conclusion of our conferences we are both convinced that the 1928-'29 season, probably the last season in the Auditorium, will be the most brilliant Chicago ever has had. We have a number of interesting new artists and we plan some interesting revivals and novelties.

"Maestro Polacco is enthusiastic about the new production of 'The Marriage of Figaro.' The Chicago company has not done this opera since the 1911-'12 season, when the cast included Carolina White, Alice Zeppili, Maggie Teyte, Louise Berat, Mabel Riegelman, Gustave Huberdeau, Mario Sammarco, Pompilio Malatesta, Edmond Warnery and Constantin Nicolay.

"We have gone over the color sketches for the new scenery together and we are confident that Chicago audiences will be as delighted with the production as they were with that of 'Don Giovanni.'

Last Week of Covent Garden.

"We have received a number of interesting letters from various musical centers of Europe in the last few days. One of the most interesting was from London, describing the last week or two of the Covent Garden season. The Italian répertoire was so successful that the deficit has been greatly reduced.

"Eva Turner, English dramatic soprano, who has been singing for several years in Italy, Germany, and South America, made a sensational hit in 'Aïda.' The critics' reception of her work in this old Verdi opera was even warmer than that accorded her for her Turandot, a rôle she sang more than a hundred times in Italy. That is saying a great deal, for Figaro in Musical Opinion for July remarked: 'What has been made plain this year, thanks to the brilliantly powerful singing of Miss Eva Turner, is that the music for "Turandot," which seemed dull and colorless before, is psychologically just right. Miss Turner got the right weight and color to her tone to suggest the menacing hardness of the Princess; and that is precisely what the music says. Her trumpetlike and ringing tones, in which there was no trace of "screaminess" or harshness (though she apparently got her lips into position with effort), were stunning in their imperiousness—the genuine imperiousness of a princess. Indeed, this part seems to have been written for her: it is high and difficult, but it did not strain that magnificent organ in her throat. In addition, she acted with a moving intensity.'

"For the first time in its history, Covent Garden put on a popular priced Saturday night performance, based on a scale equivalent to that in Chicago for the Saturday night operas. Every seat was filled and we understand that London will now adopt the Chicago plan of giving these popular priced performances every Saturday night.

"There is a strong movement on foot to give Covent Garden a longer season. A city of London's importance in the musical world should have more than a brief spring season of grand opera. The great problem has been to find guarantors to cover a deficit which must always be expected with companies like the Chicago Civic, the Metropolitan and Covent Garden. In Chicago, we have solved this problem once and for all by the plan for the new building, the income from which will be more than ample to take care of our operatic needs for many years to come, but there is no such possibility in London.

Schubert Festival a Success.

"We hear from friends in Vienna that the Schubert festival has been a great success. One of the interesting features was the serenade concert in front of the house in Nussdorferstrasse where Schubert was born, the audience being seated in the courtyard.

"The Gottesmann quartet played the String Quartette in C minor which, heard on the still evening air, proved entrancing. To quote from my correspondent—Kammersaenger Steiner and Mlle. Anday sang and with the 'Trout' quintet came to an end a most delightful evening, broken only by the bells of Lichtenthal church, where more than a hundred years earlier Schubert himself had sung.

"Then another day before the town hall, with 4,000 singers giving a monster concert, accompanied by the brass of the Philharmonic orchestra. During the afternoons over a hundred chorus concerts of Schubert's music were given in the public squares of Vienna. Two evenings of serenades were given on the Josephplatz, within the former imperial castle—one conducted by Dr. Baumgartner from Salzburg, the other under Schalk.

"'It was a memorable occasion to listen to the master's immortal music within those historic walls. The festival continued for three weeks, concluding with a group of enormous concerts in which 100,000 singers participated.'

"We are returning to Germany in a few days and while there expect to hear one or two performances during the Wagner and Mozart festival at Munich which commences July 26."

Music Notes

Albert Coates, the English conductor, has just finished conducting a series of concerts in the Hollywood bowl in California, and is now engaged in a similar employment at the New York stadium.

The Belgian Guards band, composed of eighty musicians selected from the Regiment Des Guides, and its leader, Capt. Arthur Prevost, will be American visitors during the coming season. Capt. Prevost is a brother of one of the members of the Pro Arte quartet of Brussels.

Jacques Gordon will play a violin recital at Kimball hall on Wednesday afternoon. Harold Van Horne will be at the piano. The program contains Leo Sowerby's Suite for violin and piano and Chausson's "Poème," as leading compositions, to be followed by a group of shorter works which include some arrangements and original compositions from Mr. Gordon's own pen.

Talking Movies May Benefit the Actors

By Burns Mantle.

The first four plays he selected were in my list of those dramas that had led the field the season in New York—"Broadway," "They Knew What They Wanted," "The Road to Rome," and "Saturday's Children."

I met Wagner at the theater one night not long ago and asked him how his plans had worked out. He said he would write me his experiences. I quote from his letter:

"Every so often a man who thinks he has been a bit game in this business makes up his mind that he is going to do something different," he wrote. "Sometimes he wins and sometimes he gets spanked. This time I got spanked. I presume the idea is a bit ahead of the times. At least the ego within me makes me feel that I would like to look upon it in that light.

"I had a brilliant idea that I would like to have three stock companies, use visiting stars and play each play three weeks—one week in each town. I selected Rochester, Buffalo, and Toronto.

"I found that two of the towns—Buffalo and Rochester—didn't want stars; in Toronto I found the censor, who evidently didn't want anything that Broadway liked. I only had one view of this censor; he looked like one of the Smith brothers—the other one.

Shocked the Canadians.

"After the first night of 'The Road to Rome,' one of the dailies refused to print a review and removed our advertising from their pages. I think it is terrible of our good friend, Robert Sherwood, to write a play that would so shock Canada, his native land. Of course, Sherwood may be getting even—I don't know.

"They made us change the ending of the second act and the beginning of the third and remove all the lines that made New York roar with delight. Underscored in red ink at the bottom of the censor's notice was the following sentence:

"'Above all things Amytis must not spend the night with Hannibal. By changing your play you will show great self-denial to the world.' Now, I ask you?

"When it came to 'Saturday's Children,' the same censor found that it was immoral for the father to talk to the married daughter about the arrival of the baby. On top of this he notified me that in 'Broadway' the hoofer must keep his trousers on—that underwear is immoral in Toronto. The cutting of the play 'Broadway' filled a full sized sheet of foolscap paper, and with it came the announcement that I must submit plays two weeks in advance so as to give the censor full opportunity of judging what was best for the morals of that city. I gave it up; wouldn't you?

Buffalo Was More Lenient.

"We have been very successful in Buffalo with the popular favorites. Rochester has been used for some years to a certain class of stock productions and they don't want any innovations. For years I have been trying to educate people in the theater, and I know it is a mistake. That is where I differ from other managers—I know when I am wrong, and I do know when I am spanked, and I repeat I was spanked in Rochester and Toronto."

Incidentally an even more surprising statement in Mr. Wagner's letter is that the spread of the speakeasies is a growing menace to the theater. "I had more trouble with drunkenness in Rochester in five weeks on account of the nearby speakeasies," he says, "than I have had before in my entire career."

Perhaps there should be a law that no speakeasy should be permitted to open within a radius of ten blocks of any theater.

I can understand the Toronto censor's attitude. He probably is a family man and he does not purpose subjecting his children to embarrassment in public places. He would restrict profanity to golf clubs and the rougher bridge parties and discussions of lax morals to closed rooms.

Censorship Too Harsh.

But I also contend that there are no really good plays that are dependent exclusively on either. Let an audience use its own imagination as to where Amytis spent the night, if the censor believes Toronto imaginations are cleaner than those of the play's author. It is my belief that they would have read things into the Sherwood play many times worse than anything suggested. But that is only my opinion.

I am reminded of the young man who asked the girl to go buggy riding and was told by her mother that she never let her daughter go out with a man unless she went along as a chaperone.

"That's all right with me," said the youth. "You know your daughter better than I do. If you think she needs looking after, come along!"

The fact remains that the cosmopolitan stage of New York moves along experimental grooves too fast for the more conservative native centers to follow. But there are enough so-called clean plays to supply any ordinary demand. And enough of the other kind that can be judicially censored without real harm to their value as entertainment. I don't think an actor in his unmentionables is any great bargain, either.

Explaining It.

Brown's little son was out walking with his father in a cemetery and he noticed a tombstone with the inscription:

HERE LIES A LAWYER AND AN HONEST MAN.

"What does that mean, papa?" little Jack asked and his papa (who had been "done" himself) replied sadly: "Two men in one grave."

Ten Years Ago in Chicago Theaters

SUBJOINED are news of and comment on the plays and the shows in the Chicago theaters of a decade ago, as printed in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of July 28, 1918—the date most nearly corresponding to today. The excerpts are verbatim, and not rewrites or summarizations.

Cyril Maude has employed Miss Annie Hughes and William Devereux to act with him next season, in case there is a next season, in "The Saving Grace," by Haddon Chambers.

Mr. Maude was liked by those who saw him in "The Saving Grace." Miss Hughes never repeated her first hit in this country—that as the maid in "Mr. Hopkinson."

Miss Dorothy Klewer, who used to skate skillfully but unnoted on the ice at the College Inn, has become a New-York actress. After a spectacular period in the plays of Raymond Hitchcock, Miss Klewer has been engaged for a rôle in the Shuberts' "The Blue Pearl."

Miss Klewer's whereabouts is unknown.

Orme Caldara, strange to say, has been employed for a leading rôle in "Information, Please!" the new drama by the Misses Jane Cowl and Jane Murfin, authors of "Lilac-Time," in which Miss Cowl is soon to appear in New-York. Henry Stephenson will also be in it.

"Information, Please!" didn't long endure; and Mr. Caldara died some years ago.

"A Tailor-Made Man," boasting prestige of many successful months in New-York City, will reach Cohan's Grand Opera-House September 1, with Grant Mitchell in the title-rôle.

"A Tailor-Made Man," of Hungarian origin, was a good piece; and Mr. Mitchell was at his best in it.

"Fiddlers Three," an operetta with a Belgian prima-donna who escaped the atrocities, will be produced Labor Day by John Cort.

"Fiddlers Three" is recalled only for introducing Miss Louise Groody, who is now paid off, 'tis said, with as much as $1,500 a week.

When "The Kiss-Burglar" arrives presently hereabouts, Miss Fay Bainter will be absent from its cast. Among the deprivations common to the outlands, this is not the sorriest.

Miss Bainter was an interesting personality then, as she still is; and the 1918 drama-editor didn't think so, apparently.

You recall, of course, the harmonious though bizarre noises made by the Six Brown Brothers, performing upon the saxophone in the Fred Stone show? War had made its inroads on that sonorous choir; for Vern and Cuthbert have joined the Navy, and are now scenting the battle from afar. Enlistments, however, will permit the sextette to appear in full numbers when, on Labor Day, Mr. Stone begins an engagement at the Colonial in "Jack O'Lantern."

There were many who said they went to the Fred Stone show because of the Six Brown Brothers rather than because of Mr. Stone.

Twenty Years Ago

GOING back through the files of twenty years ago, or to the corresponding Sunday of 1908, the interests of theater-goers were catered to in THE TRIBUNE of July 26 by the paragraphs of news and comment and the entries of current entertainment that follow. The excerpts are verbatim.

The Great Northern will open its season Saturday night with a dramatization of a one-time popular sentimental novel titled "Lena Rivers." Beulah Poynter, who did the dramatizing and took the play around the popular-priced circuit last season, will appear in the leading rôle.

Miss Poynter was credited with making a great deal of money in her stage-version of the old romance.

Annie Russell, who will be starred in "The Stronger Sex," will begin her regular tour about October 1. Collin Kemper will stage the production.

It isn't for "The Stronger Sex" that Miss Russell is remembered by those who admired her acting. . . . Her brother Thomas died earlier this month, as noted at the time in the news-columns of THE TRIBUNE.

Ask Mrs. Herrick.

If what the papers say is so,
An interviewer I would be:
Free seats to every snappy show,
And copy gleaned at lunch or tea.

STRUTTING TONIGHT IN THE G. V. F.

MISS BLOSSOM SEELEY

SHE'S a well-known with the patrons of the two-a-day, and has been for the last fifteen years; but a long time is gone since she has been seen by Chicago in what the lingo of the business is called a "production." Miss Seeley, according to the playbills of the Greenwich Village Follies, not only does her specialties, with and without Benny Fields, but also takes part in some of the skits and sketches.

Two Two-a-Day Lads Talk Some Things Over

"'What did you talk to the President about?' Mr. Walker was asked.

"'About three minutes,' he replied."—New-York Herald Tribune.

MR. WALKER: Young man, I'm amazed at you! Who was that lady I seen you with?

Mr. Coolidge: That was no lady's eye—that was a marble! I hear you've stopped drinking hard likka.

Mr. Walker: Yes, sir—I freeze it and eat it! Tell me, Cal, how do you get down from your electrical horse,

Mr. Coolidge: I don't get down from my electrical horse—I get down from a duck! I hear they are trying to put over a seven-cent subway-fare where you come from.

Mr. Walker: Yes, sir—they're raising the Old Nickel! What's the difference between a member of the House of Representatives and a member of the Senate?

Mr. Coolidge: One is all full of hot air, and the other is all full of hot air. What was the idea of asking Lindbergh to go through the Holland Vehicular Tunnel?

Mr. Walker: Through the Holland Vehicular Tunnel? That's easy. We wanted an Ace in the hole. What has long whiskers and gets nowhere?

Mr. Coolidge: Charles Evans Hughes, Farm-Relief, and Muscle Shoals. Mr. Walker, our boy soprano, will now sing for you "Those Weepin' and Whalen Blues." Let 'er go, professor!

Where Ham Is Ham.

Just as physical movement is really a secondary thing in the French théâtre, so, in the last resort, is the illusion of reality. The actors are always conscious artists, in a conscious correspondence with their public, which is equally conscious of the relation. You will sometimes hear around you in a French theater a murmur of verbal expressions of approval which are not applause, but, rather, conscious phases of congratulation to the artist, loud enough to be heard, if not by the actors themselves, at least by other spectators, to whom, indeed, they are in part addressed, and to whom such expressions appear by no means incongruous. Those who utter them have broken no illusion among their neighbors by the interruption, because no illusion was really there. It is true that the French actor no longer follows the habit, still prevalent in Italy, of stepping back into the doorway through which he has just made his exit in order to bow his acknowledgment of the applause. French conformity to international fashion has abolished that habit; but it would in no way shock French artistic susceptibilities if it survived.—Philip Carr in the Theater Arts Monthly.

College Head Talks on Ethics in Music

HERBERT WITHERSPOON, president of the Chicago Musical college, has been expressing himself on the subject of ethics in the musical profession. He is quoted in the Etude as saying:

"One of the best signs of the times for the musical profession is that at last there is a really widespread interest in a standard of ethics or professional conduct and in the observance of that code by members of the profession, not only for their own good and for a better understanding and coöperation among the members, but for actual improvement in teaching among teachers and students both morally and musically.

"As music is the last of the arts to attain its real value, coherency and importance, so it is the last of the professions to seek and establish among its members rules of conduct and standards of learning and practice."

Ethical Matters.

He discusses "housecleaning" in medicine and the law, maintaining that the danger of losing a license of practice has less to do with the matter than the growth of feeling within the professions, and adding that the profession of music has not yet reached those standards though believing that an excellent start has been made. Later he discusses some concrete ethical matters. He says in one place:

"Our profession at large should be cautioned about its ethical attitude towards advertising as made apparent not only in the musical papers and daily press, but also in the circulars and printed matter issued from the studio or college. It is one thing to teach for money, thereby gaining a well deserved livelihood. It is quite another thing to so commercialize the art of music that it is sold exactly like any commodity of pots and pans, cleaning preparations, clothing or machinery. I know that it is an age of advertising and that we probably must announce in some way what we have to sell, but I cannot help recalling the words my father preached years ago when he said to me: 'You may become the greatest man in the world. But let the world find it out.' Exaggerated statements bordering upon truth and untruth are not only unethical but are in bad taste. They therefore only help in bringing odium to the profession.

Music Is an Aid.

"Another ethical improvement could be made by stimulating the singing of our own patriotic songs in every school every day. It would start the children off with a good feeling of patriotism, a kind of community feeling which would bind them together. We hear it said by our own people that our songs are such poor songs. I have lived in many countries and I would like to know what nation has any better national songs, taking them as a whole. Those of other nations are very different from ours, but they are in reality little, if any, better.

"It must be kept in mind that platitudes, dogmas, and cast-iron laws are not at all in their effect what they seem to preach. They are apt to be retroactive and negative. Pitted against them is the principle that right feeling, appreciation of the beautiful in nature, in art and in people, leads to right acting. This, after all, is the best prevention of crime. Music aids in making people feel right and think straight.

"So, let us look at things as they really are and not be deceived by grandiose statements and all kinds of fancy doctrines. Even in music we can be practical. A scoffer last year, when I was speaking about these things in the privacy of my own home, said, 'You will never get any ethical conduct among artists because they are not dealing with the common sense things of life. Music is all fancy. You can get ethical observance only from men whose minds are trained in reality.' He forgot that music is, in its way, as scientific as chemistry. It is not art until it is coherent, expressive, sane and regulated. Expression is impression put out in form. That answers his question. We can, therefore, measure musical learning and knowledge and ability, and we must find out how best to do it.

Stealing Pupils.

"Perhaps one of the most serious of all unethical practices in the musical profession is the stealing away of other teachers' pupils. Individual teachers are guilty, frequently, either openly or by stealth, of urging pupils of other teachers to come to study with them. Sometimes they make other students their messengers for this purpose. Or perhaps they drop disparaging remarks about their fellow teachers. This last is one of the lowest forms of unfair competition. It should be stopped and it can be stopped.

"A very important part of real ethical behavior should be the obligation on the part of the teacher to give the prospective pupil, or, for that matter, any pupil studying with the teacher, honest advice regarding the future. Both teacher and student should understand thoroughly for what purpose the student is studying.

"Many a heartache would be avoided and much disappointment prevented if the teacher would tell the pupil frankly just what he considered the possibilities, or probabilities, for the future. Everybody should be allowed to study music, either in a private studio or in a college, for cultural purposes, whether highly gifted or not; but certainly a reputable teacher should be willing to give his students honest and frank advice when it comes to a question of taking up a musical career.

"False promises should be discouraged. All the so-called guarantees for future success should be forbidden. If teachers will really get together, form their standards of learning and develop a real ethical code, the musical profession will obtain that much-needed coöperation which will make of it a tremendous force in the life of the nation. We shall then do all that it is possible to do to aid in the cultural development of our people and thereby give them that much-needed balance to be maintained in spite of the materialism of the day."

$5 APIECE FOR WAR LETTERS

If you're a world war veteran with vivid memory of some thrilling experiences ten years ago, back in 1918, tell us about it in 300 words or so and we'll send you $5 if we print your letter. Address War Letters, Chicago Tribune.

"On the Job."

For several nights we had been engaged in firing upon German crossroads. Our gun has been isolated from the other three guns of the battery, and placed in an orchard situated just outside of the village of Reherry. The rest of the guns were placed in a thick woods about a mile away to the left of us.

After dusk we would pull out of this orchard and bring the gun forward to the front lines as close as possible. From this position we would keep up an irregular sweeping fire all night, destroying everything which appeared on the roads and preventing the Germans from bringing up supplies and ammunition to their batteries.

Just before daybreak we would pull out and return to our orchard and camouflage our gun. Of course, the Germans observed our line of fire, and immediately, as soon as the light would permit, sent out a bombing plane to locate us and put us out of action. We watched the plane from our concealed position in the orchard as it was flying above the spot, but fortunately he never succeeded in locaitng us.

Our infantry had been making nightly raids into the enemy trenches. One night we received a new mission. We were ordered to lay our gun on the front lines and be in readiness to help the raiding parties should they meet any resistance. They were to notify us by means of a rocket. This rocket, when bursting, would discharge a number of stars of various colors. The color of this rocket would be changed every night so as to keep the enemy guessing as to our plans.

On this particular night I was on guard at the gun. It was just three minutes to midnight, and I was about to go and awaken my relief when all of a sudden I beheld a rocket bursting in front, directly in line with the muzzle of a gun. Without a moment's hesitation I slammed a shell into the breech and fired. The rest of the gun crew awoke, jumped to their posts and we kept up a steady sweeping fire. We fired about twenty rounds when a phone call came from the post of command to cease fire.

The following morning our Lieut. Col. Curtis G. Redden, then commanding the second battalion, appeared at the gun position and questioned me very closely about this incident. He said that the infantry did not ask for any artillery support that night, and that I must have been mistaken, since the other gun crews did not see any rocket. However, he said he would personally visit the forward positions and question the outposts who were in that vicinity at the time.

I found myself in an awful predicament. Here I was, the only one who saw the rocket, and no one there to verify my claim. What would be the outcome? The boys predicted that I might be sent to the rear lines and court martialed—something which every one of us feared. However, I stuck to my story.

Outside of destroying several hundred yards of barbed wire in front of the enemy trenches, no life was lost.

A few days later Lieut. Col. Redden again appeared at our gun position and disclosed the fact that a rocket had been actually sent up, but by the enemy. Somehow they found out our rocket method, and guessed at the color we were to use that night. By firing the rocket they evidently intended to stir excitement in our lines and when our boys would come out of their positions meet them with machine gun fire. But this never happened. Before leaving, Lieut. Col. Redden remarked that he was much pleased to know that I was on the job.

In conclusion I cannot help but say a few words out of respect to this lovable man, a gallant commander to whom I was greatly indebted, for he had saved me from a possible disgrace.

F. C.

A Drunken Daredevil.

I was ordered to visit a French air depot a few kilometers west of Nancy to inspect and take over some much needed supplies. At the conclusion of my duty I was invited to the officers' mess for a welcome drink.

My ability to talk fluently the language of the country went great, and I suppose I drank more of the "bubble water" than usual. At any rate, on the invitation of a noted French combat pilot, wearing a chestful of medals and a croix de guerre that appeared to have a yard of ribbon and a dozen or so palms, I agreed to take my first flight in the air. We both staggered out to the hangar.

It was all new to me—the teddy bear suit, the helmet, goggles, etc. After the preliminary tuning up we were off, skimming along the ground at an ever increasing speed. My effort to look out on both sides and through the glass partition at my feet, all at the same time, proving useless, I concentrated on the sides, trying to identify landmarks, but with poor success.

Now the pilot was banking. The terrific hum of the air through the wires and the staccato bark of the engine were well nigh deafening to one unused to flying. Soon we were over Pont-a-Mousson, the camouflaged road on the east bank of the Moselle being plainly visible. We were flying low all the time.

Taking a peep over the side I noticed some puffs of white smoke just below us. Now some up ahead. The pilot was erratic, first going up, then down. What was the reason? Suddenly it dawned on me. This bird thought it lots of fun, in his stewed condition, to take a flight over the lines just for the thrill of dodging "archigs."

I suppose, as a veteran of the Boer and world wars, my correct pose should be that of a fearless daredevil, but I'll say frankly that I was scared to death. We came back safely, but I mentally registered a vow, "never again with a drunken aviator."

F. S. R.

The Cost of Silence.

Shortly after our arrival in St. Nazaire, the captain was lecturing to the men of the company, who were lined up in front and rear rank. The captain was not very well liked by the company in general, and when he turned slightly, one of the boys in the rear rank picked up a large rock and threw it, just grazing the captain's head.

Of course, the captain was very indignant and demanded to know who threw the stone, but nobody responded, although the company could have guessed the man, and several had seen him throw it, but all kept silent.

After inquiring several more times for the guilty party, without success, the captain directed the sergeant to assemble all the men of the company, have them completely assemble full packs and equipment, and march them around the parade ground for two hours without a rest.

This was accordingly done, but the men took it light heartedly, and the capain never found out the guilty culprit.

Filmdom Spends Fortunes on Sound

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Sound pictures are the dominating interest in Hollywood. All other subjects are laid aside for discussion for this new and revolutionizing idea that has hit the town of miracles.

Warner Brothers announce plans for building a stage for the making of sound pictures that will cost $220,000. Universal, not to be outdone, has a whole soundproof stage system, begun this week, with unit No. 1, including a main stage, 60x100 feet, a theater and monitor room 35x50 feet, and an apparatus section 73x50 feet.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have their huge and expensive soundproof stage partly up, and United Artists also have one under construction. Paramount is doing its expensive bit. Fox recently dedicated a huge laboratory for sound experimentation. And so they go.

It's All Experiment.

The physical aspects of the sound theories are costing huge outlays for the studios. The other elements of the thing—the actors and directors—have yet to be trained and experimented with, which is going to cost another fortune.

As yet there are no sound film veterans. Few have worked in sound pictures. One director knows as much as another about how it should be done, so far. Stage training does not mean, by any means, that an actor is a perfect sound film subject. As with singers' voices on the phonograph, some reproduce better through the microphone than others. Also, rudiments of sound technique are only beginning to emerge.

Some consonants sound so exaggerated on the screen that they must be avoided or suppressed, when possible, "Th," "S," and "T" in particular. Also, a loud bang is not as noisy on some sound recording machines (the movietone, for instance) as is a lesser noise. A very loud noise makes the film vibrate with a hissing sound and the loudness is lost.

Subject for Debate.

Wiser heads here and there in the industry are beginning to speculate on the returns from talking pictures. In the first place, they will have little market outside our own United States.

In the second, there is some speculation as to whether the present enormous popularity of the talkie is not due to novelty. To date it surely is not due to a uniform high quality in the sound films, since the method as yet is unperfected.

Sages ponder the psychology of the situation thus: All speaking celluloids are divided into two main parts: First, the actual talkies, which include dramatic dialogues and songs and the news reel subjects of famous men making speeches and so on; second, the sound, which include musical scores, synchronized with the film, and noises synchronized as in "Wings."

The actual talkies which are not news reel subjects or short subjects by famous people are believed to be doomed to eventual failure or, at least, only partial success, according to various important folk in the industry. As any talkie is a competitor with the spoken drama it is an imitation and reproduction of the spoken drama and hence is second to it in merit just as all imitations run second to the real thing. This is the comment of one group of Hollywood thought.

Can't Compete with Stage.

The minute the movies try actual competition with the theater on its own ground, the movies are licked from the start, they say. The only chance for these talkies is the small towns where people have no chance to hear spoken drama in the theater, these pessimists hold. They also predict that the high prices of the talkies will drive many from the movies back to the legitimate theater.

The news reel and short subjects, such as Mussolini making a speech or John Barrymore doing the soliloquy from "Hamlet," or Al Jolson singing several numbers, will be the only real talkies having a wide appeal, the unbelievers opine. Straight drama in long form will not take, they hold.

Leaving the actual talkies and going on to the sound device which includes synchronized orchestration and noise effects, the sages foresee that musical effects will always be successful, especially so in small towns. The noise effects are looked on by other critical ones as the real major catastrophe of the sounding celluloids. Audiences already complain of nervousness and distraction of attention from the story by the loud screaming sound effects used in some films, such as "Wings" and "Lilac Time."

In Silence Is Strength.

One famous director, who wished his name withheld, prophesied that the industry will go bankrupt in two years over the talkies only to find that sound in pictures has driven sixty per cent of the audiences out of the movie theaters. "We know so little about the motion picture's possibilities, as yet, and now the industry is rushing headlong into still another field before it has full grasp of what it already has."

He feels that the big appeal of the films heretofore has been that it has been the SILENT drama. The era of sound brings with it too much that is nerve wracking and little that is not fabled imitation of the legitimate stage.

This director feels that it probably will be a good thing for the movies that this sound wave shall come and go for it will bring the industry at last to a sound basis financially, and make it take stock of its own possibilities which distinguish it from the theater. There is much that the film can do, he says, that the stage cannot, and there lies the real future of the industry.

The Funny Side.

The funny side to sound films is succinctly summed up by Ed Montaigne, Universal's scenario editor-in-chief:

"The voice test is becoming just as important as the screen test was only a few months ago in casting pictures, and the candidates loom up everywhere.

"The special policeman at the gate now greets you in a rich baritone voice. Telephone operators thrill a delightfully sweet 'Number, please.' There is a lilt in the secretary's 'Good morning.' Electricians call to one another on the set in golden tenor voices and even the janitors say 'good night' in rollickying basso profundo.

"The other day, I thought I heard Melba's haunting lyric soprano [does she sing that]. It was the waitress warbling 'Anything else, please?' Even the office boys are doing vocal gymnastics with their high falsettos. It is the day of the voiceist and the voice with the personality wins."

A Farewell Tea.

Dolores Del Rio held a good-bye tea at her home on "Outpost drive," above Hollywood. Simply dressed, the Mexican actress moved about among her guests in the garden speaking of her imminent trip abroad, and her anticipated thrill at seeing New York for the first time.

At the age of 22, her two years in Hollywood have been eventful and crowded with work and she is entitled to take the opportunity to go abroad with her mother, Mrs. J. L. Asunsolo, and her director, Edwin Carewe, for rest and recreation. Dolores will make no pictures while in Europe.

Whatever may befall Dolores on the European trip, the junket abroad is scheduled to end in a blaze of triumph for Dolores' staff here relates proudly that the Mexican star is to be the guest of the queen of Spain and stay ten days in Madrid, honored by invitation of royalty, at the close of her trip.

TWO-A-DAY

MISS ODETTE MYRTIL.

She is headlining this week in the Palace. . . . Miss Myrtil was in Chicago last season, in the Olympic as a lovelorn gypsy in "Countess Maritza," and in that operetta sang, danced, and played the violin. She had done likewise two years previously in a revue in the Apollo called "Vogues and Frolics."

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

"Talkies" Tear Away Peace.

My Dear Madam: Your paragraph in the July 1 edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, requesting written comments about this new style of portraying movie productions [namely the "talkies"] bids me to remark, that I consider it a colossal step—with the direction of travel towards reverse.

The movies as I see them were designed to furnish amusement. How well they have succeeded is evidenced by computing the seating capacity of our American "show palaces." Their enormous success is due to two distinctive factors. One is because of their ability to eliminate oral expression; the other, is the graceful method by which they lead one on the silent wings of imagination.

Their magnet-like power to attract and hold the multitudes' interest, is born of the multitudes' desire to escape a world of mechanical din and a babble of turbulent tongues. Folks in all walks of life, through the medium of the voiceless drama, have found rest and contentment. They have found, to, what all humankind wants to find in their pleasure—relaxation and a something that is different.

With the coming of the "talkies," the patrons are certain to lose that sense of peacefulness and diversion they have come to cherish so highly. The aspect of the movie theater will bear a strong resemblance to the clatter of the street, and a moment's reflection gives us to know that it was from the likes of this that we wished to escape. Surely no one in this tumultuous age cares for a repetition of the day's "lingo" when in quest of entertainment.

It is a well known fact that many of our best screen stars have in their speech a distinct foreign accent. While, there are some, of course, who are able to follow the speakers' dialect, many of them, including me, will be of the impression they have been transferred to a South Sea isle. What is to become of a patron who understands none but his own tongue? Isn't he apt to be disconcerted as he fruitlessly endeavors to follow the words, as given in a language foreign to his own?

In view of these things, I think the introduction of the "talkies" will, in one bold stroke, take from the movie industry what has been accomplished through years of painstaking effort.

Cordially yours,
JOHN MCDONALD JR.

* *

Sometimes Yes, Sometimes No.

Dear Mae Tinée,

The movies!
To talk or not to talk—that is the question.
But 'tis not a question of breaking a silence—
For that we never had;
What with the music (?) of gigantic organs
And the blaring jazz of much heralded orchestras.

Then there are the people who go to shows
Just to discuss their lovely new clothes.
And also the pests who read not by sight,
But aloud—to every one's exquisite delight.
The latter, no doubt, of talkies will not approve,
For they must be silent—or else move.

Consider now the pictures we've heard,
Are they better or worse for the spoken word.
What would the "jazz singer" be without Al's voice?
Certainly not one of the month's best in choice,
But "Glorious Betsy," the next that I heard,
Surely would be better without any word.

"The Lion and the Mouse," the last of these
Would have been nil but for Barrymore's spoken villainies.
And so my opinion, if express it I may,
Is, let pictures talk if they have something to say.
For Jolson, the silent, is surely not so great,
And when Barrymore speaks the villain we sure do hate.

I know this verse is rather inane,
So I guess I'll not sign my name.
What care I for newspaper fame?
But if some editor to you should come
To offer me a job at that large sum,
Just tell him I wrote only for fun—
I don't like to work—ho, hum!

Editor's note: Modest Violet! Why didst not sign thy name?

BEST MOVIES

If you will tell us what movie, in your opinion, rates above all the others you've seen, and why this particular movie is deserving of praise, we'll pay $1 for your letter if we print it. Adress Best Movies, Chicago Tribune.

Votes for a "Talkie."

"Glorious Betsy" is one of the best pictures I have ever seen. The plot is interesting and refreshing, the scenery beautiful and realistic, the costumes charming and ideal, and the acting superb.

Truly one revels in the exquisite beauty of Dolores Costello, which beauty is doubly enhanced by her histrionic art.

Conrad Nagel gives a very good impersonation of Jerome Bonaparte. Conrad will always be accorded great applause by the American public, to whom he has long since endeared himself.

With the added improvement of "talkies" this picture makes one of the most entertaining of the day.

L. E. S.

"Drums of Love."

I have seen a great many movies, but I feel justified in saying that "Drums of Love" is far beyond anything in the moving picture line I have ever witnessed.

Lionel Barrymore certainly pulled some Lon Chaney stuff, this time. Mary Philbin as a blonde is simply exquisite. Don Alvarado, of course, was his usual handsome self. B. C.

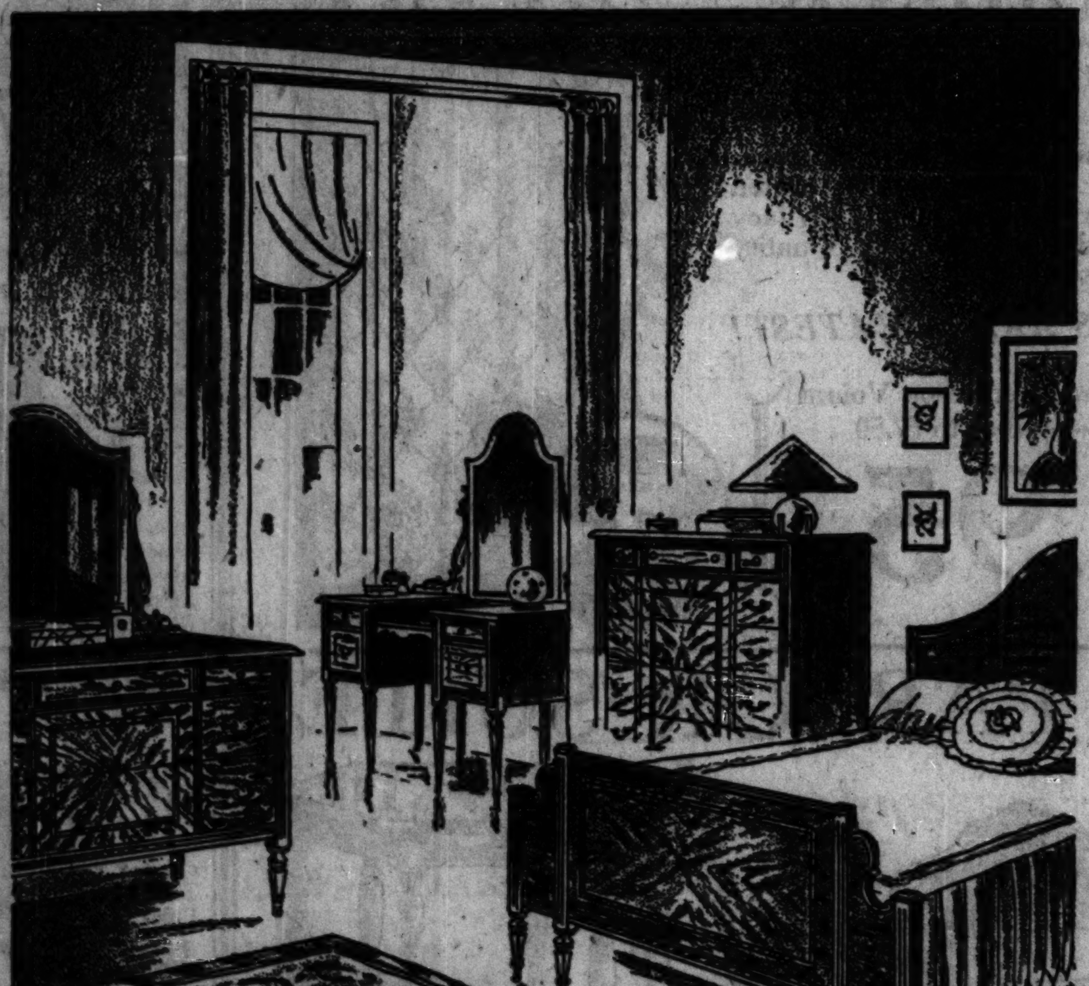
PUBLIC DEMAND—the force that keeps the world progressing. Thundering express trains. Air mail. Trans-Atlantic phones. Talking moving pictures. All the result of public demand. So, too, the country over, manufacturers and retailers alike have come to recognize the public demand for a bi-yearly sale of furniture. And so Mandel's inaugurates an August Sale that for worth-while values will be one of the outstanding events of its kind. You will find in this Sale, furniture for living room, dining room, bedroom. Individual pieces and suites selected primarily for their charm and intrinsic value. The kind of furniture your good taste desires—priced so low as to appeal to the most thrifty.

Mandel Brothers Furniture floor—the Tenth.

SAVE by buying NOW
during the August Sale
PAY out of income LATER
under the Mandel Co-operative Plan

The Mandel Co-operative Plan of home furnishing applies to purchases made in this August Furniture Sale. It is a plan whereby you may furnish your home as you build it, out of income. It is the way a big store, Mandel's, co-operates with you in the fulfillment of your home furnishing plans. For, by using it, furniture and home furnishing purchases, of any amount over $50, will be delivered to your home. The first payment is 25%. And, if you wish, there will be a year to pay the balance. It is as modern as modernism—and evidence of good business ability. It co-operates with you in enabling you to furnish your home now and to pay for it as you enjoy it. It is a time plan for the changing times.



Featured in the August Furniture Sale

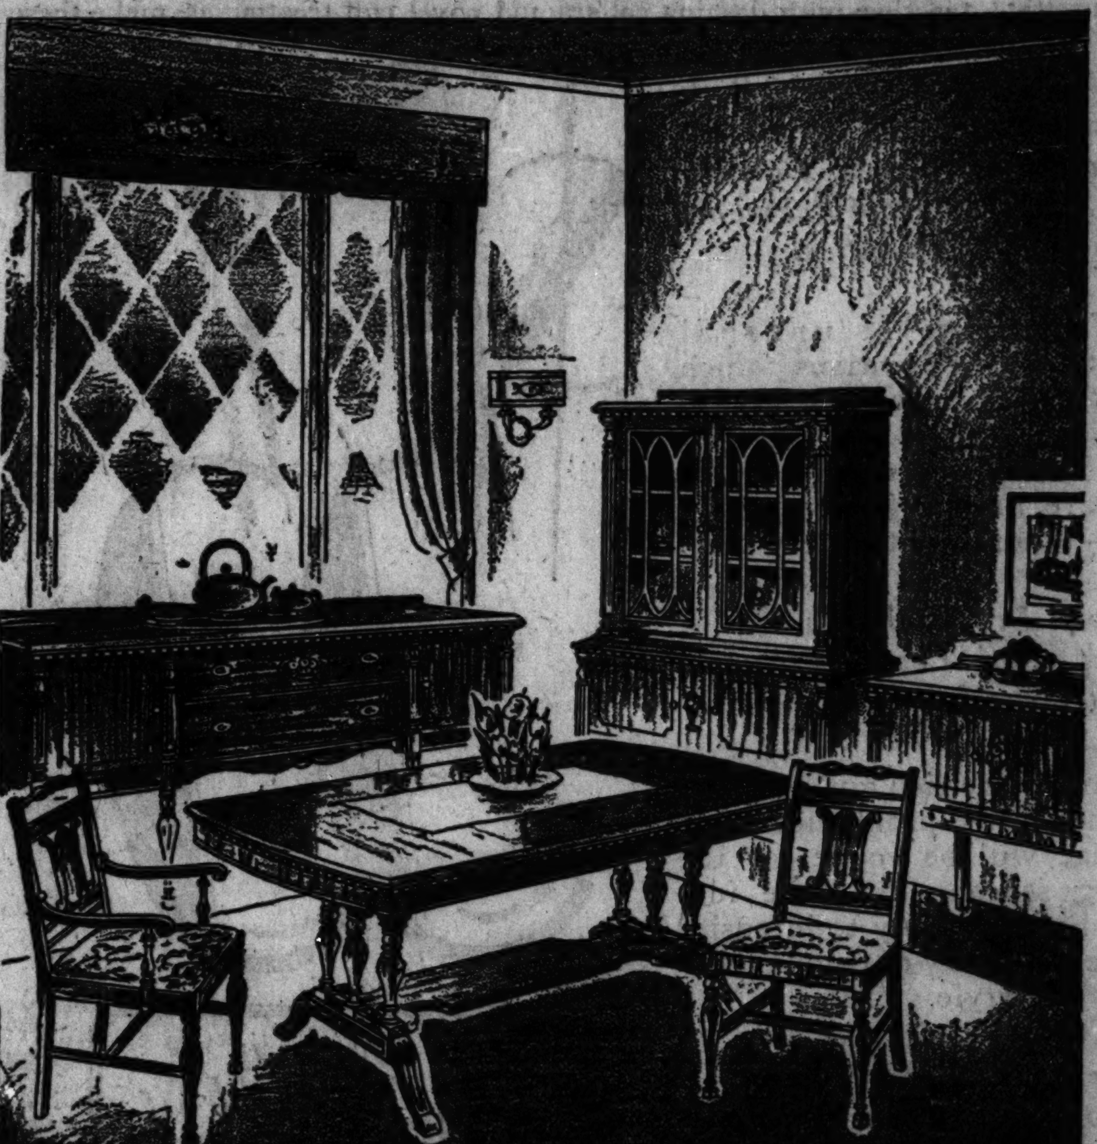
Four-piece Bedroom Suite —graceful Louis XVI lines, $239

BEAUTIFULLY developed in butt walnut veneer on a sturdy gumwood base. Rich and unique is the effective paneling of the fronts. Characteristic of the Louis XVI period are the interesting carved details. Its dust-proof construction is a practical feature not to be overlooked. If so desired, pieces may be purchased separately, though this four-piece suite represents a value difficult to dupuicate at this August Furniture Sale price of $239.

The double bed has a high, gracefully carved head, and low foot board. The dresser is exceptional—for its delicate hardware and carved frame mirror.

The chest shows how attractive as well as convenient a Chest of Drawers can be, while the vanity has the convenient pier style drawer arrangement at the sides.

Other 4-Piece Bedroom Suites—$144.50 to $2400



Featured in the August Furniture Sale

Sheraton Dining Suite —ten handsome pieces, $239

THE finely matched mahogany veneer gives it an exquisite distinction, unusual, indeed, in a suite of so low a price. Its tapering fluted legs and reeded columns, and fine proportions, are patterned after Sheraton—a master in furniture design. These ten handsome pieces will afford you hospitable and convenient dining room accommodations for years to come. A liberal allowance will be made for any pieces that you do not desire.

The Extension Pedestal Table, with rounded ends, has 42 by 60-inch top and opens to eight feet.

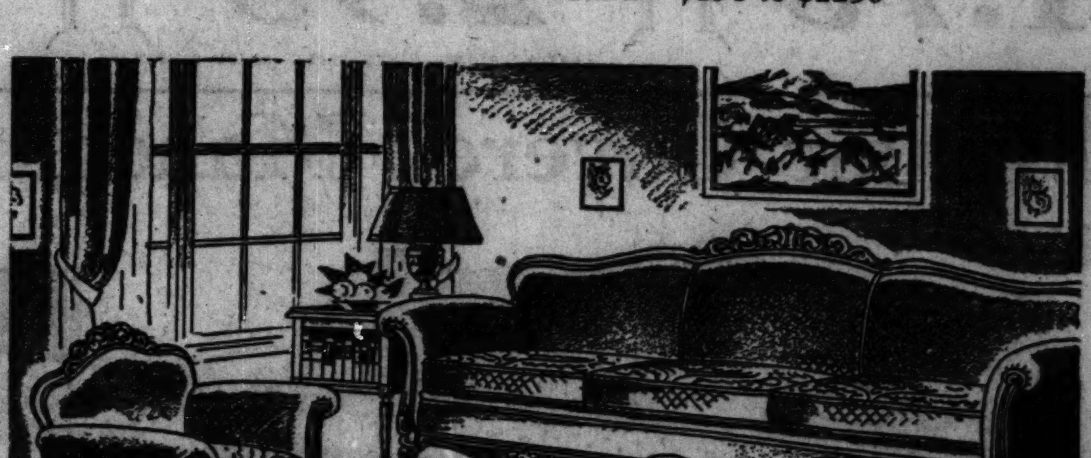
The China Cabinet has lattice door fronts of graceful design.

The Server may serve both the purpose of a Radio Cabinet and Server—or the lower compartment may be used for storing your linens and tableware.

The Buffet is extra long, low and graceful, with Zebra wood veneer, Sheraton type fluted legs, commodious compartments and a velvet lined tray for silverware.

The six Chairs, one master style with arms, and five Side Chairs, are of comfortable and sturdy construction, with seats upholstered in small patterned velour.

Other 10-Piece Bedroom Suites—$198 to $2250



Featured in the August Furniture Sale

Mohair Living Room Suite, —deep cushioned comfort, $239

THE carved solid mahogany curved back, Serpentine front rail and arm fronts of the Divan and Chair, in this Living Room Suite at $239, are of Louis XV inspiration—and give it an elegant distinction. Both pieces are completely covered, even to the backs, with mohair in solid colors, either plain or checked patterns. And the reverse sides of the cushion are covered in an attractive patterned linen frieze for contrast, if you wish it. $239.

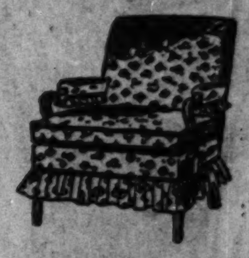
The cushions have small inner springs covered by a layer of white felt—for both comfort and endurance. An outstanding value in the August Sale

Other 2-Piece Living Room Suites—$139.50 to $910

Occasional Pieces

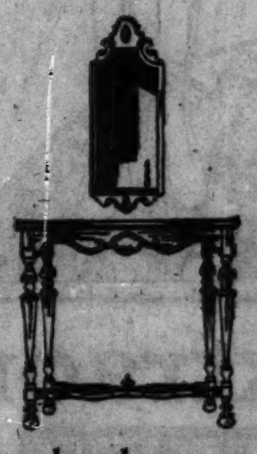
for your individual choice in the August Furniture Sale.

IF you are furnishing your home in your own traditions, group together occasional pieces such as these, to achieve interesting and livable interiors.



Chintz Chairs for Boudoirs, $14.75

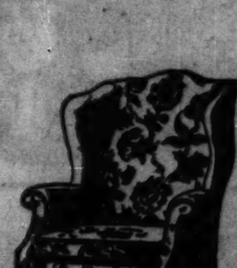
You may select one from a variety of smart chintz coverings. Flower, modern or conventional type coverings in chintz, to accent your color scheme. Removable cushions for added comfort and ruffle trimmings. $14.75.



Console and Mirror for $35.50

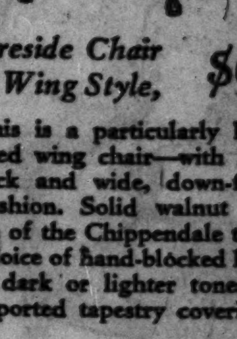
The walnut veneer and American gumwood Console Table as illustrated, with framed Mirror of colonial style, inspire a variety of uses in modern home furnishing—and offer an exceptional value in this Furniture Sale. The two are $35.50.

Console Table . . $19.75
Mirror $15.75



Fireside Chair in Wing Style, $65

This is a particularly large sized wing chair—with high back and wide, down-filled cushion. Solid walnut legs are of the Chippendale type. Choice of hand-blocked linen in dark or lighter tones or imported tapestry coverings.



Book Trough End Tables at $9.50

Of mahogany and gumwood or walnut and gumwood, these convenient end tables are an appealing value at this August Sale price. Next to a davenport or chair they prove indispensable for books, magazines, or lamps.

Fox River Country Holds Charm for Chicagoans

John D. Hertz and A. D. Lasker Owners of Large Estates

By Mme. X.

WHEN we travel abroad we identify ourselves with our home addresses in different degrees. The residents of the state of Kentucky usually register from that state, as well as from their native town. They call themselves Kentuckians, not Louisvillians or Frankforters. So do the people of Virginia, Maine, California, Kansas, and other commonwealths.

But we of Chicago always inscribe ourselves as from Chicago, unless we be of the poor spirited who fear the criticism evoked by our unfortunate political scandals. Bostonians are also New Englanders; New Yorkers have to say that it is either the city or state that entitles them to that appellation. But the citizen from Chicago never writes himself down as from Illinois, or calls himself an Illinoisian. It is to Chicago and to it alone that he admits allegiance. We of this city are all curiously ignorant of and oblivious to this great, fertile, varied commonwealth that stretches from Wisconsin to within the very threshold of the south, for Cairo, our southernmost city, is farther south than Louisville or Washington.

The Fox River Valley.

Perhaps, if we knew our native state better, we should be more inclined to associate ourselves with its euphonious name, for Illinois is one of the most musical of names. This particularly peripatetic pillar of polite piffle recently made the acquaintance of a part of the state so ideally lovely as to make one wonder that it is not more widely renowned in prose and verse. This is the Fox river country, particularly that region in the neighborhood of Cary, Ill., where is situated the 750 acre estate of John D. Hertz, the taxi magnate.

This quiet, gentle stream meanders in leisurely fashion through a lushly verdant landscape, winding — one might even call it reeling—through low-lying meadows which are in their turn inclosed by hills as lovely as any sung to fame by English poets. It was a passageway carved out in some remote age by one of the tremendous glaciers that crept down from the arctic regions and left their ineffaceable marks on this northern hemisphere. These scars are evidenced by gravelly moraines that crop out of steep hillsides, and by odd heaps of prehistoric débris for which ordinary aqueous erosion does not account.

In Fox river valley Mr. and Mrs. Hertz have laid out and occupy a very fine estate wherein they cherish a breed of race horses that are renowned the world over, for Reigh Count and Anita Peabody are already names with which to conjure in the racing world today. This celebrated stud is housed in the latest, most competent set of stables to be found anywhere. Spacious, airy, exquisitely clean, with all modern equipment, are the abodes of these descendants of the race of Pegasus. There is about the whole establishment an atmosphere of gentle care and consideration which results in a responsive gentleness and confidence noticeable in even the most delicate and highbred animals. There is none of the nervous excitability, none of the glaring eyes, none of the shying and jumping so often noticeable in a stud of thoroughbreds. Even the youngest colts have that air of quiet belief in the good intentions of mankind which betokens an intelligent handling.

A Fine Racing Stable.

Mr. Hertz not only buys great racers, but he breeds them out of the world's finest sires and mares, and raises them for this royal sport which, from the beginning of history, has been popular with mankind. His brood mares are as fine a set of utterly maternal creatures as one could find in the entire system of animal life. His stallions are magnificent, his colts full of promise, and the result is a stable that any racing magnate might well envy.

From his earliest childhood, years before he was in the way of being independent financially, Mr. Hertz has been a horse lover. This present equipment is but the realization of lifelong ambitions, born when he was a lad employed among horses, with never a thought that he would ever own one. Mrs. Hertz is as interested in them as is her husband. She is, as all my readers know, the owner of the winner of the Kentucky Derby, Reigh Count. She and her husband are fond of riding and have made long and lovely trails through their place and the neighboring country.

The estate is named "Leona," after their eldest daughter, Mrs. Alfred Ettlinger. There are many houses on the place, ranging from the main house, a handsome and stately structure occupying a fine site overlooking the Fox river valley and the distant hills, to the charming cottages of the superintendent, the gardener, the head horse trainer, the chauffeur, and the rest of the men employed on the place. Besides the fine stables there are roomy dog kennels, chicken houses, greenhouses, toolhouses, and many others. The whole place has a patriarchal air that makes it seem very self-sufficient and self-sustaining.

The Hertzes' nearest neighbors, besides the dwellers in the countryside and nearby town of Cary, are the A. D. Laskers, thirty miles to the east. When first they built their place the Hertzes had to approach it by ill paved country roads, which in the springtime were often impassable for vehicles. Today smooth, fine highways lead to it from every direction.

A Charming House.

The house itself is a roomy, stucco faced mansion with a handsome entrance court. Its airy verandas and terraces command beautiful views on every side. The rooms on the main floor are of stately proportions. The living room has a lofty ceiling that on one side is effectively broken by a railed gallery which connects the

Newport Notables Sail to Gotham for Prize Fight

By Nancy Randolph.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Early days of the week at Newport saw every one making a bee line for New York and the prize fight.

Yacht after yacht lifted anchor and made for anchorage close to the city, and by Thursday morning the late leavers were dashing for the New Haven trains. Vincent Astor and Mrs. Astor, aboard their new German built yacht, with the old Astor name of Nourmahal, took a party of guests to town. The Hermann Oelrichs, on board the Cressida, also attended.

Others who swelled the list of notables in town on Thursday included Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Drexel Biddle Jr., Fitz Hugh Whitehouse, Julian Sloan, W. Goadby Loew, Robert W. Goelet, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Binney, and James Van Alen.

Will Rogers Visits Newport.

Newport had a jolly time Monday, with a visit from the inimitable Mr. Will Rogers.

It isn't that the ubiquitous Mr. Rogers is a stranger to Newport. While he has not, as yet, been enrolled as a member of the cottage colony, there is scarcely a Newport notable who has not sat with him at the speakers' table at some dinner or other given in the metropolitan area.

Then, too, the polo fields of Long Island have often felt the impact of the Rogers mallet during a scratch match, and the visit of the humorist to Newport on Monday via the air route was the occasion for his meeting with many old friends.

Entertained by Notables.

The occasion was the performance he gave, in which he uttered many sallies upon those present that brought forth roars of laughter, in the Casino theater—which is unoccupied on Monday nights, by the repertory players.

Prior to the Rogers performance there was a dinner in his honor at Oakland farm, and following the performance Mr. Borden Harriman gave a supper for him at the King villa. Indeed, the whole atmosphere, as remarked by many, was strongly representative of Palm Beach. Newport, without a doubt, is losing its last vestige of formality, while retaining every aspect of exclusiveness.

Practically every one of note attended the performance. Among them were Mrs. Paul Fitzsimons, Mrs. J. Sergeant Cram, Mrs. T. Shaw Safe, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Norman, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Goelet, and Miss Julia Berwind, all of whom had boxes.

Also present were Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor, Miss Evelyn Burden, Princess Miguel de Braganza, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ogden Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. James Lenox Banks Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Gould Jennings, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Fairfax Cary, Mrs. Drexel Dahlgren, Mr. and Mrs. Snowden A. Fahnestock, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Gerard, Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. B. Widener, Mr. and Mrs. George Crozer, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Fish Webster, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Pierrepont Gilbert, Mrs. Forsyth Wickes, Miss Marian Wickes, Mr. and Mrs. William Goadby Loew, Dr. and Mrs. George Bolling Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Gustave J. S. White, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Norman Ogden Whitehouse, Frazier Jelke, Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius H. Tangeman, Mr. and Mrs. Norman De R. Whitehouse, Mr. and Mrs. Grafton Minot, Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Cameron Church Jr.

Many Dances Listed.

For the rest, Newport is looking with much pride at a calendar full of dances. The noon bathing hour at Bailey's is much more pleasant since every one is filled with anticipation of the day's events.

The Herman Oelrichs have chosen Aug. 18 as the date for the dance they are to have at Rosecliff, the villa that is still sacred to the memory of the late "Tessie" Oelrichs. More than 300 guests will attend the Oelrichs' dance and the supper to follow.

On Aug. 4, Mr. and Mrs. Julian R. Sloan are to have the Clambake club for a dance; while on the 25th, Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice are throwing Mirimar wide for the debutante dance of Diana Dodge; and then, of course, on Aug. 25, marking the close of the horse show and tennis week, will be the dance at Oakland Farm.

Benefit Party at Southampton.

Southampton is resting quietly today. The "Hamptons Fight and Frolics" which filled the Southampton hospital all last night is finally over, and tomorrow the treasurers will begin to count up and see how much money is to benefit the Southampton hospital.

Weeks of preparation went into making the Fight and Frolics a large affair, but Southampton, as everyone knows, is adept at making successes of fairs and fêtes. The high school was jammed and hundreds mobbed "The Post Office," which disposed of some 4,000 articles of more or less value.

Not Mr. Tunney, but Jack Dempsey an equally colorful figure, who arrived at Southampton on "Tex" Rickard's yacht, Maxine, refereed the bouts, which were cheered to the echo by Southampton's younger folk.

Many had tables for the supper which followed the dancing and boxing matches. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Merrill, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Van Vleck, Mrs. Robert F. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Brooks, Mrs. George Faber Downey Jr., and Mrs. Joseph Murray.

Everyone Was There.

The ringside fight watchers included Mr. and Mrs. Leander McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Copley Thaw, Mr. and Mrs. A. Stewart Walker, Mr. and Mrs. L. Gordon Hamersley, Mrs. T. Morrison Carnegie, Judge and Mrs. Morgan O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. Courtland T. Nicoll, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Markoe Robertson, and Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson Potter.

Now, with the fêtes over, Southampton is to turn to dances and recitals. The Charles E. Van Vlecks, who are at Ballyshear, are to give a dance on the third. Mr. and Mrs. Philip D. Armour of Lake Forest arrived this week to occupy Mrs. Patric Armour Valentine's residence on First Neck lane. Mrs. Valentine, now on the continent, will return to Southampton in September.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

MISS SYLVIA PEARSON.

[Bloom Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Donner of 6807 Lakewood avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sylvia Pearson, to Harold G. Hirsh of 1333 Lunt avenue. Mr. Hirsh attended the University of Illinois and is a member of Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity.

MISS RUTH ELVIRA WESTLUND.

[Moffett Photo.]

Dr. Jacob Westlund of Lafayette, Ind., announces the engagement of his daughter, Ruth Elvira, of 6343 Kenwood avenue, to Dr. Frederic Theodore Jung of Sheboygan, Mich.

MRS. THOMAS J. McHUGH.

[Du Bois Photo.]

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Fitzgerald of 2705 South Keeler avenue of the marriage of their daughter, Margaret, to Thomas J. McHugh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McHugh of 4045 West 21st place.

rooms on one side of the second floor with those on the other, giving a charming effect both from below and above. The mansion has a genial, hospitable air in spite of its great size and fine equipment. It is set in a countryside as gracious and charming as any to be found in our more renowned eastern states. Its breezy hilltop is cool and also, so say the Hertzes, mosquitoless, as the wind, always blowing from some point of the compass, drives away both flies and mosquitoes.

Flocks of many kinds of birds fly about the lovely lawns and in and out of the gardens, their presence in such large numbers being made possible by the exclusion of cats and also the systematic warfare against sparrows.

I am sorry for this little, pervasive feathered creature. It isn't popular with bird lovers, and is rather like some of the well meaning, chattering, intrusive, inquisitive people who drive to drink poets, philosophers, and others who need quiet and freedom to accomplish their tasks. The sparrow is a real cockney; the robin is a man of the world; the swallow is a lover of rhythmic motion; the Kentucky cardinal is a devotee of melody; the wren is an exquisite interpreter of life; the bluejay is an arrant boaster and bully; the purple grackle is a well dressed, ill bred upstart [Edward H. Bennett wages war on them at his Lake Forest place, so they have all come to the nearby X. family's country retreat]; the red headed woodpecker is a handsome, self-respecting, but rather arrogant member of the bird family who takes little notice of his feathered friends or of his biped neighbors, but goes about his task of exterminating the insect world.

I beg my reader's pardon for this digression from holding up the mirror to today, which is my job, but having set up outside my window a bird feeding table I have become an observer of their characteristics, and familiar with their manners and customs. If any one living outside the birdless city gardens wants an entertaining institution I advise him or her to set up such a rendezvous for birds where it can be watched without disturbing the feathered visitors. If a bird bath and drinking station be added to the place the pleasure for both birds and mortals is increased.

Political Picnic Approaches.

The great game of politics is often combined with pleasure, and a notable political picnic will be that to be held next Tuesday at Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's beautiful Lake Forest estate, Villa Turicum, when the Woman's Roosevelt Republican club is holding a festival noonday rally there. Its members are invited to meet there, at 12:30 in a "get-together box luncheon" to discuss over sandwiches and salad the various questions of interest to Republican women.

Service for the members has been arranged with the Willett Transportation company which will have motor busses at the Fine Arts building on Michigan avenue at 11 o'clock to convey those attending the picnic to and from Chicago for $1 the round trip.

The principal orator of the day will be Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, who will speak on "The Political Issues of the Hour." As she is one of the most delightful and able speakers of the present time, it will be a great occasion.

Mrs. Harry Hart is president of the club, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen is honorary president, the three vice presidents are Mrs. Murray Nelson, Mrs. Kurt von Zimmerman and Mrs. Howard Linn, Mrs. William R. Cubbins is secretary, Mrs. William A. Nitze is treasurer and Mrs. Clair E. More is chairman of the committee on arrangements. Others on this committee are the Mesdames Nathan L. Blackman, Joseph M. Cudahy, Clyde L. Day, Harry C. Holloway, F. J. Macnish, Folkert Posthuma. The headquarters of the club are at 410 South Michigan avenue. The club provides coffee free to the picnickers.

It promises to be more than usually worth while entertainment. A brilliant and famous speaker, a beautiful country estate, a lovely ride out and back, a gathering of well known women—what could one ask more in the pursuit of politics in the way of incentive for our newest voters to study their duty as citizens? Up to now American women have, in a measure, failed to realize either their power or their responsibilities as citizens of the most remarkable nation yet evolved from the incredible primeval ooze that bred us all. It is occasions like this coming picnic that may help to drive this consciousness home to the everlasting benefit of the country.

Summer Is Speeding By.

Tempus fugit, and it fugits faster in summer than at any other time of the year. August is at hand and a general air of relaxation is observable both in man and nature. Goldenrod is nodding along the wayside and no new work is undertaken in the gardens which adorn the landscape on every hand. Their owners are contented to sit quiet and watch the fruition of their labors.

Grain is ripening in the fields. Woods are thickening and growing dark and full of shadows. Mankind is in a holiday mood. Many families, who have been enjoying their suburban places with father catching the early morning train to go to his office, and mother the later one in search of city bargains, are now packing up their camping outfits and are off for the happy hunting grounds to be found in the wide west, either in the friendly Rocky mountains or at some one or other of the "dude" ranches where days are spent on horseback or in climbing steep trails on foot.

Among these back to nature folk are the Chauncey McCormicks, who have betaken themselves and their three sons to the Diamond G ranch. The Barrett Wendells are likewise there with their youngsters. Also there are the Donald Frosts and their children, of Boston, but with the strong Chicago affiliations of Mrs. Frost's family here, as she was Miss Mary Ryerson, daughter of the late Edward L. Ryerson. Still other Lake Foresters who are or will be part of this ranch colony are the Alfred Cartons and their family; Ralph Poole and his four youngsters, and Edward H. Bennett and his son, "Ted."

Mr. and Mrs. David Adler will soon seek the refreshment of the open air life, and are going to one of Struthers Burt's ranches out west, where they will spend a few weeks, or long enough to gather a pack train together with which to travel through the higher Rockies, sleeping out of doors at night and spending their days in fishing and other open air pursuits, as well as tramping afoot and ahorseback along those fragrant pine shaded trails. It sounds like an ideal program and one well calculated to brush away all cobwebs and other accumulations of a busy city life.

Will Visit Hillman Ranch.

Mrs. James A. Field and Mrs. John T. McCutcheon are meeting at the Hillman ranch, the former with her two children and the latter with her eldest son, Jackie, or John Jr., as he will in time be called. The Hillman ranch is interesting to Chicagoans because it is owned and run by a former Chicago girl. Mrs. Paula Hillman is a daughter of the late Louis Huck and therefore is a half sister of the late Mrs. Marshall Field II, who was the lovely Albertine Huck, one of Louis Huck's three beautiful daughters.

Mrs. Field and Mrs. McCutcheon have selected the Hillman ranch because of the fact that it is within easy reach of the two well known ranches in the Big Horn valley owned and occupied by the former's aunts, the Countess of Portsmouth and Mrs. Malcolm Moncrieffe. It is charming country thereabouts with steep mountain trails, beaver dams, trout streams, and other concomitants for the interesting out of door life so refreshing to the city mortal.

The writer well remembers visiting at one of these two ranches in that valley in the autumn some years ago when wild fowl of all kinds abounded and it was open season for them. Everyday we went off on riding picnics, the men with their guns to wing a few birds and with their fishrods for the streams. In the sheep grazing meadows at that time grew generous crops of mushrooms. So our daily diet was wild duck, quail, snipe, partridges, or prairie chicken, with side dishes of fresh mushrooms, a menu that would have made Lucullus himself envious. We became so surfeited with these delicacies that it was a real event when we had mutton chops and baked potatoes.

An Odd Situation.

To return to a previous paragraph: The owner and manager of the Hillman ranch is an extraordinary personality to find in just this sort of job. She is, or used to be, the very essence of the exquisitely worldly and luxurious. Blonde, beautiful, highly educated and with a fine sense for books and music and most luxurious tastes, it is hard to imagine her as running a "dude" ranch in a country almost entirely devoid of domestic service. This absence means a good deal of hard, manual labor for any one in her position.

If report be true, she is in a rather unusual situation, as she is divorced from her second husband, formerly the owner of this place, but as she put a good deal of money into this enterprise she not only is staying on to look after the investment and make it bring in some return, but the report is that she is also hiring her former husband to help run the concern, as he knows more about the place and the men working on it than any one else there. Life in its mysterious course lands many people in places that could never have been predicted by even the most astute seer.

It's delightful to be able to go away for August to the fascinating life lived on western ranches, but those who leave this part of the country to do so leave more behind than their kind in other summer regions do when going west. For one thing—and it's a good, big thing—they will miss the last few weeks of Ravinia's open air opera, and this is a real loss. Ravinia always starts on a high key, and then seems to go higher and higher, until you wonder to what exalted peaks music is able to rise.

One Tenor Leaves, Another Arrives.

August will be by no means the negligible month of her nearly three months of music. While we lose Giovanni Martelli, the world's greatest dramatic tenor, we gain Tito Schipa, its most popular lyric tenor.

Louis Eckstein had hard work to persuade Martinelli to come this year to Ravinia. The famous singer had promised his wife and children that he and they would have a summer together on their farm in Lombardy. It was a case of the irresistible [Louis Eckstein] meeting the immovable [Martinelli]. Both lost and both won, as Mr. Eckstein got Martinelli's promise to sing here up to August and the latter induced Mr. Eckstein to let him off in time to return for the last glowing days of a Lombardy summer when the grapes begin to ripen and hang down in great clusters in those gracefully garlanded vineyards of northern Italy.

August will be still further made a banner month at Ravinia by the fact that Lucrezia Bori, one of that organization's most popular artists, is returning to it early in this month for the final four weeks of the season.

To have three such great sopranos as Bori, Elizabeth Rethberg, and Yvonne Gall in the same company makes Ravinia the great operatic center of the world for the time being. Even without them and with the two Florences, Miss Easton and Miss Macbeth, and Margery Maxwell, Ina Bourskaya, Mme. Claussens, Gladys Swartout, together with Schipa, Johnson, Danise, Rothier, Trevisan, Mojica, Chamlee, D'Angelo, Defrere, Paltrinieri, Tokatyan, Lazzari, Basiola, Ananian, Ravinia should be the world's operatic goal during its matchless summer season. I do not wonder at the large crowds that nightly gather there; I only wonder that they are not larger and that more of the so called cultivated people, whose names bulk large on Chicago's social calendar, aren't there more often.

Much Beauty Missed.

There is much wining and dining along the north shore and many balls and dances, formal and otherwise, and late hours are common in spite of that imperious early train to town that is taken by most of the men of that long line of suburbs, but there is only a small attendance of this fashionable element at these marvelous performances.

Fortunately Ravinia doesn't depend on this somewhat insignificant section of our social system. This chronicler is not censuring those who do not make use of their opportunities, but is sorry that they have not the capacity to enjoy this one of the most exquisitely artistic treats open to the people who live in this part of the world. Forever closed to them is that indescribable delight which some get from such a presentation as that of "Le Chemineau," ten days ago, when Yvonne Gall, Danise, Rothier, Mojica, Defrere, and others of the company, together with orchestra under the direction of Hasselmans, gave such a rendering of this bit of human drama as will never be forgotten by those who were present.

For entire enjoyment of it an understanding of the French tongue is a great help, it must be confessed as it is one of the genuine dramas set to music, a piece wherein the words count for more than they do in most operas. But even without this accomplishment it is a notable performance and well worth the attendance of every opera connoisseur. I, for one, hope that Mr. Eckstein will reproduce it at least once more this season. He says that it "is caviar to the general" and only makes an appeal to the really musical, but as this chronicler does not qualify under this classification and yet got a deep enjoyment out of the presentation, she ventures to differ with this expert diagnostician of what is musically desired by the adjacent public—a bold thing to do. Fourteen years of devoted personal management and direction of Ravinia have made Mr. Eckstein one of the world's remarkable impresarios, so to differ with him is to confess one's self pretty much of a fool. Having made this confession, I'd better close the subject.

French Divorce Mill Is Shown to Have Drawback

PARIS. —(AP)— Recent agitation against American divorces in Paris has served a secondary purpose of disclosing a big increase in divorces among the French.

There has been a corresponding drop in the French marriage rate great enough to cause official anxiety. Changing economic conditions and moral viewpoint receive most of the blame although other factors are held partly responsible.

It is pointed out that a half million new homes have been built in the United States since the war and 200,000 in Germany whereas little building of any kind has been done in France outside of the devastated areas.

New statistics show that in parts of France unaffected by the war there are fewer homes today than in 1914. Lack of lodgings is therefore accepted by some officials as explaining why there were 3,000 less marriages during the first half of this year than in the corresponding period of 1927.

Official Fathers May Be More So

To be eligible for the presidency of the French republic a man must be the father of at least seven children is one of the provisions of a bill proposed by M. Jean Rameau, with the idea of increasing the dwindling population of France.

A Frenchman who aspires to be a cabinet minister would have to have at least six children, under the proposed law. If he had only five in his family he could rise no higher than the senate. With four he might aspire to the chamber of deputies.

To be mayor of a French town a man would have to have two children, and even a town counciler would be required to have one child as one of his qualifications for office.

MANDEL BROTHERS

Lady Douglas Divorced from Husband No. 4

THE much married Lady Sholto Douglas is now but a half length behind Peggy Joyce, her closest rival in the great matrimonial handicap. For, just as Dame Rumor is predicting the fifth nuptials of the famous American actress, Lady Douglas obtains her fourth divorce. Mrs. Jean Nash, with five to her credit, still has a commanding lead.

Husband No. 4 was Count Fernand Berthier de Sauvigny, a cousin of the Duc d'Orleans, "legitimist king of France." And despite Lady Douglas' three previous experiments, the marriage was even less successful than the others had been. Their wedded bliss lasted just forty-eight hours.

Lady Sholto Douglas—her favorite title of the several at her command—was originally Georgina Mosselmans, daughter of a wealthy Amsterdam diamond merchant. She was heiress to a large share of the $40,000,000 estate of her grandfather, George Doorepaal of the East India trade, and in addition she benefited by the will of an aunt, who left another $25,000,000. In the face of subsequent events, it was fortunate for her that she could pay the bills. Royal match-making is an expensive pastime.

Army Officer First.

At the turn of the century sixteen year old Georgina launched her matrimonial career by marrying George Barnard, an English army officer. So many things have happened since then that very little is known about Capt. Barnard, not even the exact date of their wedding. But their relations seem to have become somewhat strained, and in 1920 they were divorced. Perhaps Georgina was becoming ambitious for a loftier title. She soon had several of those. In quick succession she became an English lady, a Turkish princess, and a French countess—not forgetting the detail of a highly played up divorce between husbands.

In 1921 Mrs. Barnard Mosselmans, as she then chose to call herself, was cutting a wide swath through London society. And presently appeared an unattached gentleman with a title. This was Lord Sholto George Douglas, son of the Marquis of Queensberry and with a fortune of about $2 cash. He, too, was fresh from a divorce, and promptly began paying court, at which he was an adept. After four or five proposals he was accepted, and Georgina Mosselmans was in undisputed possession of her first title.

Both Agree to Divorce.

For three years the ageing but spry Lord Douglas flitted from one amorous entanglement to another, while his lady paid the bills. By that time they both willingly agreed to a separation, but British divorce laws are the strictest in the world. So the lord obligingly spent a week with a young blonde at an expensive hotel, and gayly mailed the bill to his wife. The court granted a divorce in five minutes but it lasted a week in the newspapers.

With so much freedom again at her disposal, Lady Douglas could think of only one thing to do with it. That was to get married again. She went to Monte Carlo, where at the gaming tables she would doubtless find some handsome, earnest and titled young man without any spendthrift habits.

Seated at the roulette tables in the Casino night after night, together with a dwindling pile of chips and a dejected expression, could be found Prince Mohammed Burhan-ed-Din.

Prince Burhan secured an introduction, and Lady Douglas was charmed by his elegant Oriental manners. She sat with him constantly at the tables, and staked him when he lost. And while the chips disappeared rapidly under the cue of the croupier, Prince Burhan told her of his misfortunes.

A few weeks later they were married. Prince Burhan insisted upon a Mohammedan wedding, which was performed at Baden-Baden by an impressive imam in a long robe. The new princess handed him 500,000 francs as a dowry, and in his name bought a magnificent old palace in Vienna. Life for Lady Douglas assumed a rosy tint, and she went to the British consul to have the marriage solemnized. But she found that she had forfeited her British citizenship and was no longer under the protection of the law.

Lady Douglas went to London three months later for business, and when she returned to Vienna the prince's valet coldly requested her to keep away from the palatial home—which she had purchased. His Royal Highness sent her a note—just to let her know [in case she was interested] that they were no longer married. He had repeated three times the magic formula: "You are not my wife!" Thus, according to all Mohammedan rules and regulations, they were divorced!

For Love Only.

That was in November, 1925. Disappointed in matrimony, Georgina resumed the title of Lady Douglas and swore solemnly for the newspapers that "if she married again it would be for love only." Just ten months later she decided that she was in love.

But, as in the two previous affairs, it turned out that she had married just another empty title. This time it was the Count de Sauvigny, member of the once reigning family of France. They were married in a London registry office in November, 1926, after a courtship of about two months, and moved into the Countess's beautiful Parisian home.

Exactly fifty-six minutes later, according to her story, the bride discovered that the count was a drug addict, and promptly left him flat. At any rate, it is known that Count Fernand left his wife's home two days after the marriage. Lady Douglas then filed a petition for divorce, and Count de Sauvigny retaliated by suing her for a mere $20,000,000. Under the French law, he asserts, he is entitled to half their joint possessions—which means her $40,000,000. The financial tangle has not yet been settled, but the divorce was granted just the other day.

Tries to Crash Movies.

While the case was dragging on in the courts, Lady Douglas sailed to America, expressing the intention of crashing the movies. She hired a press agent and had her feet—which she claims are size No. 2—insured for $100,000. In New York all the papers were informed that she had come to the states for a dual purpose; to go on the screen and to find herself a nice American husband. Followed by an avalanche of press clippings, she set out for the coast.

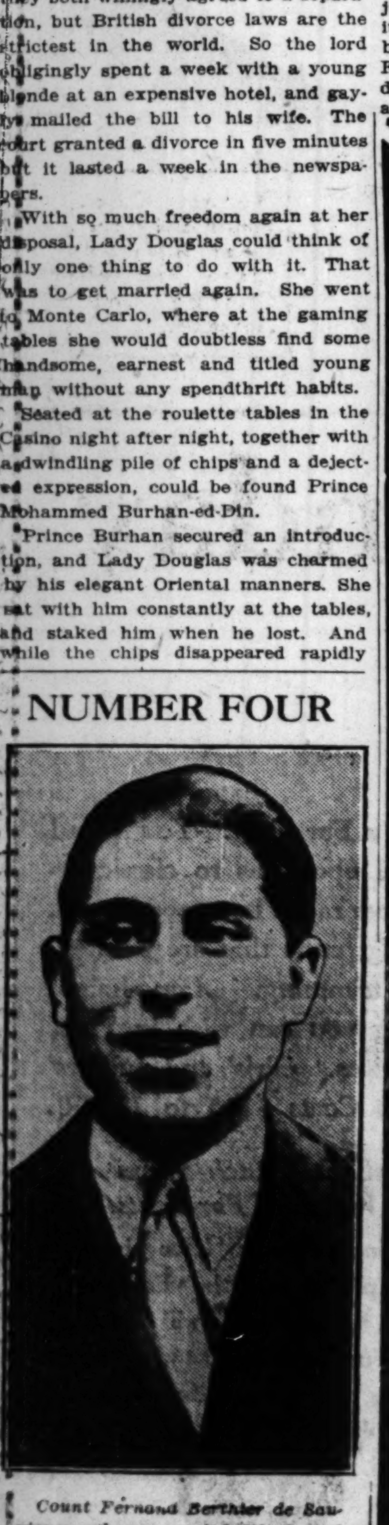
But in two months she was back at the pier, still single—and minus the press agent. "Why," she exclaimed, "they only offered me $1,000 a week!" That wouldn't even buy her shoes and gloves. And the movie colony was extraordinarily lacking in its renowned gayety. Back to London for her!

There seems to be only one thing left for her to do. Perhaps the cables are buzzing even now with the news of No. 5.

STILL SEEKING ROMANCE

Lady Sholto Douglas, who four husbands ago was Georgia Mosselmans. She is still busy in a $40,000,000 game of hearts.

NUMBER FOUR



Count Fernand Berthier de Sauvigny, whose married life lasted only 48 hours.

Protect Your Skin from Sun and Wind

Tan, says, fashion, is becoming. But sunburn—never! Besides, it's painful and ruinous to the complexion. You can enjoy summer without endangering your good looks. Simply rub into your skin, before going out, a generous coating of Eptol Cream. You can easily make it yourself. It vanishes and gives your skin a lovely texture, protecting it from wind and sun, keeping it soft and unwrinkled. Ask your druggist for Eptol and follow the simple directions.

Criticism of Institute Gallery Bears Fruit

Efforts Will Be Made to Lessen Excessive Heat

By Eleanor Jewett.

THIS letter speaks for itself:

"I am writing to you to say that your criticism of the heat of our galleries bore fruit and that in a meeting held yesterday it was agreed to endeavor to prevent the heat from coming through the skylights, and I was authorized to make an expenditure to cover the cost.

"The situation upstairs is very difficult. The bridge necessarily had to be built rather low and the heat gets in between the two skylights and it is impossible to get it out. It is really a sort of hothouse arrangement, but then we are going to try again, as we have tried in the past, to overcome it.

"Sincerely yours,
"C. H. BURKHOLDER."

Mr. Burkholder is secretary and business manager of the Art institute. The galleries in question are the ones in the east wing which shelter all the temporary exhibitions and which in summer are as frightfully hot as any in Dante's well known lower world. Given a hot day outside, the heat inside these rooms will be twenty and thirty degrees higher, with never a breath of wind. The guards, on certain summer days, have to be changed each half hour so that all their vitality is not drained. Were a guard permitted to stay an entire day through, and that day a hot one, he would be as wilted by night as a sun stricken lettuce and as incapable of refreshment.

Hard on Visitors.

The public is no hardier than the guards. Each summer, visitors to the summer shows have run the serious danger of heat prostration. Necessarily, in self preservation, they have slighted the exhibits and made of their visits a rush call. In and then out, and between the two a lost wave and a drenched handkerchief. It has been a serious drawback to the value of the galleries during July and August, and sometimes September, months which see thousands of strangers on our streets.

It has been suggested that a cold air system, such as some theaters have, might be installed; or the east wall cut through, providing a draught; or, at very least, electric revolving fans be put in in profusion. Whatever is to be done, will now, in the light of Mr. Burkholder's letter, be done. For that we should all be grateful.

Exhibit by Karl A. Buehr.

Meanwhile, the summer exhibits are under way. Among the most important are the paintings by Karl A. Buehr and Carl Wuermer. The late Oliver Dennett Grover, himself a magnificent painter, said of a picture by Buehr: "If a foreign artist had painted that picture and sent it to Chicago for exhibition it would create a sensation." We are, unfortunately, still so provincial that a prophet among us is without honor. A strange twist to the name, a flavor of salt seas and far lands beyond their rolling, and we accept, appreciate—sometimes worship.

Karl Buehr, as an instructor in the Art Institute school, has been identified with its growth almost since its foundation. He is a National Academician. He has a marvelous sense of color and possesses as well superb draughtsmanship. The sincerity of his art is keenly felt in his work. The current exhibit of paintings proves his excellent qualities to the hilt.

Mr. Buehr has another asset which is not a usual occurrence among artists. He has a young daughter nearly as talented as himself, though she works in a gentler and more feminine way. Mary Buehr is often found now in the same exhibitions as her father, and her delightful flower paintings and still life have won for her prizes and praise.

Landscapes by Carl Wuermer.

Across from the canvases of Mr. Buehr are fascinating landscapes by Carl Wuermer. Mr. Wuermer has developed an individual technique.

As a Corot landscape may be told by its delicate, detached leaf, so may a landscape by Wuermer be told by its etched effect of bough and leaves. In fact, Mr. Wuermer bites each detail of his picture upon his canvas with the same sure touch as though he were using an acid instead of paint. His trees stand out, graceful spirits framing the picture with their chill embrace. They are dryads just changing into bark and fiber. Their little hands are the leaves caught like a fretwork of sensitive pattern against the sky.

In the current exhibit of his work Mr. Wuermer deals chiefly with the rolling hills and flowing meadows, the cultivated farming lands of the east, the formal landscape of New York state. His summer studio is at Woodstock, N. Y., and the country around him has served admirably for model.

Two Artists Share Honors.

John A. Spelman and Charles A. Wilimovsky share an adjoining gallery. Last fall the name of Wilimovsky was first noised abroad with great success through the medium of the Women's Aid. His prints created a mild sensation. Then his water colors were well received, and now his is the coveted opportunity of a one-man show at the Art institute.

His painting is distinctive. It is, almost, choice. The Chicago artists' exhibition gave us a taste of his ability in five pictures. The southwest is something personal to him. He paints feelingly and with a careful use of color and of plot. His pictures are thought through, not thrown together. He paints poor farms, lonely hills, scrub animals, white clouds, and pale skies, but, though his story runs along on a minor key, there is nothing melancholy or embittered about his work. Quite simply, it is himself, what he sees and feels and thinks and loves, in pictures as carefuly cut as an intaglio.

The work of John Spelman is much too well known to need any discussion. He paints the north woods and lakes. His canvases are brimming with pine scent and the ripple of water. White birch and scarlet maples bend over his camping trail. He pitches his tent in woods where the deer are tame, because they do not know man. A red squirrel drops acorn shells on him as he sits at his easel and at night loons call in the silver quiet of the moon.

Mr. Spelman is a lover of the out of doors. He is a lover of forest trails and river paths. From spring through summer into fall his pictures take you on a marvelous vacation. The beauties you may have missed he had the time to pick up for you. You will find them in his paintings. Here a sun flecked leaf; there a tall, black pine; here a cascade of foam; there the wide, calm sweep of a lake.

Three Young Painters.

In a neighboring gallery are the work of three young artists. Of the three, Paul Trebilcock is the most experienced and the more assured in his position. He has won many important prizes. His self-portrait ["Portrait of a Painter"] was awarded the $750 Logan prize in the Chicago artists' exhibition this spring. His portraits are, generally speaking, painted with great insight and the painting of the accessories is marvelous. Mr. Trebilcock has an exceptional way of handling lengths of pearls, a vase, a rose, fur, or a gown.

In the same gallery may be seen the paintings of Francis Chapin and J. Theodore Johnson. Mr. Chapin is now abroad, having won the Bryan Lathrop scholarship for excellence of work. His painting of the Jackson park lagoon was awarded the $1,000 prize in the Chicago galleries members' show in May.

Mr. Johnson won the Bryan Lathrop traveling scholarship last year and this winter succeeded in establishing himself in the eyes of the public as a promising artist, a successful painter. His portrait of his wife won the $500 Logan medal last February in the Chicago artists's show. The Arts club allowed him a one-man show this spring.

A Note and an Inquiry.

The Business Men's Art club opened its exhibition at the Art institute on Wednesday. They have had exhibits in their own gallery and at the Allerton house.

Through the mail comes a request from a young artist, new to Chicago, Frank L. Blundell, for the names of art clubs or societies to which he might attach himself. What clubs are there? Aside from the Palette and Chisel club, I cannot think of any strictly artist club which is made up of artist members brought together for work and good fellowship.

What other art clubs are there—not organizations, or societies or galleries, but clubs?

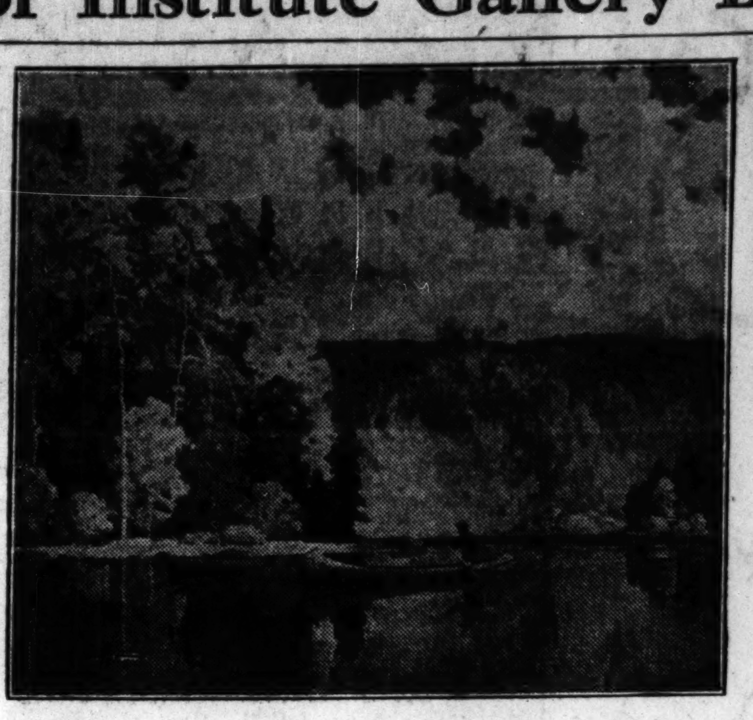
In the rotogravure section today is a picture of the unveiling of the monument to Woodrow Wilson at Prague. The monument was modeled by Albin Polasek, head of the department of sculpture at the Art institute of Chicago, who spent last summer in Prague for the purpose. Mr. Polasek was present at the unveiling.



"VACATION DAYS," by John A. Spelman. Mr. Spelman is one of several artists whose one-man shows opened last Wednesday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. The exhibitions will continue through September, with a closing date set for October 1st.

Valley of 10,000,000 Roses Blooms Again for the Bulgarians

PHILIPPOPOLIS, Bulgaria.—(P)—Bulgarias's far famed Valley of Roses has once more captured the world's markets for precious attar.

As far as the eye can see a red carpet covers this enchanting region and the peasants smile because they see the end of a long period of depression.

Eighty-five per cent of the world's supply of rose essence, the base of all perfumes, is produced in this district which stretches for 90 miles through one of the most picturesque regions in Europe.

The delicate rose vines suffered severe damage in recent earthquakes, but this has been overcome and the crop this year will be only 30 per cent under normal.

There are 43,000 rose gardens in Bulgaria centered in the districts of Philippopolis, Kazanlik, Karlovo, Nova Zagora, Stara Zagora and Thirpana. A hundred thousand Bulgarians, about 14,000 families, have no other means of livelihood.

The rosebuds are shipped to [illegible] distilleries. More than 4,000 pounds of buds are required to yield one pound of attar, which sells in the United States for $250.

The peasants are still depressed by one factor. They believe that the American girl is using less scent than ever before. The latest figures for the export of attar of roses to the United States barely reach 10,000 ounces for a year compared with an average annual demand of 100,000 ounces before the war.

The cultivation of roses has survived hard fought battles with tobacco and oil. The more profitable tobacco plant was found to require less care and it seemed for a while likely to displace the rose vine.

Oil was recently discovered in the heart of the Valley of Roses, and the peasants, excited by dreams of an El Dorado, began to welcome a stampede of speculators and neglect their gardens.

Spoiled Youths Growing Up to Lives of Crime

By Dr. W. Beran Wolfe.

THE recent announcement that an eastern medical center is to join the war on crime by studying the cry-baby and the ne'er-do-well is a hopeful sign that the problem of crime is being taken out of the hands of over-enthusiastic reformers and turned over to the psychiatrists. The Loeb-Leopold case, the Snyder-Gray murder, the brutal Hickman kidnaping might all have been prevented if the parents and teachers of the chief actors in these tragedies could have recognized that the children were pampered. Remedial measures might have been instituted before it was too late.

Ours is the age of the pampered child. In our anxiety to get away from the brutality that Charles Dickens described in his novels of child life, we have swung to the opposite extreme and have erred on the side of too much softness. It is the pampered child of good family, raised in the finest surroundings [as often as the ragged urchin of the slums who grows up in an atmosphere of crime and takes defiance of the law as a matter of course], who develops into the murderer, the confidence man, the hobo, the drug addict, the drunkard, or the suicide.

A Hothouse Orchid.

A pampered child is like a hothouse orchid that grows beautifully so long as some one is constantly protecting it. Such a child is as dependent on the solicitude of its parents as the orchid is on the gardener, and when it is faced with the ordinary responsibilities of life is as incapable of making a good adjustment to reality as the orchid is of braving a cold March wind. It is quite impossible for any human being to be pampered all his life. Sooner or later every one must grow up and solve his problems on his own. Pampered children are often good children—so long as they are completely pampered; but the effects of their vicious dependency come to the surface when they meet their first big problem.

As the number of problems which every one must meet is not great, it is possible to predict with some accuracy just when a pampered child will develop the traits that make him a criminal or neurotic adult. The critical situations are: The birth of a younger brother or sister, the loss of a pampering parent, severe illness, school, adolescence, the beginning of a business career, marriage, the loss of a pampering husband or wife, childbirth, menopause, approaching old age. A dentist aptly compared a pampered child to a decayed tooth: "It looks very well until you give it a hard nut to crack. Then it goes to pieces!"

Suicide His Gesture.

College is one of these hard nuts which may be the downfall of the pampered child, because life in college demands courage, independence, and the social feeling, none of which may be learned in the hothouse atmosphere in which the pampered child is educated at home. Suicide is the gesture of a pampered child, unprepared for the realities of life, and my analysis of the suicide notes shows that the individuals who choose this way out of their difficulties are incapable of going it alone and want to shift the blame to their parents or to the bitterness of the world.

Recently a student asked a friend what he would do if the girl he loved turned him down. His classmate answered, "I'd go out and find another!" This is the normal attitude. But the first boy, a pampered child, who had never been refused anything in his life, went home and committed suicide. Suicide occurs so frequently during adolescence because this is the first time most youngsters are separated from the hothouse atmosphere of their homes and their pampering families and forced to shift for themselves.

The pampered child suffers from an inferiority complex when he compares himself with normal children, in much the same way that the hothouse orchid might suffer from an inferiority complex if it compared itself with a hardy scrub pine. Pampering parents forget that in brushing aside every obstacle from the paths of their overloved children they are actually robbing them of valuable opportunities for growth.

He Never Learns.

Many a pampered child manages to survive school only to find a hard nut in the business world. Understanding human nature is essential to success in business, but the pampered child has learned neither a sense of responsibility, fellowship, and coöperation nor the necessary perseverance and integrity which business demands. Several courses remain open to him. On the one hand he may go in for crime, get-rich-quick schemes, wildcat investment ventures, and attempt to regain his childhood paradise of boundless power and admiration without the training which ordinary mortals must undergo to attain success. On the other hand, he may take refuge in neurosis, a disease in which various physical symptoms, such as nervousness, headaches, sleeplessness, vague fears, and the like, become substitutes for real performance. The open road of the hobo, a classic evasion of useful work, is another career open to the pampered child.

The pampered child's failure in business need not occur as soon as he takes up a minor clerkship. The hothouse environment may be extended for a period of years, until the pampered child, for reasons which seem unfathomable to the lay person, suddenly suffers a nervous breakdown.

Mental Bankruptcy.

Psychiatrists, by carefully investigating the facts of the nervous breakdown, usually have been able to show that it occurs when some new responsibility has been thrown on an individual's shoulders or just before he has had to make some momentous decision whose consequences would affect his future. This nervous breakdown is not the mysterious thing that it is supposed to be. It is simply a declaration of mental bankruptcy in the face of difficulties.

Love and marriage, however, are the hardest problems for the pampered child to solve. The increase in divorce and unhappy marriage is due largely to the fact that more and more pampered children are growing up into problem adults who refuse to make the normal concessions and compromises necessary in married life.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

School at Winona Starts This Week

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Rev. A. C. Zenos, D.D., LL.D., of the Presbyterian Theological seminary [McCormick], is the leading member of the faculty of the Winona Summer School of Christian Education, Winona Lake, Ind., which begins Saturday and continues to Aug. 17. Dr. Zenos is an author and teacher whose reputation has extended nationally and even internationally. He is stated clerk of the Chicago Presbytery. The announcement from Winona says, "Dr. Zenos has the reputation of being the greatest biblical scholar in the Presbyterian church."

The Winona Lake Summer School of Christian Education is a standard training school, teaching the standard courses, approved by the denominations represented in the international council of religious education, giving credit applicable to the leadership training diplomas of all denominations.

Other members of the faculty are the Rev. Gerrit Verkuyl, Ph.D., D.D., Chicago; the Rev. J. A. Garber, Ph.D., professor of religious education, Lane Theological seminary, Cincinnati, O. Three women who will have charge of the primary work and story telling, are Miss Marie Leberman, Chicago; Miss Elizabeth Whitehouse, Philadelphia, Pa., and Mrs. Venice Bigelow Jackson, Chicago Presbyterian training school.

Beginning Saturday and continuing to Aug. 25 there will be conducted at Winona a school of sacred music. Dean Robert C. McCutchan of the De Pauw university school of music will have charge of the teaching faculty. A music festival will be held Aug. 12-16. The international and interdenominational Bible conference for which Winona Lake, Ind., is especially famous, will be held Aug. 17-26.

THE VERY REV. J. W. R. MAGUIRE, C. S. V.
[Matzene Photo.]

The Very Rev. J. W. R. Maguire, C. S. V., is the new president of the St. Viator college, Bourbonnais, Ill., appointed to fill the place of the Rev. J. V. Rheams, C. S. V., the retiring president. Father Maguire has been vice president of the college since 1921 and is now dean of sociology in which department it is understood he will continue to teach.

Father Maguire received his education at St. Viator college, at the Catholic university of America, Washington, D. C., and at Columbia university, New York City. At the age of 30 he was ordained for the Viatorian Order in 1914 by Bishop Thomas J. Shahan, retiring rector of the Catholic university of America, and has the distinction of being the first priest ordained at the new Catholic university.

At the outbreak of the war Father Maguire was among the first to offer his services and was sent over to France with some of the first A. E. F. contingents and remained there until after hostilities had ceased. On his return he was appointed by President Wilson on a committee of unemployment and this brought him into contact with the American Federation of Labor and also with legislative gatherings in labor interests where he has been active and useful.

He is director of Catholic Legislative service of Illinois; chairman of the department of economics of the National Conference of Catholic Charities; member of the executive committee of the department of social action of the National Catholic Welfare council, and formerly vice president of the State Conference of Public Welfare.

[Waters Photo.]

The Rev. Charles B. Althoff, D. D., today celebrates the 25th anniversary of his ministry, having been ordained in Louisville, Ky., July 26, 1903. He is pastor of the Lorimer Memorial Baptist church, 73d street and St. Lawrence avenue. The anniversary sermon will be preached this morning at 10:45 by the Rev. Johnston Myers, D. D., and this evening at 8 o'clock the Rev. C. Morehouse will speak.

Dr. Althoff has been the pastor of only two churches during these 25 years. For the first ten years he was pastor of the Hazelwood Baptist church of Louisville, Ky., which he founded and built, and for the last fifteen years he has served the Lorimer Memorial Baptist church of Chicago. During his pastorate the beautiful new edifice in which they are now worshiping was built.

Dr. Althoff was born in Essex, England, of Scotch-English parents. His grandfather was John Blair of Scotland, master ship builder and man of letters. His mother, Mary Blair Althoff, assisted C. H. Spurgeon, London, England, in his work with students and financially aided the founder of the Salvation Army, Gen. Booth, when he began his work in London. Dr. Althoff received his early education in London and was known as the "boy preacher" after he came to New York, having received a license to preach from the First Baptist church of East New York, N. Y.

Later he received his training at the University of Louisville, Ky., and at the Southern Baptist Theological seminary. For many years he has been a director of the Layman company, founded by the late Thomas Kane, publishers of stewardship and tithing literature.

Plans have been accepted by the board of the River Forest Methodist Episcopal church for remodeling, refurnishing and enlarging. The church was built in 1914 during the pastorate of the Rev. Edward G. Schutz and was considered a model suburban church building. In the remodeling the exterior of the church will not be changed except on the west end where the addition will be built. The cost of the improvements will be $35,000.

Mrs. Amanda Asp, 6522 Nixon avenue, Norwood Park, is opening her home and grounds to the friends of the St. Ansgarius Swedish Episcopal church, 5648 Lincoln avenue, on Thursday. The Ladies' Aid society of the parish will serve a luncheon at 1 p. m. and are preparing for about 200 guests. After the luncheon there will be an open air service addressed by the rector, the Rev. William Tullberg. The proceeds are to be applied to the building fund for the new church.

CHURCH NEWS

Laodamas Deligiannis, a Greek boy of Chicago, has distinguished himself by winning coveted honors at the Howe school, Episcopal institution at Howe, Ind., of which Dr. Charles Herbert Young, formerly of Chicago, is rector. The boy has just been awarded the medal for Christian manliness and courtesy, which each year is conferred upon a student of the school by vote of the student body and faculty. He also was elected president of the senior class and captain of his cadet company in the school and was a member of the football and basketball teams. He is 17 years of age and lives with his parents at 1239 Jarvis avenue.

The Rev. Lawrence C. Ferguson, first assistant to Dr. George Craig Stewart, rector at St. Luke's church, Evanston, has accepted a call to the rectorship of St. James' church, South Bend, Ind. He will begin his work at South Bend Sept. 1 and will continue to have charge of the services at St. Luke's during the month of August while Dr. Stewart is away on vacation. The Rev. Mr. Ferguson was formerly rector of St. Simon's church, Chicago, and also Grace church, Hinsdale, Ill.

News has been received that the Rev. Bryan S. Stoffer, a representative in India of the First Congregational church, Wilmette, Ill., has been appointed president of the American college in Madura, India. The Rev. Dr. Stoffer has been in India since 1923, not yet having completed his first term as a foreign missionary.

The college is one of the most important in India.

Dr. Stoffer was born in Georgetown, O., and educated at Ashland and Oberlin colleges. Just before sailing for India in 1923 he received the degree of doctor of philosophy from the University of Chicago. The college at Madura was founded by the American board in 1842 and is one of earliest mission schools of supervised secondary education in south India. There are five Americans and 23 Indian teachers on the faculty with an attendant physician and 453 students.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock the cornerstone of St. Michael's high school, Hudson avenue and Eugenie street, will be laid, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Francis A. Rempe, officiating. The school building of three stories will contain 29 rooms with every modern equipment, including a gymnasium at the southern end. The northern end of the building will be occupied by the girls under the direction of the School Sisters of Notre Dame. The boys will be at the southern end under the Brothers of Mary. It is expected that the new building will be completed by Feb. 1.

About 200 from Chicago, including laymen and women are leaving this week to make the journey to the International Eucharistic congress which will meet in Sidney, Australia, beginning Sept. 6. Five groups will be led by the following leaders: from the North Shore by the Rev. A. J. Mescher, pastor of St. Joseph' church, Waukegan; from the south side by the Rev. J. Meaney, O. S. A. of St. Rita's church, 63d street; from Glen Ellyn, Ill., by the Rev. Walter Fasnacht; from Morton Grove by the Rev. Francis Bergs; and another by the Rev. Maurice A. Dorney, pastor of St. Lucy church and chairman of transportation for the Eucharistic congress two years ago in Chicago. Many prominent prelates from Europe and from the eastern states passed through Chicago last week already on the way.

Bishop William F. Oldham, who retired at the last general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church at Kansas City, Mo., will become a member of the faculty of the Chicago Evangelical institute, 1754 Washington boulevard, a training school for missionaries and evangelists. Bishop Oldham, who has seen many years of service in India, Malaya, and South America, will give courses in comparative religions and modern missions the coming year.

The Rev. Caradoc J. Morgan, pastor of the Howard Community church, 1405 Howard street, has commented favorably in a communication to his people on President Coolidge's habit of church attendance. These are some of his comments: "Vacation time is the one time of the year when many consistent churchgoers persuade themselves that they can be excused from going to church, especially when they find themselves in a part of the country where there is no church. Even at that, Calvin Coolidge takes the trouble to inquire about the nearest church and goes. There are few things which reveal the character of Coolidge like his insistence on going to church on Sunday. His Americanism is made up of the traditions of the first settlers of America, who believed it was a civic duty as well as a religious obligation to go to church on Sunday."

H. Lawrence Choate, Washington, D. C., formerly president of the Chicago Assembly of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, is chairman of the committee on arrangements for the 42d national convention of the brotherhood to be held in Washington in October, preceding the triennial convention of the Episcopal church.

◆

Another Chicago minister who received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity is the Rev. John C. Page, for eight years teacher of Bible doctrine at the Moody Bible institute. The degree was received from Wheaton college.

The Chicago Fundamentals Ministers' union will hold a Bible conference tomorrow afternoon and evening at the Bethesda Evangelical Free church, 11240 South Indiana avenue, the Rev. Alvin Prestholt, pastor. At 3 p. m. there will be a missionary address by the Rev. E. E. Shields, home director and treasurer of the Russian Missionary society; at 6 p. m., supper and a fellowship meeting; the evening address will be given at 8 p. m. by the Rev. W. G. Crook, pastor of Harrison Street Congregational church, Oak Park, after a song service led by Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Taylor, Pacific Garden mission.

This movement is general and not confined to any one locality. The amount during the last three months was made available to churches through 48 campaigns conducted by the department, and in addition $1,000,000 for general church extension in Chicago, Washington, Louisville, and other cities.

Inner Circle of 100 Rules Social 2,000 of London

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.]—London has no Ward McAllister, and hence no "four hundred." But even if it had a social arbiter like the man who established the hierarchy of New York society for a past generation, he would find 400 too small a number for the hectic social life of today. London's "four hundred"—its real elite—is probably more nearly 2,000.

And this list of 2,000 genuine members of the haut monde would by no means include all the recognized blue bloods. There are more than 2,000 names in Burke's Peerage and Landed Gentry. Not all of them move in the inner circle. Some have had to make way for celebrities without titles or for distinguished foreigners. There are some American names in the 2,000.

But of these 2,000 personages of London's bright life, there are probably less than a hundred who are genuine leaders. Even the 2,000 are sheeplike in following the bellwethers of their world. Where the hundred go, the other thousand nine hundred go, also. They make the fortunes of night clubs, insure the popularity of new sports, and set new styles.

At the Top.

Foremost among the leaders is, of course, the Prince of Wales. It is sufficient for him to appear once in a new type of costume for a fashion to have its being. For the women the Duchess of York is the chief luminary. A particular type of hat and a particular share of blue which she affects have been named for her and are known popularly as the Betty hat and Betty blue.

Lord Lonsdale is another prominent figure. His striking and daring manner of dress has so far prevented others from copying his fashions, but in other respects his every action is closely followed. The Countess of Oxford stands in the social hierarchy of women about as Lord Lonsdale stands among the men.

Lady Astor is, of course, as well known to America as to England. She has lately borrowed an idea from America, by tagging her guests at large parties with their names in order to simplify the formula of introductions. Lady Chamberlain is another of the most prominent entertainers.

* *

Arbiters of Fashion.

For fashions the younger married women look to the Dutchess of Sutherland and Lady Louis Mountbatten, while the debutantes are never too proud to take a cue from Lady Anne Wellesley.

Others of the important 100 are such figures as Mrs. Wilfred Ashley, wife of the transport minister, who is accredited with having introduced to London the very American institution of the cocktail party. The Hon. David Tennant and his wife, the former Miss Hermione Baddeley, added to the idea a little by giving pajama and bottle parties, which had the advantage for the hosts of making it obligatory for the guests to bring their own drinks. The treasure hunting craze, which dates back about two years, was the invention of the Hon. Evan Morgan and the Hon. Lois Sturt.

And no list of London's real society powers would be complete without the names of the beautiful Countess of Carlisle, the three daughters of the late Marquis Curzon of Kedleston, Baroness Ravensdale, Sir Philip Sassoon, Lord Alington, Martin Wilson, the Hon. Stephen Tennant and Capt. Neil McEacharn.

Tokio Students Must Stay Out of Dance Halls

TOKIO. — (AP) — The metropolitan police have issued an order forbidding university students to enter public dance halls and requiring certificates af character from professional hostesses.

Strict regulations exist for the control of dance halls in Tokio and these will henceforth be enforced. Most of the Japanese young men and women who frequent the halls belong to that class most vigorous in emulating the customs and clothing of the west.

The police point out that there are seventeen dance halls in Tokio which are maintained as business ventures are on a membership basis. After an investigation the officials came to the conclusion that most of these halls are improperly conducted, the "chief aim of the dancers being to indulge in distasteful enjoyment."

The new regulations will require that only persons of excellent reputations will be licensed to open dance halls.

Paris Takes on Air of Deserted Village in Summertime

By May Birkhead

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—French society's unwritten prescriptions are law for those seeking to keep abreast of fashion. Now one of the most rigid decrees is that every Parisian with claims to social respectability must either go away from Paris during August or at least have the appearance of having left the capital. More than one proud family carefully puts up the shutters and gives no external sign of presence during "La Canicule," as the dog days are termed.

While this code does not apply strictly to Americans residing here, they scatter, more or less, to be in fashion. Among the Chicagoans planning an interesting August are Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Holdrege. They will be with Mrs. Paul Healy, now in London, having been invited to attend the last royal garden party.

Upon their return from London the Holdreges are motoring to Lake Annecy to pick up their daughter, Betty, who is attending summer school there. Then they will proced to Brittany, arriving Aug. 21 in the picturesque thirteenth century town of Rochefort-en-Terre to visit Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Klotz. Mr. Klotz is a well-known portrait painter who counts many Chicago beauties among his subjects at the château in Rochefort.

An Old Breton Custom.

Rochefort-en-Terre has all sorts of curious Breton traditions. One of the most interesting is the horse fair held a mile from the village in the field of Saint-Fiacre. On this occasion the young girls and women of the neighborhod sell their hair to have pocket money during vacation time.

On this field is the celebrated chapel which once belonged to the Templars, where there is a pilgrimage of natives to hear the curious echo of its walls. The town itself is grateful to Mr. Klotz in recent years for much of the picturesqueness of its white houses, decked in profusion with flowers, since the American painter gives an annual prize for the most beautiful decoration.

At the old market church, an especially interesting subject, is an extensive colony of landscape painters. The famous artist, Pelouze, is responsible for its vogue as a center for painters. There is also known to be trout fishing in the river Arz.

Built Around a Château.

The village is built around a château which has had its ups and downs since its erection in the twelfth century. It was destroyed in 1594 during the wars of the league. Rebuilt, it was destroyed a second time in 1793 during "Les Chouans." Little remains of the original château, though the year of its construction is authenticated as the twelfth century by parts of the tower and bits of the wall still standing, as well as by its subterranean passages.

Mr. and Mrs. Klotz spend the greater part of each year there and frequently have Chicago visitors. Just before leaving Paris the Holdreges entertained at dinner in their apartment, the guests including the Countess de Mortemart, who is associated with Americans of various charity organizations; Vicomte and Vicomtesse Benoit d'Azy, pre-war naval attaché to the French embassy in Washington; the Prince and Princess Constantin Toumanoff, formerly Mrs. Charles Scott, and also Mme. Jules Patenotre, wife of the one time French ambassador to Washington, and Gen. William R. Harts, military attaché of the American embassy at Paris.

DURING the dull selling season of July we desired to make an offer so sensational that Chicago householders simply could not afford to pass it up!

We asked the help of a leading range manufacturer. We wanted a fully equipped range—of finest construction—and All White Enamel. The manufacturer—a company from whom we purchase vast quantities of gas ranges—responded splendidly. The range pictured above retails regularly at $62.50 and is the latest 1929 model.

Only $49.75 while this offer lasts—and, in addition, $10 ALLOWANCE FOR YOUR OLD STOVE IF YOU ARE A CHICAGO GAS USER! We call this range the "GASCO SPECIAL." Full white porcelain enamel—spacious oven, rust-proof linings, service drawer, top lighter, simmering burner. Act now—don't be too late!

This splendid range meets in every way the high quality standard maintained at Peoples Gas Stores. It will give you boundless satisfaction, not only when new but throughout long years of use.

Private Cars of the Rich Rival Coaches of Kings

NEWS from the Orient the other day described the picturesque journeyings of the king of Afghanistan in a showy white and gold train that meandered across India and startled even the self contained Hindus into excited admiration. Descriptions of teakwood coaches, tiled bathroom and silver fittings were broadcast to acquaint the public with the magnificence of the brunette majesty's palace on wheels.

There are in this country about eighty families whose private railway cars could compete in expensive luxuriousness with the traveling mansions of that distant ruler. More privately owned cars are being trailed around by railway engines this year than ever before—a fresh and richly enameled flowering from new fortunes that have been made in Wall street and elsewhere. Here, however, the cars are not painted white and gold, and instead of having their movements advertised the most scrupulous secrecy with regard to their shuntings is exercised in railway offices. For American kings and queens of abundant bank accounts prefer not to be the cynosure of miscellaneous eyes when they go traveling from town to town.

Shrink From the Herd.

The richer people grow the more reasons they manage to accumulate for shrinking from annoying contacts with the common human herd. To most of us a seat in a parlor car or a bed in a Pullman sleeper will continue to be as luxurious and satisfying a safeguard against unnecessary sociability and noise as we can hope to achieve when we go far from home. But even a chair car with its linen tidies and unsocial hermits can be an oppressive community of strangers from which certain sensitive souls are bound to recoil. There are quite a number of men and women in New York, California and points between who would never think of traveling except in their own cars, which afford the privacy of home.

A generation ago the first private cars were built to be used as traveling offices by railroad presidents whose secretaries could go on working while the landscape rolled by—and to serve as samples that soon caught the fancy of men and women who could afford to own their own.

For years the late Henry G. Frick's specially constructed steel car, Westmoreland, with its red and blue and gold rooms—for the financier, his wife and daughters—was considered the last word in luxury. But when cars began to be built for women who could afford to order solid gold fixtures for lighting brackets and bathroom faucets, the somber elegance of earlier days became comparatively modest.

Name in Gold Letters.

This summer connoisseurs of cars have been talking about the Pheasant, recently built for Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president of General Motors corporation. It is painted dull green and has its name emblazoned in gold letters on the sides. A lighter shade of green is the prevailing color of the interior, which consists of four private rooms with baths and a dining room.

Another rather new car which combines good taste and luxuriousness is W. F. Kenny's St. Nicholas, whose living room, dining room, bedrooms, and observation platform afford a good deal more than the average comforts of home. The practical purposes for which such a car may be utilized beyond either business or pleasure was shown a few weeks ago when, after a serious illness in a New York hospital, Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, wife of the governor of New York, made the return trip to Albany with a nurse in Mr. Kinny's St. Nicholas.

Seen at Kentucky Derby.

Some such event as the Kentucky Derby may bring a number of the finest cars in the country to adjacent sidings. For years C. G. K. Billings went to the races in his own car, but recently he has been renting one of the many luxurious cars which the Pullman company keeps for that purpose. The Wideners of Philadelphia and W. J. Salmon of New York are among those whose handsome cars during racing weeks become neighbors to the Whitney's Wanderer and Roamer, and J. C. Brady's Adventurer, on the sidings near Churchill Downs or Saratoga Springs.

Names by which most of these cars are known are considerably less bewildering than those labels any ordinary travelers may read on Pullman vestibules during one of those marathons to or from the dining car. There is nothing cryptic, for example, about John Ringling's Jomar if one happens to know that the Ringling family contained a John and a Mary, or about Charles M. Schwab's Bethelehem, Harry Sinclair's Sinco, or Thomas F. Ryan's Oak Ridge, the name of the old Ryan estate in Virginia. An adept at anagrams might find a few family names in Mrs. J. P. Donahue's Japauldon.

Bar Harbor Is Port for Many Yachts

BAR HARBOR, Me., July 28.—[Special Correspondence.]—This island, which seems to have changed little in its aspect since once it was the reputed home of ferocious pirates, has been visited by many seacraft in the last few days. Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan's Corsair, apparently named for a visitor, remained overnight at the beginning of the week. Mr. Morgan was not aboard, but the party included Mrs. Alfred Parris, Miss Edith O. Jennings, and Sidney J. Jennings.

Another interesting yacht party to visit Bar Harbor was that of Mr. and Mrs. H. Edward Manville. Included among their guests were Miss Estelle Manville, Count F. Bernadotte, Mr. H. Edward Manville Jr., and the latter's fiancée, Miss Ethel Schniewind.

A Debut Preliminary.

Eleanor McCormick, daughter of Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick of Chicago, is much in the limelight at present. Bar Harbor is much interested in the dance to be given on Aug. 3 at the Swimming club to introduce Eleanor as a preliminary to her debut this winter. A dinner will precede the dance, and later in the month Mrs. Morris Hawkes will give still another dance for Miss McCormick at her Schooner Head Road estate.

Committees are still hard at work on plans for the masquerade ball which is to be given at the Swimming club on the night of Aug. 7 for the benefit of the Bar Harbor hospital. Winifred Thorndike, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hill Thorndike, is chairman of the committee on arrangements. Allied with her are Bertha Palmer, Eleanor McCormick, Susan Scott, Elizabeth Kent, Mary Shepley, Dorothy Fraley, Dolly Wentz, Laura Wayne, Katherine Simmons, and Martha Whittaker.

Activities Have Wide Range.

Many activities are under way, including golf at Kebo Valley, dances at the Yacht club, and the weekly luncheons of the Pot and Kettle club, which will continue until after Labor day.

Arrivals at Bar Harbor this week included Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Crowninshield, Mrs. Henry W. Munroe, Mrs. Sidney Carrere, and Mrs. Gordon Abbott. Others in Bar Harbor include Col. and Mrs. Francis L. V. Hoppin, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Damrosch, Bishop William Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. De Witt Clinton Falls, Miss Fanny Cottenet, and Miss Frances Ogden.

Chicagoans Active Far and Near in Summer Resorts

FROM the various resorts where Chicagoans gather and forgather for the summer comes news that our townsfolk are active and busy in the social doings of their respective retreats. Colonists along the north shore of Massachusetts have had an exciting week, with the annual invitation tennis tournament at the Essex Country club the main attraction. Miss Helen Wills was among the nationally and internationally distinguished players to compete on the courts, and there was an enthusiastic and colorful gallery throughout the sessions of the meet.

Parties Mark Meet.

One of the largest of the many entertainments connected with the affair was the luncheon given by Mrs. Joseph Leiter of Washington, D. C., and Chicago, on Tuesday at her Edgewater place at Beverly Farms. Fifty guests, including many of the tennis stars, were present. There were also dinner dances at the Essex Country and Myopia clubs, and many of the colonists were hosts to the visiting players.

Mrs. William Gordon Means gave a garden party recently for the candidates in the Bay state primaries, which are set for Sept. 18, at her Alhambra cottage at Pride's Crossing. Many Massachusetts party leaders were present.

Leonard Yacht Launched.

The Tid IV., a new yacht belonging to Arthur G. Leonard of Chicago, who is summering at Gloucester, was launched from the Gloucester shipping yards on Monday with interesting ceremonies. Mrs. Carleton B. Swift, Mr. Leonard's daughter, christened the ship and will be its skipper in the north shore races. Mr. and Mrs. C. Groverman Ellis, Miss Isabelle Leonard, and Mr. and Mrs. John Clay of Chicago also attended the launching party.

The Biddeford Pool, Me., colony of Chicagoans includes Mr. and Mrs. John A. Stevenson, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Morse Ely, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Y. Freeman, Mrs. Howard Gillette, and Mr. and Mrs. William R. Odell, and at Camden, Me., are Mrs. John Jay Borland and Mrs. Chauncey Keep.

At Mackinac island are Mrs. John Lewis Cochran and her youngsters and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Murray Peabody Brush Jr., various members of the Dixon clan, and Mrs. Charles Bigot.

Women the World Over

BOSTON has a millinery shop where customers make their own hats.

Mme. Veuve Barrois is the first and only women auctioneer in Paris.

New Zealand women do not use cosmetics, with the exception of face powder, in the daytime.

In the whole of Prussia there are now 62 policewomen and the number is being added to rapidly.

There are at least 25 women holding responsible appointive offices in the United States government.

The women of Lapland are among the smallest in the world, averaging only four feet nine inches in height.

Only two women, Mrs. Nellie T. Ross of Wyoming and Mrs. M. A. Ferguson of Texas, have been elected governors.

Mrs. Ada Clodfelter is not only mayor and postmistress in the little town of Garber, Mo., but also owns the ground on which it stands.

Della and Etta Bradley, sisters, of Winston-Salem, N. C., are making a huge success of a large tobacco farm which they own and operate.

Two women control the traffic at the busiest spots in Constantinople, the authorities considering women better fitted to handle traffic "jams."

By virtue of her office as chairman of the state civil service commission, Mrs. C. B. Smith is a member of the governor's cabinet in New York state.

At the age of 83 Mme. Bergoin has just been decorated for bravery by the French government. She was canteen keeper during the Franco-Prussian war.

A total of 95,950 trees has been planted by the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs in commemoration of the semi-centennial of the first step in forestry taken by the United States government.

Mrs. John Quincy Adams, wife of a marine officer, accompanied by Mrs. Charles Baskin of Montreal and Miss Iola Paxton of Toronto, has started on a tour of the near east in an auto. They plan to motor from Cadiz to Bagdad and back.

Exclusive Chicago and North Western Circle Tours including

BLACK HILLS
of SOUTH DAKOTA

Milwaukee-Minneapolis-St. Paul-Omaha

Only $36.65 from Chicago to Rapid City and return

THIS is unquestionably the greatest bargain in this summer's vacation opportunities. The fare quoted permits stopovers in the beautiful, interesting cities of Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Omaha in the order named or the route may be reversed.

It would be difficult to find a more charming and enchanting vacationland than the Black Hills of South Dakota. Awe-inspiring mountain and canyon scenery, beautiful forests of pine, spruce and quaking aspen. Rippling streams everywhere, alive with trout.

Splendid roads over which commodious, easy riding motor busses reach all of the high scenic spots in real comfort.

See Sylvan Lake, Mt. Coolidge, Mt. Roosevelt, Harney Peak, Spearfish Canyon, State Game Lodge (Summer White House of 1927), historic cities of Deadwood, Lead, Belle Fourche, Rapid City, Hot Springs. After seeing the Black Hills you will say, as President Coolidge did, "I have never seen anything which excels it."

If your vacation period is a week or a month this makes an ideal trip.

Splendid trains to take you . . . fine accommodations in the Hills . . . everything to make for a restful ever-to-be-remembered sojourn.

The Greatest Two-Week Vacation Trip Ever Offered

Down East

Thru the Switzerland of America

In America's finest Motor Coaches—equipped with washroom and lavatory, high back deep-cushioned seats and ice water containers. The most comfortable and easy riding cars ever built. If you are fed up on the "usual" tour offerings, here's a two week's vacation trip that will thrill you—it has that romantic "something" we call adventure, it has scenic beauty, real natural scenery, points of historical interest and many other things that no other vacation suggestion has to offer.

Next Tour* July 29th and Weekly Thereafter

Every minute will be an interesting one. You'll enjoy the picturesque Irish Hills, the trip across romantic Canada, and your visit to that never-to-be-forgotten wonder Niagara Falls. You'll love the Thousand Islands, the forested ranges of Adirondacks, beautiful Lake Placid and you'll be thrilled with your visit to Ausable Chasm and your trip across Lake Champlain. Your journey thru the Green and White Mountains, over the Mohawk Trail, thru the Berkshires, along the Hudson River on the Storm King Highway, over the Poconos, thru the Delaware Water Gap and Watkins Glen, will provide scenes you'll never forget and things to talk about, for rest of your life.

Then there's a day in Boston—two full days and three glorious nights in New York—with a heavenly night and an enchanted day at Alexandria Bay, and the grand climax—a trip across Lake Erie.

All of these scenic thrills are packed into the greatest vacation trip ever offered, the result of five years' of successful operation and experience.

An illustrated folder will be mailed you upon receipt of your request to Go to Detroit

The CITY OF OPPORTUNITIES

There is but one Bagdad, one Mecca—and only one Detroit!

For it is to this magic city of the Western World that the Pioneers of today have been drawn. It is the lodestone that has brought together great engineers, great builders, great financiers—men who have had the courage to dream of miracles, and the sheer ability to make those dreams come true.

This leadership has given Detroit its own dauntless spirit — the spirit of achievement. That is why they call it "Dynamic Detroit."

In Detroit they work hard—there is so much to do. And they play hard, there is so much to do in the leisure hours too. This very spirit of achieving has made minutes count at recreation as well as at work.

Thus, while Detroit offers wonders of many sorts for you to marvel at, Detroit offers, too, the opportunity for more fun, more varied recreation than ever you crowded into a single vacation before.

Go to Detroit—not some time—but this time!

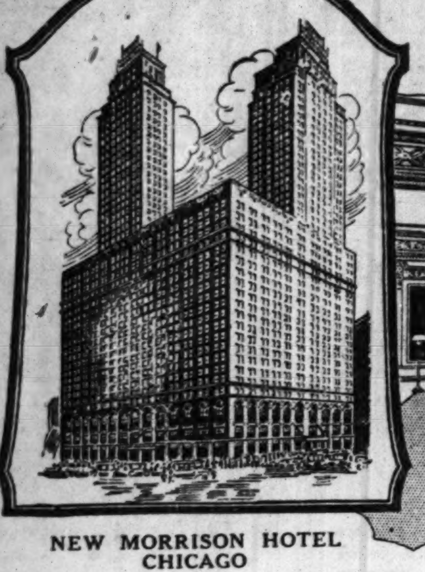
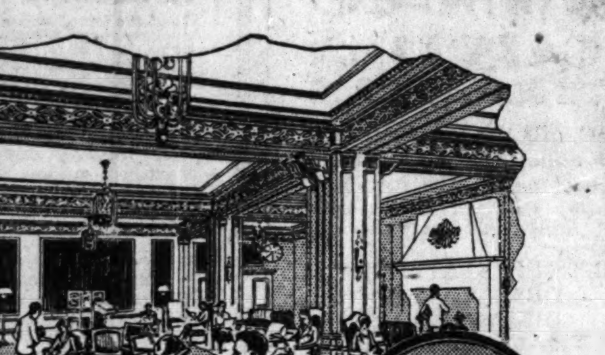
Morrison Hotel

Tallest in the World
Most Central in Chicago

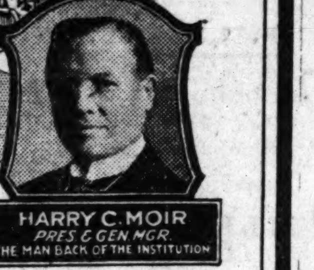


NEW MORRISON HOTEL CHICAGO

The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel—46 stories high with 3,400 rooms.



A VIEW IN THE LOUNGE MORRISON HOTEL, CHICAGO



HARRY C. MOIR
PRES. & GEN. MGR.
THE MAN BACK OF THE INSTITUTION

THE cheery vivacity that prevails in the Guests' Lounge at the Morrison Hotel shows a marked contrast to the apathy and enervation so often observed in city districts on hot, exhausting July days.

Where Guests Are Always Cool

The perfect ventilation maintained in all rooms by a special system of motors is supplemented by an immense cooling plant that supplies refrigerated air to all the dining rooms. In the Terrace Garden and Boston Oyster House the air never rises above 68 degrees.

ROUND the WORLD WITH THE "RESOLUTE"

"CHANGE is the sauce that sharpens appetite,"—piquant delicacies in each new port—cultivated like the first ripe olive. A "couscous" dinner, moistened by mint-flavored tea, will make you vow a speedy return to Somaliland, in French East Africa.—High spiced curries, ragouts of young partridges, ices of curdled milk flavored with betel leaves are waiting in Bombay.—Have you ever "cooked your own" over a pot of charcoal in a Japanese tea house?—Or attended a Hawaiian "luau," where cracklings of a young porker, "poi" and papaya are the order of the day? Native delicacies, adapted to American taste, often feature the menus—but only as touches of local color to the unrivaled cuisine of the RESOLUTE.

"The Voyage of Your Dreams"

STARTS FROM NEW YORK JAN. 7, 1929

Spain, Italy, Greece, Egypt, Holy Land, India, China, Japan—and remoter ports of Burma, Siam, Sulu, Borneo, French East Africa (Somaliland).

Rates $2,000 and up include an extraordinary program of shore excursions.

Round the World CRUISE....

Empress of Australia

from New York, Dec. 1

"Mrs. R.... and I have been on several cruises and around the world many times, but never had so enjoyable a time as on the Empress." That's an expert's advice. Take the cruise with its own organization and official connections in strange lands—the reputation for food and hospitality as wonderful the 136th day as the first—feature events: Christmas in its birth-place, New Year's Eve at its peak in Cairo, India, Siam, etc., in cool season, plum-blossom time in Japan. Let us tell you about it, now, while you can still get preferred rooms on the dream-ship, Empress of Australia. Phone or write—

London's Queen of Night Clubs, Jailed, Retires

One of Titled Sons-in-Law to Sell Gay Resorts.

BEHIND the bars for a second time because of her night club operations, Mrs. Kate Meyrick, "queen of clubs," has finally surrendered after a long struggle with London's police. She announced at her trial in Bow street police court that she is through with night club life, and her understudies, one of them an earl, are preparing to get rid of her clubs.

Judging from the reaction of the fashionably dressed audience that heard the sentence passed, her retirement is a catastrophe to social London.

The police call Mrs. Meyrick the worst breaker of license laws in the metropolis, but her friends declare her to be the most remarkable woman in London. Certainly she has made her gay resorts necessary to fashionable London, counting among her friends and patrons peers, generals, and men in the public eye. Despite her dubious profession, she succeeded in marrying off her daughters into two of the oldest families in Britain.

Two years ago Dorothy ["Dolly"], the elder daughter, was married to Baron de Clifford and more recently the younger, May, married the Earl of Kinnoull. In both cases prison sentences for Mrs. Meyrick followed the weddings, but the Earl of Kinnoull became her right hand man in directing the night clubs.

"Mother" Meyrick is an astonishing and contradictory character. Described as a sentimental, motherly sort of person, she was long the most notorious, picturesque, and beloved figure in London's hectic night life. Although a model parent, she defied the law and operated certain resorts appealing to the lowest sort of patrons. Yet some of her clubs were the most fashionable in London. And her daughters, carefully shielded from their mother's notoriety during their school days, made their debuts from behind the footlights of a night club.

Left Without Support.

Before the war Mrs. Meyrick was the wife of Dr. Ferdinand Meyrick, a Dublin physician and psychoanalyst. He had a pet idea of a sanitarium for neurotics, an idea now proved practical but then derided. He sacrificed everything to keep up his hospital, and for twenty years the family struggled along on a small income. Then about the time war broke out husband and wife parted.

Mrs. Meyrick had been satisfied with the usual middle class existence, but after the separation she and her children were left practically without means of support. An advertisement concerning a cabaret for rent cheap caught her eye and she determined to have a fling at the night club business. But she retained the ambition properly to educate her children and to marry her two daughters well.

Perhaps she foresaw the future profit to be made from the restaurants which the war was making so popular. The nervous hysteria of the conflict had struck London. Dancing

OUR TOWN

Items Gleaned from Highways and Byways.

GEORGE WILEY, the Libertyville farmer, was a visitor the past week. George now has nineteen head of goats and eleven are yielding milk for the market. "Children cry for it," says George. We don't believe it, but it's an item.

Jacob M. De Winner, the barber, has closed his shop at 508 West 63d street for to take in the sights at Yellowstone park and replenish his stock of conversational tidbits. Jake hadn't had a vacation in twenty-two years and it was sadly depleted. In fact, it had narrowed down to the weather and the Cubs' chances in the pennant race. Jake figures now he will have it all over his competitors.

* *

"What streets," queried Patrick J. Donovan, acting superintendent of same, "are worst in Marquette, Gage park and adjoining areas?"

"All of them," he was told.

* *

Sundry motor vehicles of our citizenry have burgeoned with a new device, pendant from the license plate and reading in bold capital letters, to-wit: "Al Smith." Curious as to what manner of motorists such might be, your correspondent copied a couple of license numbers at random and identified the owners as, to wit or two-wet: Michael J. Sullivan, 882 Pine street, Winnetka, and John J. Corcoran, 5729 Kenmore avenue, Chicago.

* *

An anxious subscriber quite upset the even tenor as well as all the mezzo sopranos of our way in ye Sunday room sanctum by a phone inquiry as to what is the correct style garb for a gentleman to wear who is to officiate at a cornerstone laying. It stumped the best minds in the sanctum, which is cruel and unusual. It just so happened that none of us had laid a single corner stone this year.

* *

Mrs. Frank P. Ayer of 5229 Dorchester avenue is now sojourning in Chichester, N. H., where, she writes Hyde Park friends, she is adding a number of choice specimens to her rare collection of aurora borealises.

LLOYD MAXWELL.

THE "I Knew Him When" club presents Lloyd demonstrating flaming youth in the days of '93, or the world's fair. The modish derby, we regret to say, was black, not brown. The concealed weapon at the other end of the anchor chain, dangling carelessly from Lloyd's sack coat, was a timepiece about the size of a pineapple, but not quite so loud. Lloyd has since gone in for knickers and golf when he isn't grand marshaling for the Elks. One of our prominent advertising men—president and general manager of Williams and Cunnyngham.

The Rev. T. R. Quayle of Lake Bluff, secretary of the Lake County Law and Order league, has issued a written warning that "a disaster awaits us in Lake county in the possible outcome of the present national election. . . . Should one particular nominee for the presidency be successful in his campaign, having had a long but disreputable record of success in passing pro-liquor bills, especially in placing

Do You Know These People in Literature?

Questions About Famous Fiction Folk.

Here are a number of hints as to the identity of sundry characters of more than passing fame. Some of these were created by Homer, Sheridan, Goldsmith, Dickens, Scott, and other immortal authors. Just how many of these "brain children" do you know? For each correct answer count one. Then, 70 means you belong to the high school group; 80 means you are in the college student group; 90 that you belong in Gene Tunney's Yale university class, and 100 that you are of the élite literary intelligentsia.

Answers are to be found elsewhere in this section.

9—Name Ivanhoe's father.
10—Who is Othello's wife?
11—What Athenian weaver is the principal actor in the Shakespearean interlude of "Pyramus and Thisbe"?
12—What man in Perrault's story killed his wives when they manifested curiosity?
13—What young Florentine lady guided Dante in the "Divine Comedy" through Paradise?
14—Which hero of Coleridge is penalized for shooting a bird of good omen?
15—Who possessed a magic lamp and ring, which when rubbed brought genii to do the bidding of the lucky owner of these talismans?
16—Who in Sheridan's "Rivals" was celebrated for his cowardice?
17—What man, by the strategy of Haroun-al-Raschid in the "Arabian Nights' Entertainments" was twice made to believe himself a caliph?
18—In Shakespeare who was the nephew of the reigning king of Denmark?
19—What beautiful lady brought on the Hellenic-Trojan war?
20—What imaginary personage is the embodiment of the peculiarities of the Russian people?
21—Who is the brutal slave dealer that is a chief character in Mrs. Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin"?
22—What romantic hero carried off his bride as she was about to be married to a laggard in love and a dastard in war?
23—Who, in Cooper's novel, "The Pilot," is a widely known sailor character?
24—To whom did Penelope remain faithful?
25—Which was a Montague—Romeo or Juliet?
26—Who is the ruffian in Dickens' "Oliver Twist"?
27—Who antagonized Gessler, the tyrannic Swiss magistrate, by refusing to bow to his hat?
28—Who is the "Man Without a Country"?
29—Who is the hero of "Les Miserables"?
30—Who was the executioner in Shakespeare's "Measure for Measure"?
31—Whom did Crabbe in his "Parish Register" describe as a wise man, contented to be poor?
32—Who was the bustling, masculine woman in Wycherley's comedy, "The Plain Dealer"?
33—What gigantic and ferocious personage figures in Scott's "Ivanhoe" as a follower of Prince John?
34—What proud warrior virgin in the German epic, "The Niebelungen Lied," destroyed Siegfried?

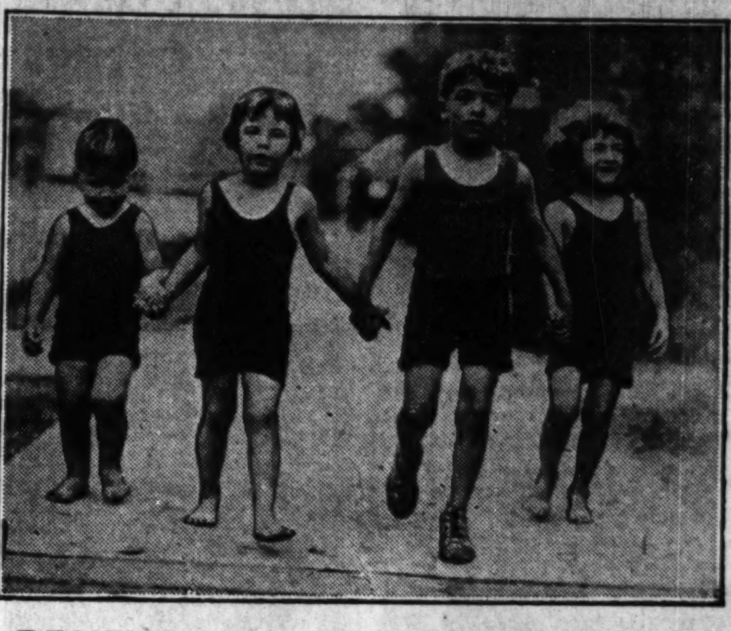
BUILDING UP HEALTH



HOLDING hands and enroute to Clarendon beach, we have Billy and Mildred Dow and Archie and Christine Geavaras. Archie, being the biggest, is leading the way, and before sundown they're all going to have a new coat of tan. The group of brothers and sisters lives at 4401 Dover street. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

And Finds It in North Side Millinery Shop

But Not Without Suffering Many Rebuffs.

By Helen Dare

HER smile wins.

A million dollar smile? Well, perhaps that would be exaggerating. But it was worth $50 to her the day I encountered it in my pursuit of politeness.

It greeted me first from over a mop. The day's dreary rain had flooded the little millinery shop at 1643 Belmont avenue and she was busily salvaging the stock and mopping up water. Not too busy to smile at me or bring out hat after hat to a never quite satisfied customer.

"It's sort of hard to pick out a hat," she consoled me, "when you don't know what kind you want, but I don't mind showing them to you."

I turned from cloches to vagabonds, from straws to felts. I tried on blue ones and green ones and red ones. There wasn't any style or color I wouldn't try. And all the while she was trundling them back and forth her bright smile was in evidence.

* *

Smiling Through Defeat.

"It's terrible weather," she remarked, so cheerily that she might have been wishing me a happy New Year. "I was alone here when the worst shower started and it was all I could do to save the hats before I got help."

Now I was trying on broad rimmed beach hats.

"It's nice, but I'm too short to wear a big hat," I said as I tried the effect in three mirrors at once.

"Well, I don't know about height, but you're slim enough," she assured me.

Sales flattery, perhaps, but she must have catalogued me as a "looker" by this time and the hat at stake was priced $1.45. No, politeness, I decided—not the politeness of thank yous and excuse mes, but the kind that comes from a pleasant disposition and a desire to set people at their ease.

I put on my own hat and started

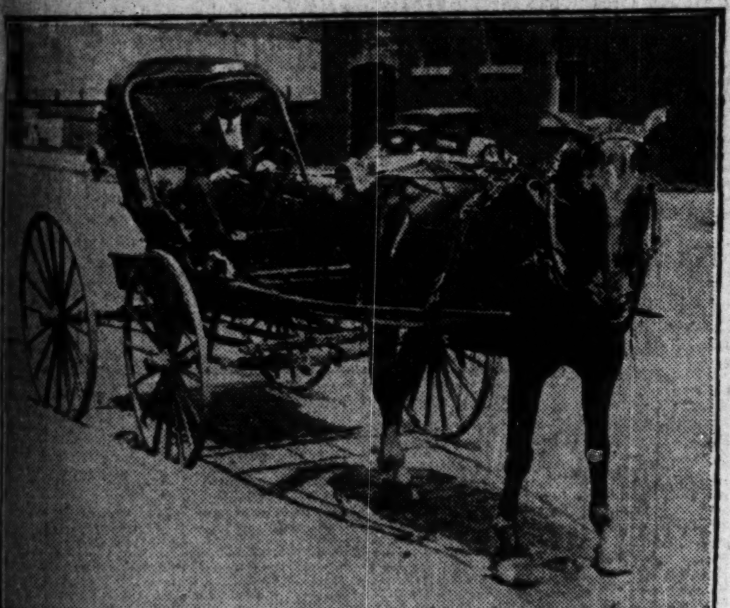
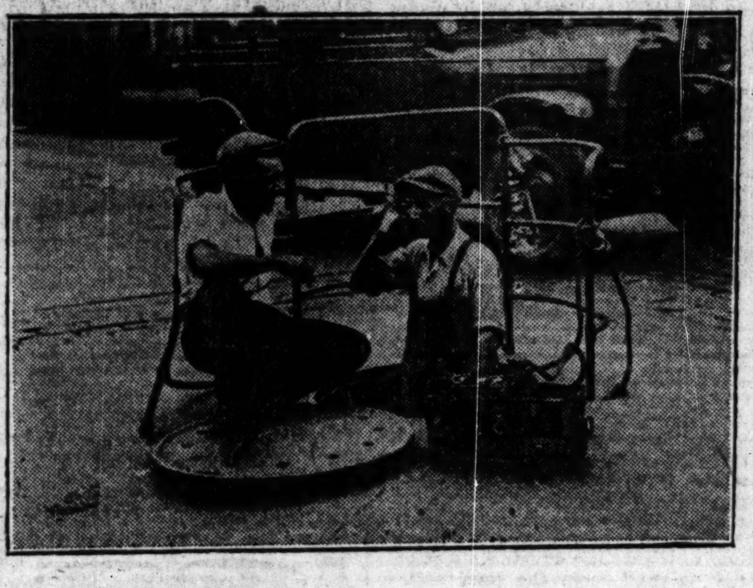
LIKES BUGGY RIDE BEST



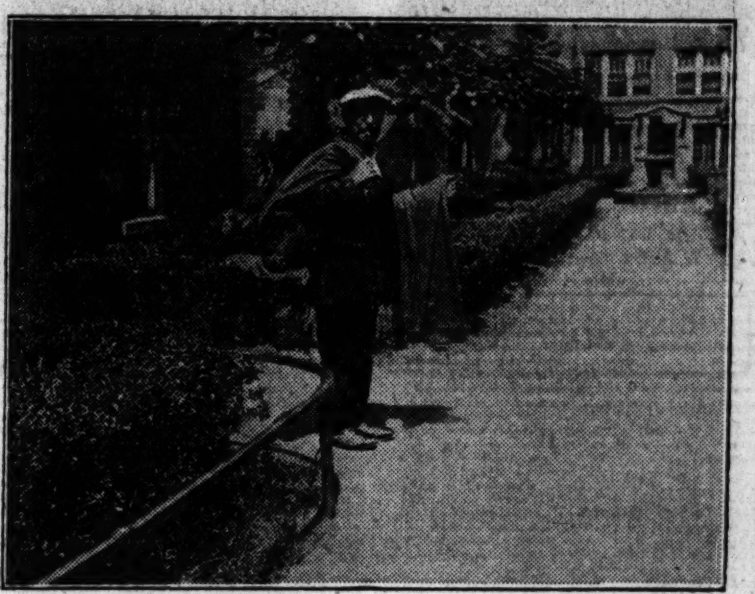
MAYBE Joe Hinkey is old fashioned, but somehow, when his plumbing business calls him to various homes in the neighborhood, he prefers Bess and the buggy to the newer methods of transportation. The picture of Joe's equipage—of a sort that in its day would have aroused deep envy—was taken at 47th street and Ashland avenue. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

TIME TO TAKE A DRINK



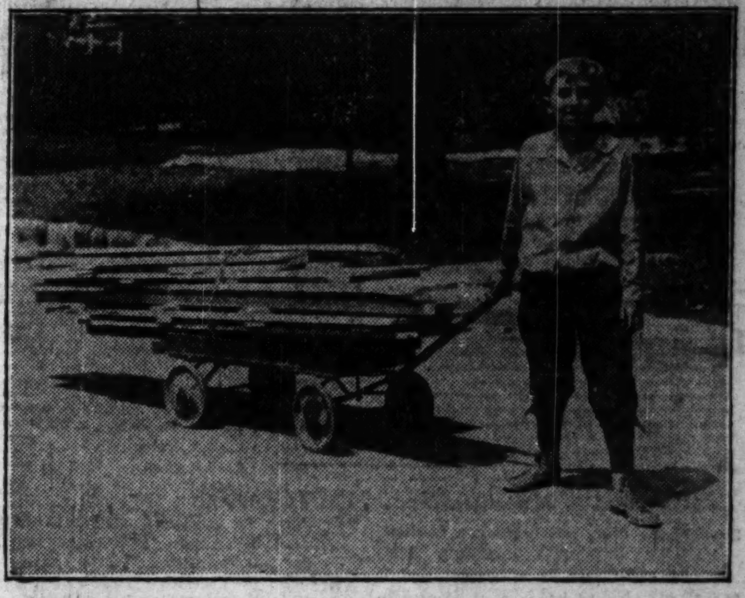
THE old oaken bucket may have been romantic, but it has nothing on the little tin cup, according to W. C. Richter, who has come up for a bit of liquid refreshment on a hot afternoon. N. Margiotta, 220 Whiting street, a fellow telephone worker, is the Gunga Din of the episode. Richter's home is at 5501 North Mason avenue. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

THE OLD CLOTHES MAN



"THESE are going to be just the fit for somebody," soliloquizes Abraham Dvorkan, 1235 South Avers avenue, as he emerges into the street again with a castoff garment over his arm. Abraham was collecting in the vicinity of Monroe street and Central Park avenue when sighted by the photographer.

PREPARING FOR WINTER



THOUGH it's summer and vacation time, William Bevo, 328 South Spaulding avenue, is not unmindful of the fact that kindling wood will come in handy later on. This cart load was picked up where an old building was being torn down. William is going to build a house of his own which, in the fall, can be chopped up in sizes to fit the furnace. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

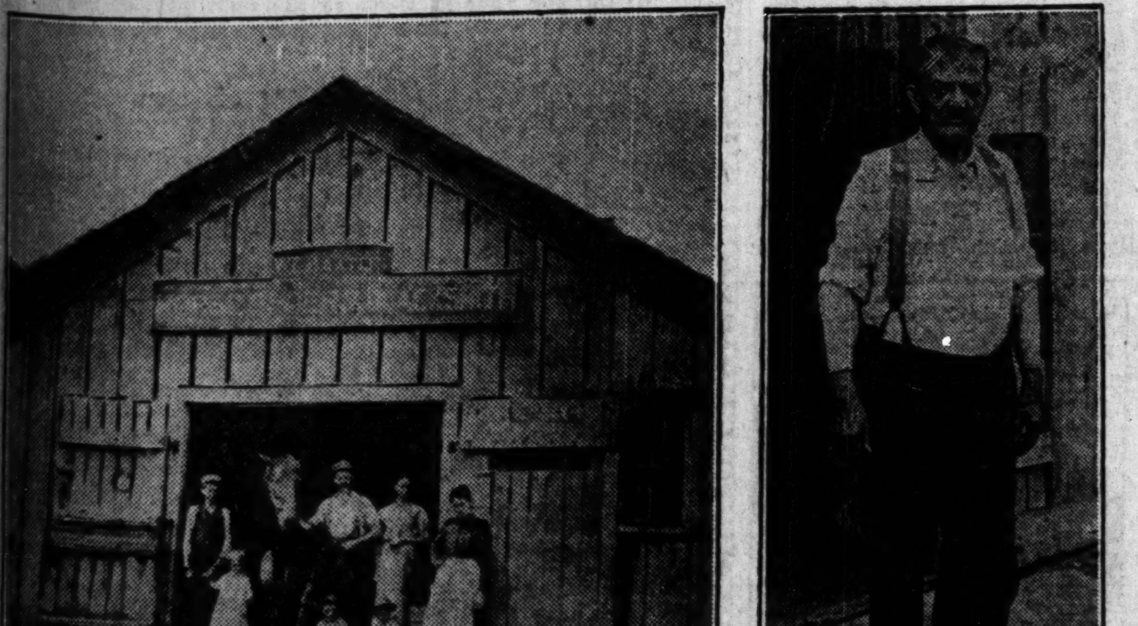
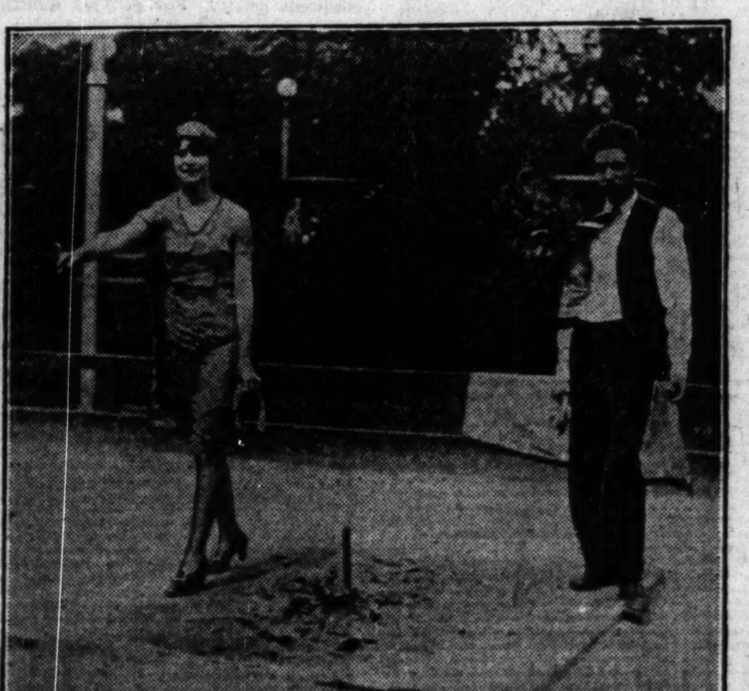
THE VILLAGE SMITHY



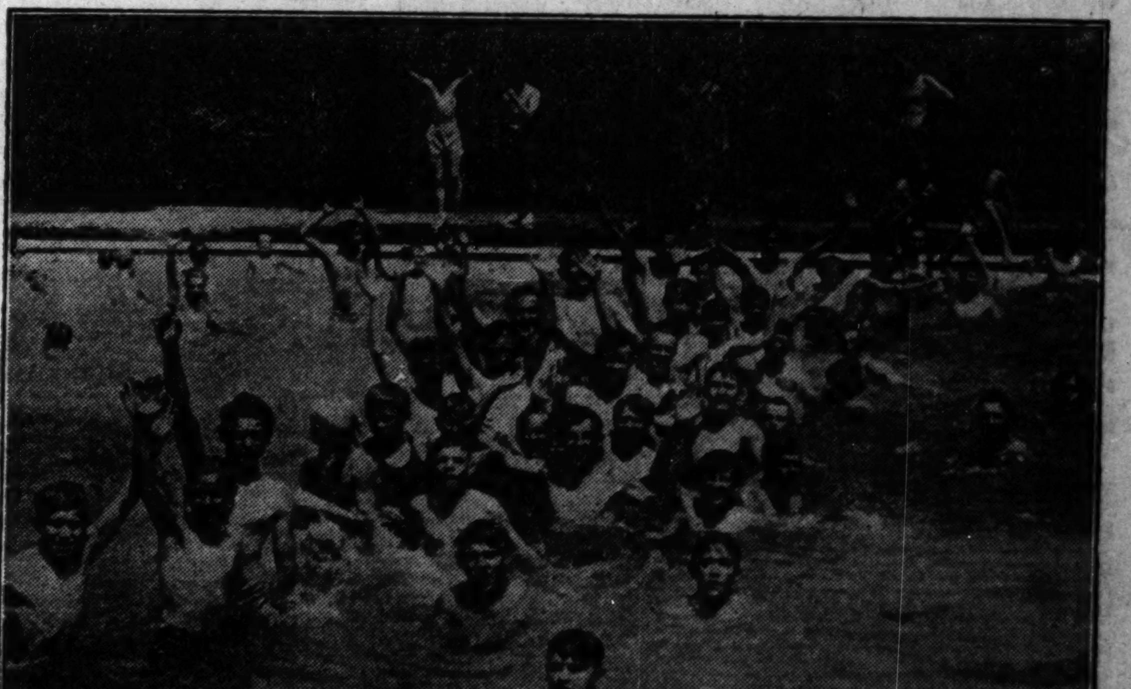
THE village in this instance was Chicago, and the W. E. Baxter blacksmith shop was at 5816 North Clark street. Baxter built the shop in 1873 and, in the heyday of the horse, it was a popular establishment. On the right stands the proprietor as he appears today. The picture he prizes, however, is the old timer showing himself and family in the doorway, taken at a period when the anvil clanged. The building now houses an automobile repairing shop.

HURLS A MEAN HORSESHOE



HERE we have a new fashioned girl playing an old fashioned game, and you can tell by comparing the expression on her face with that of her opponent how she's faring in the contest. The players are Grace Blake and Dave Fleming, the scene is in Lincoln park, and the photographer stuck around until Miss Blake put over the ringer that made her victor by a score of 21 to 17.

A BUSY DAY AT THE POOL



BOYHOOD hasn't changed, but the old swimming hole has. The muddy bottom of other days has given way to one of cement in which there are n osnapping turtles. A life guard watches on the shore. Now, as since the world began, there's nothing like a good swim on a warm day. This scene was taken at Gage park, 55th street and Western avenue. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

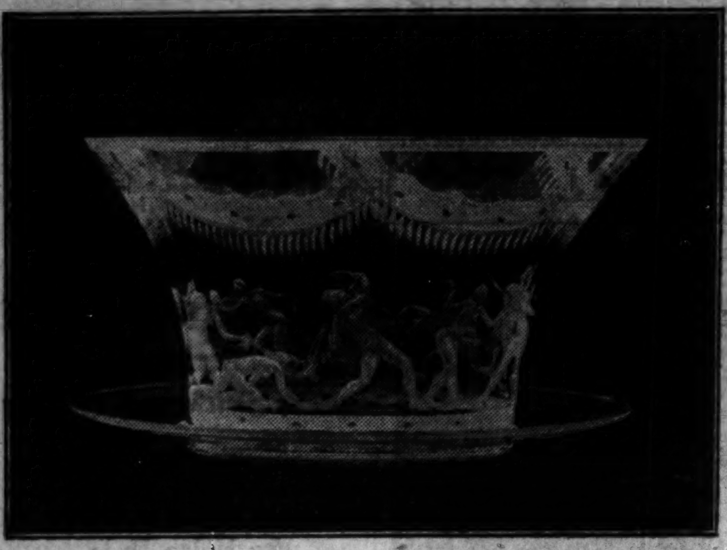
Bottles and Bowls from Sweden

Exquisitely Designed Glassware and Other Novelties

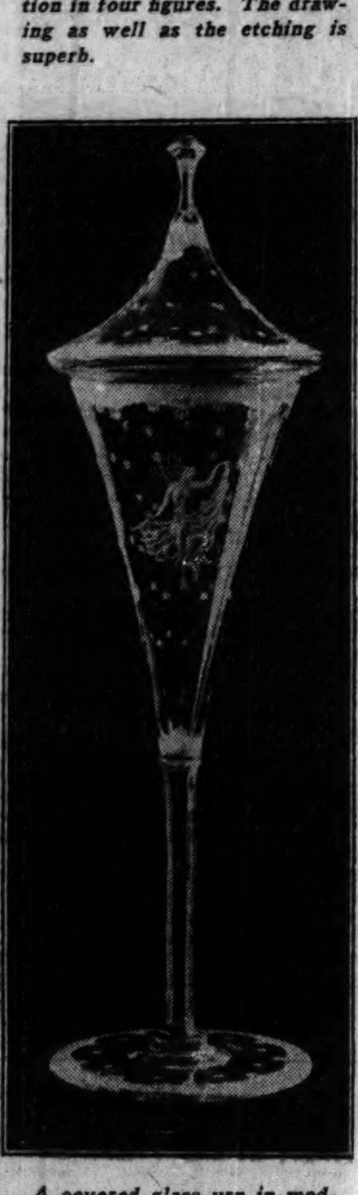


A glass bowl made in Sweden by a famous factory and of such exquisite workmanship that, if it were antique, collectors would be bidding for it at auction in four figures. The drawing as well as the etching is superb.

A silver bowl by one of the world famous modernists. Its design and workmanship make it worthy of any tradition, and it departs from all tradition in its modern perfection.

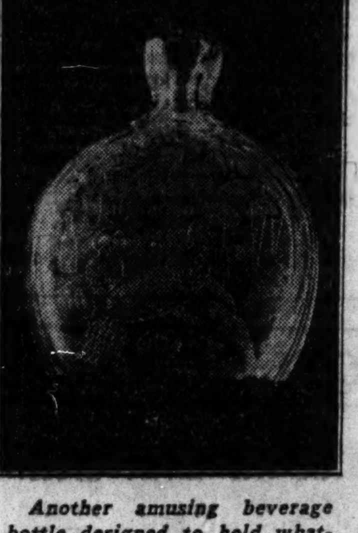
A silver compote in handwrought design. Its size as well as its chaste beauty make it a fitting ornament for the center of the small dining table. It is not prohibitive in price, though of sterling silver and comparatively heavy.

A small but very beautiful covered glass bowl. Its design and quality are up to the standard of the famous Swedish factory, from whence it came, and which captured most of the prizes of the International Exposition of Arts and Crafts.



A covered glass urn in modernistic design which shows to what classic beauty modernism can attain in the hands of a fine artist. The allover design is in stars with seven points, and the flying figure is draped in a cloud.

A covered glass bowl which can be used with the cover on for sweetmeats or rose leaves and, without the cover, for holding flowers. It is particularly finely etched and the glass itself is of a superior quality.



Another amusing beverage bottle designed to hold whatever is served with the appetizers, for on its face are etched pictures of delectable fish, olives, toast, and other dainties. It, too, can be used as a shaker, as it has a silver airtight cork.

A very amusing beverage bottle for a gift to a man. It has a tight cork and can be used also as a shaker. The design is a convivial one of a cafe table on which are a number of empty glasses.

A bowl of etched glass so perfect in its workmanship and design that the Chicago Art institute has, in its permanent exhibition, several pieces from the same factory and by the same artist in Sweden.

Londoner Has Will Tattooed on Back

LONDON.—(AP)—A 200 word will bequeathing large sums of money to several people has been tattooed on the back of a man who walked into a tattooing establishment in Waterloo road.

He had the will written out on a piece of paper, and asked that it should be transferred to his back. He sat for five hours while the work was being done, and the will was duly witnessed.

London's Queen of Night Clubs, Jailed, Retires

One of Titled Son-in-Laws to Sell Gay Resorts.

and dance halls achieved a tremendous vogue. Soldiers and sailors on leave thronged the gay resorts and the mad women of the time gathered there to meet the soldiers and sailors.

Raided by Police.

Her first club was in a basement in Leicester square, and the gayety of the place soon made it one of the most popular in London. The club was the liveliest in the hectic west end and tense nerved revelers of all classes poured money into her hands. Thieves and peers elbowed each other on its tiny dance floor.

That club was closed in time, but she opened others, running three or four at once. The police raided them frequently, usually for violations of the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicants after midnight. But whenever one of her places was closed, Mrs. Meyrick opened another elsewhere, keeping the police always jumps behind her.

Before her latest arrest, a magistrate issued twenty-six summonses against her clubs. She always pleaded guilty, paid the fine, and promptly opened another place. At different times she has operated forty-three.

Girls Dance with Dukes.

Meanwhile her children were being educated at the most exclusive schools in England under assumed names. Sen Leslie attended Harrow, most of whose students are chosen from members of the aristocracy, while the two girls went to Girton, the feminine equivalent of Harrow. During vacations they toured the continent wth well paid chaperons, and they never set foot in any of their mother's clubs until after graduation.

By that time, however, they were able to take a hand in the business, appearing nightly at their mother's sumptuous Forty-Three club. They became one of the chief attractions of the place, and their mother boasted that her daughters had danced with princes, dukes, and cabinet ministers.

Informality the Magnet.

The Forty-Three in Gerrard street was Mrs. Meyrick's favorite establishment. Expensively decorated within, it had a plain, heavily curtained, plate glass front, guarded by two huge and gorgeously uniformed commissionaires—really bouncers in disguise. Within, seated at a small cashier's desk, was the proprietress, always dressed in the same shabby velvet coat, with untidy hair and a ready smile which exposed a missing tooth.

There were two scales of admission prices—a pound if the patron wore a silk hat and five shillings if he didn't. Titled personages were never pressed to pay, it being enough for Mrs. Meyrick to have a nobleman for a guest. She accepted rubber checks and I. O. U.'s carelessly, often giving a youth a sovereign when she saw he was broke.

The merry informality of the place was the magnet which drew the crowd. In the kitchen any morning one might find a famous actress cooking herself a breakfast of bacon and eggs, with a burglar making coffee and a duke washing up at the sink. Liquor was sold freely at all hours despite the law, and even imprisonment did not prevent her from keeping the place wide open.

"Sink of Iniquity."

At the opposite extreme from this fashionable club she owned another called Dalton's—once denounced by a magistrate as a "sink of iniquity." It was the worst kind of underworld dive. The orchestra consisted of three Negroes, who played until they tired. Then they would turn on a phonograph and mingle with the guests. That club was soon closed.

Nevertheless "Mother" Meyrick saw to it that her daughters met only the "right" men, the men best in reputation and family tradition, though not always in cash. In Paris, where she was helping to run a Montmartre cabaret called Meyrick's Gaiety, Dolly met the 19 year old Baron de Clifford. He was one of the "right" men. His title dates back to 1299, but his estate is only credited with some 13,000 acres in County Mayo, Ireland — not a particularly valuable asset.

Back in London, Dolly opened a club of her own, the Manhattan, and De Clifford became the most frequent guest. For several months he and Dolly were constantly together, and one night they suddenly disappeared. The next day it was disclosed that they were married.

* *

Walked Home at Dawn.

With Dolly removed from the trio, May, the other daughter, took a still more active part in directing her mother's clubs. Mrs. Meyrick exercised the same precautions in choosing her dancing partners as she had with Dorothy's, and presently another "right" young peer appeared.

The earl of Kinnoull was not perhaps so "right" as he might have been in point of contemporary reputation, but his family was famous in Scotland three centuries before King James I. created the earldom. When he met Miss Meyrick at the Silver Slipper club he was still legally married to his first wife, the former Miss Enid Fellows. He announced his engagement to May just one day after she, the countess, secured her divorce.

The clubs would close up at dawn. Mrs. Meyrick would make the rounds of her establishments, stuff the night's receipts into an old black bag, and walk the mile or so home. She considered taxicabs extravagant. A tired, rather bent and shabby little woman, no one would have suspected her to be "London's most notorious law breaker," carrying home more than a thousand pounds!

DETHRONED

Mrs. Kate Holmes Meyrick, sentenced to six months' imprisonment for violation of the club license laws of the British metropolis.

CHANGEABLE WOMAN.

He—My dear, our engagement must be off. A fortune teller has told me I shall marry a blonde within a month.

She—O, that's all right; I can be a blonde in less time than that.—Passing Show.

Hungary's Girls Said to Wear Shortest Skirts

BUDAPEST.—(AP)—Prominent society women have opened a campaign against the short skirts worn by Hungarian girls. It is charged that nowhere in the world has the style for brevity been carried to such startling extremes as in Hungary.

The appearance of girls and young women on the promenades and in the fashionable tea rooms along the Danube with skirts four or five inches above the knee has produced an outcry in press, church and parliament.

Archduchess Isabella of Hapsburg, who is the patron of several philanthropic associations in Hungary, is among the chief opponents of the abbreviated skirt.

"Our women are simply crazy," she said to the Associated Press correspondent. "They would sooner starve than run counter to the exigencies of dame fashion. I have just been looking at the Paris fashion journals, and nowhere do I find skirts so short as those worn in Hungary. It is simply a disgrace. Our women are degrading our nation and themselves by exposing their legs beyond the limit of decency."

AL ARGUES WITH THE LAUNDRY

Solves Great Mystery of the Mangled Bed Sheet

By Snowshoe Al.

YESTERDAY afternoon I breezes into the Chinese laundry across the avenue from our house, and I was in a murderous mood when I entered the dump, believe me! A Slant-Eye was standing behind the counter ironing a shirt. He was wearing a pair of bedroom slippers and fourteen yards of thin black cloth which was evidently supposed to be a pair of pants.

"Hello," says Mr. Slant-Eyes; "velly nice day, huh?"

"Who cares?" says me, very sarcastically. "Listen, Mongolian person, I ain't here to argue with you about the weather! You just delivered our laundry, and I found this thing (unwrapping a small bundle which I had brought with me) among it. Look at it!"

"Him look like funny lace curtain!" grins Mr. Slant-Eyes.

"Yeh," says I, "but him was a bed sheet when we sent him to you! I know it must have been a bed sheet because we ain't got no lace curtains in our wigwam. Hell, it looks worse than a lace curtain—it's got more holes in it than a screen door! What the dickens did you do to it?"

"I mangle him," says the Chink.

Al Loses His Temper.

"I'm glad you admit it," says I, feeling rather relieved. "I thought I better bring it back to you before my wife sees it—you're lucky she ain't home this afternoon. Well, what are you gonna do about it?"

"No do nothing about it," squawks Opium Oswald; "that's the way him come here in first place!"

"You are a monkey-faced liar," says I, "because you just got through admitting that you mutilated it! Why don'tcha stick to one story? You change your mind oftener than a chorus girl changes her address. You are so dumb you think an oyster cracker is some sort of a hammer. If I lose my temper, I'll——"

"Him look like that when him come here!" insists Mr. Slant-Eyes. "Your wife allus tell me to mangle bed sheets an' other large pieces!"

"Are you trying to be funny, you Oriental Shirt-Scorcher?" howls me, getting real peeved. "You've got a flock of nerve telling me my wife suggested that you destroy some of our laundry! She wouldn't think of doing that any more than you would think of taking a bath. Your name must be Ananias."

"My name Charlie Bum Lung," squawks him.

"Yeh?" sneers me; "you'll have more than bum lung if you don't pay for this damage—you'll have a couple bum eyes. I'll smack you into silence or any other place you want to go! I betcha this sheet was worth at least three berries before you slaughtered it—cough up three bucks!"

* *

Threatens Damage.

"No understand," says Mr. Bum Lung.

"All right, me try talkee your language," says I, pointing to the remains of the sheet; "you mangle him. huh? Yes?"

"Sure," says he.

"Well, me no likee him no more," says I, "so you keepee. You allee samee, slippee me three frogskins or me sockee you on snoot. You catchee idea now, huh?"

"ASDFG ZXCVB HJKLM YUIOP!" howls Mr. Bum Lung.

"That static don't mean a thing to me," says I; "you sound like my radio when six stations are coming in at the same time. Lay off that goofy Hongkong conversation an' start talking business! Give me three dollars and you'll still have a laundry, otherwise you ain't gonna have anything except a blank mind; in fact, the morning papers will probably contain news items such as:

"'POLICE FIND DAZED SLANT-EYE IN VACANT LOT! Mr. Charles B. Lung, prominent soapsuds merchant, was picked up in a somewhat mangled condition last night by the police. He was lying in a vacant lot, surrounded by several dirty shirts and a couple piles of lumber. Neighbors insist that there was a laundry on the premises yesterday, and the piles of lumber have a tendency to substantiate their statements. The cops believe the joint was struck by a cyclone. Mr. Lung was carried to a hospital in six bushel baskets, and the doctors wish to assure his friends (if any) that he will be perfectly well again in about twenty or thirty years.'"

New Arrival.

"LKJHGFDSA POIUYTREWQ CXZ MNBVGF!!!" squeals Mr. Bum Lung, picking up a flatiron.

"You're another, you $@$@$@$@$ @$@$@$@$@!!" says I, picking up a large bottle of bluing; "when I get through with this shack you can look at it an' sing 'My Blue Heaven.' You better grab the phone an' call a doctor right now before we start—it'll save time. Also phone your milkman an' tell him to stop delivering cow sirup to this address until the year 1945!"

At this moment another slant-eye breezes through the back door and enters the laundry. This baby looked like a cross between a shriek of laughter an' a cry for help! If he only had a muzzle on him he could have got a job in any Dog and Pony show on earth. He had patent leather hair, patent leather shoes, red socks, white pants, and a funny face. His mother must have had poor eyesight, otherwise she would have picked him up right after he was born an' handed him to the cat. Yup, I've seen better looking things in garbage cans.

Mr. Charlie Bum Lung greeted the newcomer with huge quantities of enthusiasm and slung about five thousand words of conversation at him in less than two minutes. Anybody could tell that the conversation was about me, because Charlie pointed in my direction several times and waved his flatiron wildly. The new arrival raised his eyebrows and seemed very much amused; then he jabbered right back at Mr. Lung. Whereupon the latter turns to me and says:

* *

Mr. Ching Sing Ling.

"Him my cousin. Him talk to you! Him talk better than me! Him got college education!"

"You're a liar," says I; "him ain't wearing raccoon coat!"

"Nevertheless," horns in the newcomer, "I am the cousin of Charlie Bum Lung, and I——"

"I suppose your name is Algernon Bad Tonsils," sports me, "or maybe your Horatio Punk Stomach, or possibly Reginald High Blood Pressure. All right, I'll lick both of youse——"

"My monicker," says he, lighting a cigaret very nonchalantly [whatever that means] and blowing a mugful of smoke towards the ceiling, "is Ching Sing Ling, and I——"

"It sounds like somebody rattling a pocketful of small change," says I; "either that or part of the Westminster chimes. No matter what your name is, you better dive under a stove or any other place which looks convenient, because me and your cousin are all prepared to cheat the air mail by sending packages through the atmosphere at each other without bothering to stick postage on 'em."

"My cousin just explained the situation to me," remarks Mr. Ling, "and it strikes me very funny—"

"If this bottle of bluing lands between your ears you will either be struck funny or knocked silly," says I.

* *

The Fireworks Start.

"I understand," says he, "that you want Mr. Lung to pay for one of your articles which he mangled. The word 'mangle' has two entirely different definitions. My cousin mangled the article with this large machine which you see in the corner. Didn't you ever see anything get mangled with a large machine?"

"Certainly," says I; "I once saw a drunken sailor fall in front of a swiftly moving beer truck. What's that got to do with my three dollars?"

Just then a very tough looking person walked into the laundry. I could see that he was just aching to hand somebody a slam in the ear. His name was probably Oscar Bloodshed; anyhow, that's how he looked.

"Listen, bums," says he to the two Slant-Eyes; "for the last two days I've been looking for my minnow net and my wife thinks she sent it to you among my dirty shirts by mistake. Well, if she did, it never came back! You're a pair of crooks an' I'm gonna wreck this dump right now!"

Whereupon he rolled up his sleeves and rushed behind the counter. The result was beautiful! A flat iron hit him in the stomach, a teapot smacked him on the chin, and several cakes of soap bounced off the top of his head. Mr. Bloodshed staggered backwards and sat down in a corner. Mr. Charles Bum Lung then started slinging washboards at the poor gentleman. I ducked through the front door and went home.

"Where have you been?" says my wife to me.

"Over to the soapsuds establishment," says me.

"What's that funny looking piece of goods you're carrying?" says her.

"O, that!" grins me; "it came here today in our bundle of laundry, and I thought it was a bedsheet full of holes. However, I now have reasons for believing that it is a minnow net."

out. She came to help me with the door.

"Good-by," she said, with no hint of the exasperation that should have been hers by rights. "I'm sorry you couldn't find anything," she smiled at me again.

* *

The Cigaret Lady.

I wandered down to a combination candy and cigaret shop at 1709 Belmont. I asked the woman behind the counter for a fancy brand of cigarets.

"We don't carry them," she said, looking up at me disapprovingly from a letter she was writing.

I suggested a commoner brand and she gave them to me without a word, but careful to enclose them in a candy bag.

Then I decided to go in for furniture. Armed with a wedding ring and an engagement ring procured at a local 5 and 10, I entered a furniture store at 4822 North Lincoln avenue—a June bride just furnishing her three room apartment.

* *

Parlor, Bedroom and Bath.

"Do you want linen frieze or mohair for your living room suite?" questioned the clerk, "or would you prefer to look at tapestry needlepoint or velvet?"

I wasn't proud. I would and did look at any and all of them.

"Have you a price limit in mind?" he asked apathetically when I had finally found one that suited but was too expensive.

Naturally, I hadn't, but after quick calculation I decided.

"About $1,500."

He became a little more genial.

"You can do very nicely with that. Suppose we select the dining and bedroom sets first.

He calculated total prices for me, including all the extras I wanted thrown in, and we had enough left to buy lamps and rugs.

"Well," I said, "I'll bring my husband in to look them over some time. And he grunted. So I departed, seeking further fields to conquer me.

* *

High, Wide, and Handsome.

Down the street a ways, at 4740 Lincoln avenue, I passed another furniture store. I noticed a sign for high chairs and went in to see what polite luck I might have with them.

"Can I show you something, Miss?" the clerk asked as I entered.

"I'd like to look at high chairs," I said staunchly.

"Yes, madam; right this way, madam.

There wasn't much range of variety in high chairs, I soon discovered. You could have them painted or varnished, and that was about all.

He pointed out the special features.

"See, this strap will keep the baby from falling out."

"O, yes," I said, "but they seem awfully large."

He laughed.

"I guess you haven't bought many high chairs.

I admitted it, and he continued: "Well, I've sold a lot, but I haven't bought any myself. Marriage and kids is all right for them as likes it."

I was seeking a way out.

They didn't have any white ones, so I immediately set my heart on a white one. He tried long and vociferously to talk me out of it, but gave up after a while and let me go.

* *

Hot Weather Bargaining.

I stopped in a bakery at 4705 Lincoln avenue.

"I'd like some cream puffs," I said, cream puffs being one of my weaknesses.

"They won't keep in hot weather," the girl said, "so we don't make them. I can give you some filled with marshmallow."

I didn't care for marshmallow, and asked for cheese straws.

"No, we haven't any cheese straws, but," she added helpfully, "we have cheese cake on Saturdays."

"Well, how about Banbury tarts?"

"Banbury tarts," she said in amazement. "Now, what are they?"

I admitted I didn't quite know either, but they sounded as if they ought to be good. I finally went out with two blueberry muffins [for a nickel] under my arm and one pair of eyes staring incredulously after me.

* *

Searching for Stockings.

Up the street again, to a dry goods store at Lincoln and Lawrence, this time in search of silk stockings. The woman who waited on me was pleasant-eyed, and patient with my insistence on narrow heeled hose.

"No," she reiterated, "we haven't any like that, but we have pointed ones." And she showed me several varieties with double points and points on top of points.

"O, dear," she said, as there came a heavy clap of thunder. "I wish this rain would stop. My mother's in a cottage 'way out in the country and I help but worry about her."

I paused at a hair net counter, which she also served.

"Does anybody really wear these things any more?" I asked.

"For motoring," she informed me, "and in the evening, sometimes."

"I passed on out, weighing her politeness against the others.

* *

Sweet Sixteen?

The next stop was a dress shop at 4802 North Western avenue. There was a sale in progress, but the weather had kept every one except the politeness reporter away.

"I'll show you the bargains first," the attendant announced when I was safely inside. "What size do you wear?"

"Sixteen, usually," I declared.

"O," she said, "I think you take more than that," and I knew in my heart that she would have to give a tall exhibition of politeness to convince me she had earned the award.

But she was right about the size The sixteens were a pretty tight fit and I had to succumb to the larger sizes.

"I thought you were a litle plump." she insisted. She tried to convince me that a pink party dress trimmed in lace was just the thing for me. But it sagged on one shoulder and drooped at the back and I had struck her off my list anyway, so I refused it, and left.

* *

Wording a Wedding Card.

I went to a shop at 2253 Lawrence avenue that placarded "Wedding announcements." Hurriedly slipping off the wedding ring and leaving only the "diamond," I went in and asked to look at samples.

He was a huge man and he gathered himself into a chair in front of his sample folder, leaving me to drag one across the room or look over his shoulder.

"Well, now," he said, "there are really only three sizes," and he pointed them out to me—large, larger, and largest.

"Haven't you got any cute, tiny ones?" I mourned.

"Wait; we've just got in a new small one that goes into the envelope unfolded."

He showed it to me and I was properly entranced. The engraving, I was informed, could be variations of script, text, or a little used outline letter. The only samples he had of this were on black edged bereavement thank you's. So I didn't care for it.

"Now for the wording." He looked at me questioningly. "Your family going to announce it?"

"Why, I guess so," I faltered. "How else can you do it?"

My education was enhanced when he showed me a sample reading: "Miss Mary Blank and Mr. Johnny Jones announce their marriage to each other——"

But I decided to stick to the good old regulation form.

"Shall I make you a layout?" he urged.

"O, no," I breathed. "I'll have to discuss it with mother first," and I made a hasty exit.

* *

Back to the Start.

It was in search of entertainment for a sick friend that I approached the book counter in a department store at Lawrence and Winchester avenues.

"How about 'The Ten Commandment's?'" suggested the attendant. "That was an awful good movie. Or, here's a real exciting Harold Bell Wright."

While I was pondering over the merits of the two she lost interest in me and turned to more promising material, and I turned and went out.

Back to the hat shop, I decided. I'd give her another test and if she passed it the award was hers.

* *

The End of the Trail.

She recognized me as her torturer of earlier in the day, but the smile still persisted. It left in a moment of amazement when I handed her the card. And then was replaced by a reproachful glance—the first. I would kid her, would I?

I assured he it was real, on the square, and not a dream.

"But what have I done?" she exclaimed in wonderment. "I've read about it, of course, and envied the people who got it, but I never thought I would."

She was all blushes and confusion as in a rush she told me her name was Mrs. Coralie Williamson and she lived across the street, at 1644 Belmont avenue; that she had a little girl named Doris; that she and her husband both worked, and the money would come in mighty handy.

By the way, I did finally buy that beach hat.

TORTURED

Mrs. Coralie Williamson of 1644 Belmont avenue was pestered to the exhaustion point by a stranger in search of a hat, but she felt well repaid when this stranger informed her that the real quest was for a polite person, and that $50 was her reward.

FAMOUS HOMES

Chicago Poles Plan National Drama Society

Success of Local Alliance Inspires Expansion.

JULY FOURTH, this year was of double significance to the Polish people of Chicago, for in addition to celebrating the birthday of American independence, they also commemorated at the same time the birthday anniversary of the Alliance of Polish Literary and Dramatic Circles of America, an organization which now has a membership of more than 2,000 Poles in Chicago and which, according to Walter M. Zolla, general secretary, has plans for embracing similar organizations throughout the United States.

The principal object of the alliance is a broad, extensive and influential work of propagating and teaching the younger American born Poles the beauty of Polish speech, art, drama and literature and to inculcate in the Polish youth the love and desire for education.

Presents Polish Plays.

The Alliance was organized a year ago by representatives of twelve of the most active literary and dramatic clubs in Chicago, namely the Ossolinskich, Ognisko, Kraszewski, Julo Slowacki, Synowie Wolnosci, Wolna Polska, Milosc Ojczyzny, Brodzinskiego, Holy Trinity, Sacred Heart of Jesus, and A. Mickiewicz Literary and Dramatic circles; also the Polski Klub Artystyczny [Polish Arts Club]. During the first six months of this year, eight other societies, including the C. W. Reymont, Zjednoczenie, Tysiac Walecznych, and St. Francis Literary and Dramatic circles, applied and were admitted to membership.

Although in existence only a year, the organization has already presented to the Polish people of Chicago such gems of Polish art as "Zaczarowane Kolo" [The Enchanted Pool] and "Chata za Wsia."

* *

Honor Professor Stembler.

The play "The Enchanted Pool," a quasi-fantasy, is the creation of Lucian Rydel's pen. It shows the fantastic in the old legend of Faust, the signing of a pact with the devil for the sake of worldly gain, and the real in the great love of the miller's wife.

The "Chata za Wsia," is an other gem of Polish drama. It is based on an old Polish legend. The title translated in English is "The Cabin Outside the Village."

During Professor Stembler's visit to America the Alliance arranged a banquet in his honor and presented him with a beautiful white gold ring bearing the ensignia of the Alliance artistically engraved.

Seek University Chair.

The Alliance is now busily engaged in preparing a play from the pen of the peer of Polish dramatic authors, Alexander Fredro. The play will be staged Nov. 18 at Pulaski hall, 18th street and Ashland avenue. The administration is also working towards organizing a Polish Literary club at the University of Illinois, with the object of later persuading the faculty towards installing a chair of Polish literature.

The administration of the Alliance is composed of the following members of the various circles: Edward Wojcik, president; J. Stefanik, vice president; Miss S. Kobylaska, vice president; Walter M. Zolla, general secretary, [4443 South Richmond street]; K. Sechman, financial secretary; S. Macewicz, treasurer; A. Swiatoniowski, librarian and J. Wcislo, dramatic director.

Monthly meetings of the house of delegates are held at Stefanik's hall, the third Monday of each month.

Former Kaiser Draws Tourists to Dutch Town

DOORN, Holland.—(AP)—Since William II., erstwhile emperor of Germany, took up his abode at Doorn, the population of this village has risen from 3,400 to 4,000.

This is due to two factors in the opinion of the secretary of the local "Verkeersvereeniging," or travel bureau—one, the increased business opportunities which the presence of the Hohenzollerns has brought, the other, the attraction that the presence of the ex-kaiser exerts upon the tourist.

"There is no doubt that our village has grown because the ex-kaiser now resides in our midst," the secretary told the Associated Press. "Doorn castle buys its supplies in the village, the Germans constituting the former emperor's retinue shop in the community, and the numerous guests who visit his majesty leave money here."

Dr. and Mrs. J. G. McNeil of 12204 Stewart avenue are gadding about by airplane on their vacation. They hopped from here to Cheyenne, Wyo., for a visit with Mrs. McNeil's sister. And by the way, Judge Landis, who distinctly remembers the Deacon's One Hoss Shay, is now among our high flyers, his latest sky buggy ride being from Aberdeen, S. D., to Chicago.

THE dance given by the Mayfair chamber of commerce at the Mayfair community house was well attended and much enjoyed. Forrest Jarrett, local florist, greatly pleased his audience with his cornet solo.

Mrs. George Christensen and Mrs. A. J. Johnson, in charge of the bakery sale of the Ladies' Aid of the Norwood Park Methodist church, report excellent patronage. Part of the proceeds will be used to buy a new stove for the church.

"And how's business?" we politely interrogated, as is our wont, Miss Carey Hoey, the indispensable real estate lady of Wilmette.

"Just fine," she chirruped. "I put a three line ad in the Sunday Trib for a piece of vacant and my phone's been ringing all morning. I guess I have fifty prospects. If there's business the Trib gets it." Advt.

The Association Opposed to Salad may derive what cheer and comfort it may from the observation of Addison J. Hawes, the art and gift man, to D. A. R., the peerless West Towner, that "It has got so now they serve everything on a leaf of lettuce except a subpoena."

As was to have been expected, the annual picnic of the West Englewood Old Settlers' association was a success. Among the prize winners were Mr. and Mrs. William Weibel, 6512 Whipple street, oldest married couple; William Groener, 6318 Artesian avenue, horseshoe pitching; Edward W. Chopp, 7010 Oakley avenue, second place in the shotput.

June Violette Gillette, 3818 Schubert avenue, won first prize in the baby buggy parade of the Logan Square Business Men's association. Movies were taken of the event, and the features of many a handsome merchant have been seen on the screen as a result. Among those present are J. H. Cavanarry; Charles V. Falkenberg, newly married president of the association; Sidney Schwartz, Mark Fisher, etc.

A slightly used calaboose can be had on reasonable terms by applying to William Laatz, village president pro tem. of Spring Forest, over in southwestern Cook. It has been unoccupied for some time, except as a chicken roost, due to peaceable conditions generally, and a new two passenger gaol specifically. The latter, however, has never yet been filled to capacity, let alone overflowing. To the right kind of buyer, the village president will also throw in an old fire station.

Word has been received by friends of Peter Stomatis of Anggelina's confectionery, 3300 Lawrence avenue, that he will not return from Greece a bachelor. He was married last week to Miss Mary Kobbantze of Argos. They will return to Chicago in about a month.

Seven hundred folks attended the annual outing of Laurel Lodge, A. F. and A. M., on the banks of the Des Plaines river. Refreshments as well as balloons were supplied gratis, and there were disposed of 500 balloons, 500 packages of cracker jack, 2,400 packages of chewing gum, 75 cases of soft drinks, 45 gallons of ice cream, 30 gallons of cream and 300 gallons of coffee.

Mr. and Mrs. William Leubscher of 3128 Archer avenue had to hire a hall to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary, there were that many friends and relatives in attendance—altogether, 200.

* *

Mr. and Mrs. Siegfried Hirsch of 7308 Constance celebrated their silver wedding anniversary and I. G. Herzka, the toastmaster, commemorated it in poetry. We shall quote a few stanzas:

I hear the chime of silver bells,
So sweetly, sweetly ringing;
Of happy years their music tells,
Of gladness they are singing.
They ring of that day long ago
When 'neath love's banners, spreading,
Two lovers stood with hearts aglow—
'Twas Sig and Alma's wedding.

And in this circle here today
Are many friends and neighbors,
Who've journeyed with them on the way
In pleasures and in labors.
There's Tessie and her Hugo dear,
And Bella and her Mose;
Selma, Bertha, Sig are here,
All in their Sunday clothes.

Bertha and Hugo, Anna, Nate,
And Blanche and Albert, too;
With Fanny and her toothpick, Art,
To swell the happy crew.
There's I. G. with his Irish Rose,
Who won't let him get chilly;
Our honorary Mamie and Dan,
And Rose and Banana Willie.

It seems needless to say a good time was had by all, and ye ed wishes he had space to print the rest of the verses.

William R. Wilson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Wilson of 6827 Hobart avenue, is entering the United States Naval academy as a commissioned officer without the aid of any political influence or pull. He won his appointment solely upon his merits in a competitive examination. He is a graduate of the Carl Schurz high school. He served with the Norwood Boy Scout Troop No. 899, retiring as an eagle scout. William is one of those reasons why we're proud to be Chicagoans.

John Matthews of River Forest has realized his lifelong ambition. He is chief of that suburb's fire department. Born near Palos, Ill., in 1872, Mr. Matthews started going to fires as a boy. He never missed one. When he moved to Oak Park 35 years ago he promptly joined the volunteer bucket brigade and further enlarged his experience. In between fires he served customers at Whittlesey's grocery store, Lake and Marion streets. He used his delivery wagon team to haul the apparatus. Later he moved to River Forest and opened a grocery store of his own. His reputation had preceded him. He was importuned to join the department. The first time the alarm sounded he did. Since then he has made every fire. His yeoman service was rewarded when the chieftainship of the River Forest department became vacant and the village father said, "John, you're it."

About writing: Mrs. Maurice B. Rothrock of 6646 Woodlawn avenue, who manages to do her own housework and compose worthwhile poetry, says one never "sits down" to write. Writing, or creation, is an endless process. "You write as you wash or dry the dishes, or cook the evening meal, or, perhaps, as you make your way through the hurly burly of the loop or saunter through the cool sanctuary of a country lane." Mrs. Rothrock has just had published a book of verse, "Autumn Garlands," dedicated to her 83 year old mother.

Our industrious fellow townsman, Henry Rhode, steward of the Furniture Mart club, merits a word of commendation, if not two or three. He feeds from 5,000 to 6,500 every noon hour during the annual show. He bosses and keeps the peace and his temper in a family comprising fourteen cooks, five butchers, twelve dishwashers, ten pantry girls, five vegetable girls, 100 waiters, and forty bus boys. And when not so occupied he is treasurer of the village of Lake Forest. Henry, we salute you.

"The world's greatest club," placards our neighbor, Medinah Temple. So now we have the world's greatest newspaper, the world's greatest hotel, the world's greatest furniture mart, the world's greatest air rights development, the world's greatest apparel mart, all on or close to the giant's causeway that is Boul "Mich." Chicago is rapidly outgrowing the word formulas of Mr. Webster's ancient and honorable lexicon.

My word! "Do not overlook," writes Mary Ann, "that this is the week we commemorate the advent of the bloomers." Mrs. Amelia Bloomer, editor of a temperance journal, the Lily, according to authentic documents cited by Mary Ann, was the author of the daring innovation. "The costume," it is set forth, "consisted of a knee length tunic and the billowy bloomers, which reached to the instep and were gathered with an elastic. Surely, many Chicago women (ahem) will remember the date, July 23, 1851, and the furore of condemnation that swept the country."

Neighbors are getting ready for the third annual party of the West Lawn Improvement association. It will be a two weeks' carnival, starting Aug. 13. The proceeds will be used to build a community center near West 63rd street and South Tripp avenue. Frank Youngs, 6314 Komensky avenue, is chairman of the committee in charge.

It Pays to Know.

One summer evening while walking we came upon a window with a card reading, "Selling Out." The window was filled with Parisian jewelry, objets d'art, and a framed Simon colored etching, priced $20. It was one of Simon's snow scenes, which I happened to know had advanced in price to $50.

I purchased several pieces of jewelry at attractive prices, that I kept, and was careful also to purchase the Simon etching. This I sold in a few days at $50.

Is there an easier or a more pleasant way of finding a bargain, and, incidentally, picking up $30?

More Than She Expected.

About fifteen years ago I bought at an auction sale a brass bed, mattress and springs for ten dollars. After using it all these years I decided to get rid of the bed for a single one, so called in a second hand dealer. He looked it over carefully, then looked at me, and I thought he would offer me about a dollar.

When he said, "Now, lady, don't faint, for I cannot possibly give you more than $10," well, I did nearly faint, for I never expected so much.

Making It Good.

Seeing a sign on a loop cigar store advertising cartons of four leading brands of cigarets at a very low price, I stepped in and asked for a carton of my favorite ones. The clerk told me that he had just sold the last of that kind but was expecting more any minute.

Being in too much of a hurry to wait, I turned to go, but the clerk detained me and recommended another make as being "practically the same."

I purchased it and departed. Sometime later I again stopped in this store and asked for one package of my favorite cigaret, remarking to the clerk that I considered the brand he had advised me to purchase before as decidely inferior.

Without another word, the clerk, instead of giving me the package I had requested, handed me a carton of them, saying, "My mistake, sir. Please accept these with my apology!"

Needless to add, I have ever since patronized this store exclusively for my smokes.

Plan Records of AdPrograms for Small Stations

250 Might Broadcast Same Stuff at Same Time.

Washington, D. C., July 28.—Despite the fact that the idea apparently has not made much of a hit with the federal radio commission, great possibilities are held out by the sponsors of electric reproduction for typing together without wires the hundreds of smaller broadcasters into vast chains.

Electric reproduction, it may be explained, is broadcasting phonograph records without the aid of a microphone, but direct to the transmitter by means of an electric needle device.

The newest chain scheme seems to be to make a record of an advertiser's hour, send this record to a hundred or more smaller stations, and have it electrically reproduced and broadcast all over the United States at the same hour.

Judge Robinson Fooled.

Already Judge Ira E. Robinson, chairman of the radio commission, has come out openly as being against the broadcasting of phonograph records, and several other commissioners have privately expressed themselves adversely. So nearly do these electrically reproduced phonograph records sound like the real thing, however, that Judge Robinson himself admitted he had been fooled by them.

This has resulted in a stricter enforcement of the regulation that all phonograph records broadcast must be so announced.

The process of electrical reproduction was brought directly to the attention of the commission by Clinton R. White of Chicago, president of the Independent Broadcasters association, when he appeared in Washington in defense of his station, WCRW, which has been ordered to show cause why it should not be silenced on Aug. 1, together with 164 others.

Broadcast Many Records.

Mr. White testified that he was one of the first broadcasters to use records for air dissemination, and that at first the radio audience did not respond. However, since that time listeners have come to consider the electrical reproduction a very high grade of entertainment, according to Mr. White.

"Is it your opinion that electrical reproduction is a very important contribution to broadcasting," asked Louis G. Caldwell, chief counsel for the commission.

"Absolutely," replied Mr. White. "Station WENR, Chicago, is using electrical reproduction for two solid hours each morning, and other stations all over the country are turning to it."

Mr. White declared that he used these records in connection with direct advertising and that they are announced as being phonograph records in accordance with the commission's ruling.

Plan Huge Advertising Chains.

Mr. White also explained to the commission a plan whereby an advertiser who desired coverage in several cities of the country could have records made and distributed to broadcasters in these cities, and arrange to have them played for transmission to the radio audience at a certain hour on a certain evening. This would constitute a sort of chain, but would be used by only one station in one community, leaving the listener's dial free. These advertising records could be distributed to 100 or more stations electrically equipped to reproduce them throughout the country.

What the Chicago broadcaster said was the first public intimation that with the aid of electrical reproduction and phonograph records there might be competition offered by smaller stations to the present chains composed of larger stations in the selling of advertising time.

"It is really the first time any one has thought out a way to make smaller stations pay," an independent broadcaster remarked. "Why should not an advertising hour be heard on 250 stations instead of 50 stations?"

Open Air Concerts by Loud Speaker Moscow Feature

MOSCOW, July 28.—U. P.]—Open-air radio concerts at all hours of the day and late into the night are a characteristic feature of life in the capital during the spring and summer months.

Powerful loud speakers are installed at a dozen or so of the principal squares of Moscow and broadcast a continuous stream of speeches, music, and even vaudeville sketches. The loud speakers are usually perched high on a telegraph pole or a roof, so that the voices seem to issue from the clouds.

The sudden eruption of a booming tenor or piercing contralto as one walks unsuspectedly along the streets must be responsible for cases of severe shock among Mucovites, and especially among visitors unaccustomed to this form of public entertaining. When the weather is good—apparently a rare occasion in Moscow—little knots of people are gathered around these loud speakers.

Recently voices familiar to music-loving America filled the air in Moscow through these outdoors radio concerts. Titti Ruffo, Galli-Curci, Enrico Caruso, Tito Schipa and Sergei Radomsky entertained enthusiastic groups of radio fans on the streets of Moscow.

They were broadcast from American phonograph records, loaned to the soviet authorities for the occasion by Radomsky, who is now in Moscow, preparatory to a concert tour in the Caucasus.

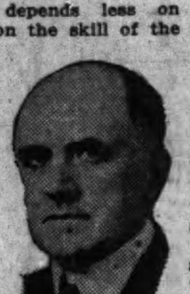
Tommy's Soiree on Air Again Wednesday

Wednesday evening at 7:15 brings another artistic production of "Tommy's Soiree." This week's program will be more modern that previous ones, though in no way will it lack in variety. German, Spanish, English and American trends in the modern musical movement differ so radically that a sample of these and more will furnish an interesting three quarters of an hour of entertainment.

Lessons in Auction Bridge

BY R. M. ROGERS.

ARTICLE XIX.



R. M. ROGERS.

Winning bridge depends less on luck than it does on the skill of the player. About two-thirds of the skill required is attributable to correct bidding and one-third of the skill to advantageous manipulation of the twenty-six cards controlled by the player.

Skill in bidding requires knowledge of accepted principles and conventions and the meaning of the terms used in different positions. These can all be learned from written instruction.

Skill in play requires what can also be learned from written instructions and applied to actual experience in play, and the effect would be materially quickened by comments if obtainable of an expert player or expert play instructor.

There are many expert players, but few of them are instructors, and few instructors are like one I have seen play in one of the clubs, and who, as I happen to know, has lost but eight times in fifty sittings of play. There must be something besides luck in his success at the game.

Instruction on playing must explain and illustrate the features of bringing in long suits, or cross ruffing, placing the lead, when and when not to establish the long suit before exhausting trumps; how to establish cards of reentry in the hand holding a long suit to be brought in, etc. By bringing in a suit is meant making all the tricks possible in it, and it is established when no one but the holder can take any more tricks in that suit.

We give below a deal where north and south play a no-trump, at which the novice would take six, or seven, or eight tricks, while a skillful player will easily make ten tricks.

The difference in the number of tricks made would lie in two plays, first, waiting till the third round to win the first heart trick by south, at which time east will no longer have any hearts to lead to his partner. The second feature is for south to let east win the first spade trick, and when south gets in on anything that east may lead, his play of his second and last spade will be overtaken by the king in dummy, followed by the ace, and the suit is established and all the rest of the spades in dummy's hand will be good, as no one can follow suit.

If dummy was to take the first round in spades with the king and return the ace, the queen would still be out in the hand of west and north, the dummy, has no trick taker in any other suit so that he can get to make the rest of the spades.

N. and S. take 1 Heart trick, 3 Diamonds, 5 Spades, 1 Club. Total, 10 tricks, making a game and rubber.

We will admit that in the bidding north would undoubtedly bid three spades but just as certainly South would bid three no trumps.

The difference in the score is considerable and may be tremendous because if it is the rubber game and north and south fail to take nine tricks another deal must be played and if east and west win it they will secure the bonus of 250 points, which north and south might have obtained by properly playing the previous hand, which of itself makes a difference of 500 points.

Questions and comments will be given cheerful attention, and unique hands analyzed for our readers, if stamped envelope is enclosed for a reply. Address Bridge Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN A. RYAN.

WITH the talking moving pictures taking the film world by storm, we are moved to wonder if the ladies of the celluloid will be as unpopular when their voices are recorded in dialogue and in song, as are the ladies of the radio. The process of picking up the voice is the same in the talking pictures as in the radio. Regular radio microphones are used. And, by and large, women's voices do not register pleasantly on the radio; so why should they be any better in the audible films?

Gloria Swanson, Mary Pickford and others are holding up their newest productions, undecided as to whether the insertion of vocal effects would enhance their films or ruin the valuable reputations they have built up pictorially.

It is a nice treat to hear Dolores Del Rio sing "Ramona" and elocute a bit in broken English, with a pronounced Spanish-Mexican accent, as she did once on a radio chain program; but we fear that her speaking throughout a moving picture would be unintelligible and unhappy.

We find the ladies participating less and less in radio programs. Sopranos who have ever been unpopular, are fewer. Two, for whom we must make an exception, because they are a delight every time we hear them, are Belle Forbes Cutter and Virginia Rae, the latter of the chain programs. Ladies in the radio playlets are fewer; we have heard many dialogue sketches on chain programs lately, but they were without benefit of femininity.

So we believe the going will not be easy, when the movie gals commence to act into the movie microphones.

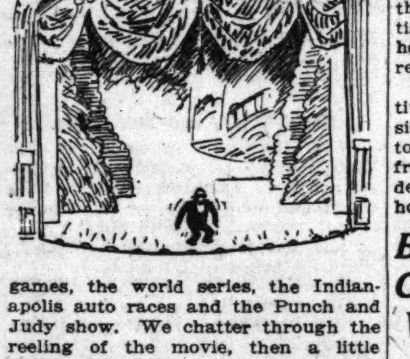
SUBTITLES, too, we understand, are going to be made vocal in the talking fims. That's a new job for us radio announcers, "Came the dawn, and two hearts entwined. This is Paul Schlitz announcing."

ONE OF the irritating habits of the men who write the announcements for the men who announce the chain advertising programs is the use of eastern time in their requests to "listen in again for this program at such-and-such an hour next Monday." The announcer of the Gypsies program, for instance, asks us to be with them again on the following Monday evening, "at 8:30," omitting even the specifications of eastern daylight saving time. Probably he reasons that by enumerating "Eastern time," "Central time," "Rocky Mountain time," and "Pacific Coast time" he would annoy some listeners—but not so much, we think, as he does by the ostensible disdain for the auditors who get the program from stations west of Detroit.

TODAY we make our first public appearance in this city, when we open a week's engagement at the Riviera theater. Heaven give us strength!

We learned a little while ago, upon the vaudeville stage in Madison and Rockford, that years of talking to an invisible audience makes one a bit self-conscious when addressing a real audience. We appreciated, when facing the footlights, the nervousness of footlight actors when they face the microphone.

What does an announcer do on the stage, you ask? Well, many of the radio people have been performing in the theaters for a long while. Ford and Glenn spend about half their time filling theatrical engagements about the country; Graham McNamee ducks away from the studio every once in a while to sing some songs and recite a few anecdotes for a week in a vaudeville theater; Al Carney, Pat Barnes, Art Linick, Uncle Bob and others are found on their nights off in nearby towns, yodeling and monologuing. In our case, we exhibit our own movie, "My Radio Scrap Book," showing our most important broadcasts and our manner of doing them—the Scopes Evolution Trial, the Red Grange games, the world series, the Indianapolis auto races and the Punch and Judy show. We chatter through the reeling of the movie, then a little talk, and finally a fast vocal reproduction of the Kentucky Derby.



Serial stories are very popular on the radio. Of course, folks will always listen to a story, but it was problematical at first whether a story read day by day over the air would attract a sustained interest. We have found that a novel which is read, a chapter a day, has a large audience, who write and phone in consternation when some other feature crowds out or postpones an episode.

Trombone Expert to Conduct Family Party Program

Arthur Pryor, world famous trombone soloist and leader of one of the oldest and most popular bands in America, will conduct the family party program over W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, tomorrow night with his celebrated company of brass, reed and string musicians, assisted by Olive Kline, soprano.

The program will run a full hour instead of a half hour and will be the second presentation of Arthur Pryor's band as a radio entertainment feature, its first radio concert having been given a year ago.

Although he has made an outstanding success as a band leader in recent years, the secret of Arthur Pryor's hold on American popular fancy dates back to his career as a trombone soloist. He could do things with a trombone never done before or since. Experienced players of the instrument used to think he had secret attachments which explained his trills, runs and tones. In Berlin a group of musicians called on him and insisted on inspecting his trombone, so certain were they that it was different from others.

Pryor's success has been all the more remarkable because he was not a schooled musicion, when, as a youth, he left his home in St. Joseph, Mo., to seek fame and fortune in New York. He was a natural musician and at the height of his early success he did not [as he now expresses it] know B flat from X. Nevertheless, he played perfectly selections which no one else could execute on a trombone and which musicians generally declared could not be played on that instrument.

W-G-N to Start New Feature on Famous People Thursday

A new feature makes its appearance on W-G-N's program this week. It is the beginning of a series of "Intimate Conversations of Famous Men." Next Tuesday evening at 7:15 o'clock, John Griggs, the author of these authentic glimpses into the lives of the historic characters, will impersonate Edgar Allen Poe, the renowned critic and imaginative writer of half a century ago.

Each week a new personage will be made to live again in the studio of W-G-N, dramatic scenes in the lives of these men and women who have made history in art, letters and music, being broadcast. Richard Wagner, Walt Whitman, and Abraham Lincoln are among those to be portrayed. Each story or incident presented is investigated as to its authenticity, and though a few liberties may be taken, the bulk of the stories may be relied upon as sound history.

Hoover's Speech of Acceptance on Huge Chain

Will Talk at Hour Whole Nation Can Listen.

One of the first moves on the part of the Republican national committee has been to form a radio bureau. O. P. Gascoigne, formerly manager of station WCAP which was later sold to station WRC in Washington, is at the head of the bureau. Mr. Gascoigne will supervise all details of broadcasting during the campaign.

Just as the Democrats staged their keynote speaker Claude G. Bowers for a night session to catch listeners at home so has the notification speech of Secretary Hoover, on Saturday, Aug. 11, from Leland Stanford university at Palo Alto, Cal., been timed so that the great middle western and eastern radio audiences may tune in on it during the evening hours.

Will Speak at Odd Hour.

To do this, however, and because of the difference in time between the Pacific and Atlantic coasts Mr. Hoover will have to begin his speech at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. At first glance this seems to be an odd hour to make a campaign speech but inasmuch as this is on Saturday afternoon daytime toilers in San Francisco and vicinity will be free to attend.

More important than that 5 o'clock Pacific time is 6 o'clock mountain time, 7 o'clock central standard and 8 o'clock in the evening central daylight time as prevails in Chicago and other cities. It will also be 8 p. m. eastern standard time in Washington and 9 o'clock eastern daylight time in New York and Boston.

Why Saturday Night Was Picked.

Thus the middle western and eastern territory where Mr. Hoover's managers' figure he will have the hardest fight will be covered better from a radio standpoint than the far west which he is almost certain to carry anyway.

More radio canniness is shown in setting the speech on Saturday night inasmuch as there are fewer advertising hours, less contracted time on the air, that evening than any other in the week. Inasmuch as the advertisers pay for the broadcasting of their hours they must be consulted with regard to giving them up.

However, since there are comparatively few of them on that night considerably less shifting will be required to give Mr. Hoover the right of way from coast to coast and border to border thus insuring him an enormous hookup.

Betty Jane, Musical Comedy of 1923, on W-G-N Next Thursday

W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, announces another of its musical comedy revivals which are directed by Harry W. Spingold. This week, instead of going back twenty years for a production, the play will be "Betty Jane," a popular musical comedy of 1923. The play, a story of life in Hollywood, is a creation of three Chicagoans. The book was written by William Jacobs, the lyrics by Ted Koehler, and the music by Earl Carpenter. The production will be on the air at 9 o'clock Thursday evening.

ATWATER KENT RADIO

THE 1929 ELECTRIC SET $77 (without tubes)

Model 40 A. C. set. For 110-120 volt, 50-60 cycle, alternating current. Requires six A. C. tubes and one rectifying tube, $77 without tubes.

Ask for a home demonstration

THERE'S ONE SURE WAY of finding out what the Atwater Kent electric set has to say—hear it in your own home.

Any Atwater Kent dealer likes to give you a store demonstration or to bring an Atwater Kent 40 out to the house and put it through its paces.

Atwater Kent Radio likes to be heard. So turn the Full-Vision Dial and listen. And when your ear tells you "This is right," don't forget to lift the lid and see the evidence of all that inner fineness which makes the Model 40 so satisfying, not only when you buy it but for a lifetime.

There's power here! And tone! And range! And selectivity! And simplicity! And beauty of appearance, too. And behind it the reputation of the greatest radio factory—and its ability to keep price down!

Campaign year! Hoover and Smith on the air soon. Be prompt! Ask for a demonstration right away!

Jackie Coogan

Jackie Coogan

They're going to have company, Cuckoo and Jumbo and Duck-Lucky and Rosie, the Little Wabbly Calf. The animals are spending all day today getting ready for a visit from Jackie Coogan at their Punch and Judy Show. Puff is washing her face and Pal is keeping out of the stickers. Listen in for Jackie (you know, the little boy in the movies who will appear in person at the Chicago theater starting tomorrow) from W-G-N at 6:20 this evening.

The SOX and the SENATORS . . . .

THE microphone is at the south side park today ready to pick up the hub-bub of the battle between the Chicago White Sox and the Washington Senators. The afternoon's sport feature starts on W-G-N at 2:55 o'clock. Have the dials polished and tune in!

The A.K. Concert

tonight has as its guests the Sittig Trio, that well known group of string artists, playing such tunes as "Song to the Evening Star" and "Bolero." The Trio consists of Fredrick Sittig, pianist, Margaret Sittig, 'cellist, and Edgar Sittig, violinist. You may hear them from W-G-N at 8:15.

"Fess Williams E'spo'tulatin'"

THEY'RE still at it, this hot colored band under the personal direction of Fess Williams with the rest of his jazzy crew. They're still at their business of creating the most rhythmic and most typically colored program on the air. This show comes hot on hot wires directly from the Regal Theater where Harry Gourfain herds the notes into the microphone at 11 o'clock this evening.

Frank Roberts, Tenor . . . . .

THERE has been much favorable comment regarding the voice of this young tenor, and well deserved comment it is. 10:15 brings to you a live patter of song sung by Frank Roberts from station W-G-N. Tune in Mr. Roberts this evening and hear his bright program.

HOOPLAS and HISSES

HUMPH!

W-G-N:
Why don't you take down the towers when Quin Ryan is at the mike? You don't need them.—Carl Pierce, Morris, Ill.

THANK YOU, PAUL.

Dear W-G-N:
Just a slight appreciation for your wonderful programs. When we want to be sure of high class entertainment we invariably look to your station.—Paul V. Zinns, Milwaukee, Wis.

Henry Dixon's Hawaiians

THE strains of Waikiki will be strummed snappily today at 1 o'clock sharp marking the opening of the half hour of Hawaiian music presented every Sunday afternoon from W-G-N by Henry Dixon's Trio. They're contented lads, these Hawaiians, and happy. They sit dreamily in W-G-N's studio, just as though they were sitting under a spreading palm tree on their native beach tuning their guitars and ukulele to their keen ears. They play vivid music, popular, classical, marches and, best of all, characteristic music of their native islands. Just in time for Sunday dinner.

100! 100! 100!

Set your dials to W-G-N tonight and leave them there each night until the number of hours you have listened equals 100. Then send in your name for the official membership certificate. Today's additions to the roster are:

424. O. Jim Read, Elkhart, Ind.
425. Bernard Brozowski Jr., Wauconda, Ill.
426. Marion Guthmann, Chicago, Ill.

Girl Reporter Sallies Forth in Pursuit of Politeness

London's Queen of Night Clubs, Jailed, Retires

One of Titled Sons-in-Law to Sell Gay Resorts.

BEHIND the bars for a second time because of her night club operations, Mrs. Kate Meyrick, "queen of clubs," has finally surrendered after a long struggle with London's police. She announced at her trial in Bow street police court that she is through with night club life, and her understudies, one of them an earl, are preparing to get rid of her clubs.

Judging from the reaction of the fashionably dressed audience that heard the sentence passed, her retirement is a catastrophe to social London.

The police call Mrs. Meyrick the worst breaker of license laws in the metropolis, but her friends declare her to be the most remarkable woman in London. Certainly she has made her gay resorts necessary to fashionable London, counting among her friends and patrons peers, generals, and men in the public eye. Despite her dubious profession, she succeeded in marrying off her daughters into two of the oldest families in Britain.

Two years ago Dorothy ["Dolly"], the elder daughter, was married to Baron de Clifford and more recently the younger, May, married the Earl of Kinnoull. In both cases prison sentences for Mrs. Meyrick followed the weddings, but the Earl of Kinnoull became her right hand man in directing the night clubs.

"Mother" Meyrick is an astonishing and contradictory character. Described as a sentimental, motherly sort of person, she was long the most notorious, picturesque, and beloved figure in London's hectic night life. Although a model parent, she defied the law and operated certain resorts appealing to the lowest sort of patrons. Yet some of her clubs were the most fashionable in London. And her daughters, carefully shielded from their mother's notoriety during their school days, made their debuts from behind the footlights of a night club.

PROTECTED

Left Without Support.

Before the war Mrs. Meyrick was the wife of Dr. Ferdinand Meyrick, a Dublin physician and psychoanalyst. He had a pet idea of a sanitarium for neurotics, an idea now proved practical but then derided. He sacrificed everything to keep up his hospital, and for twenty years the family struggled along on a small income. Then about the time war broke out husband and wife parted.

Mrs. Meyrick had been satisfied with the usual middle class existence, but after the separation she and her children were left practically without means of support. An advertisement concerning a cabaret for rent cheap caught her eye and she determined to have a fling at the night club business. But she retained the ambition properly to educate her children and to marry her two daughters well.

Perhaps she foresaw the future profit to be made from the restaurants which the war was making so popular. The nervous hysteria of the conflict had struck London. Dancing

Jacob M. De Winner, the barber, has closed his shop at 508 West 63d street for to take in the sights at Yellowstone park and replenish his stock of conversational tidbits. Jake hadn't had a vacation in twenty-two years and it was sadly depleted. In fact, it had narrowed down to the weather and the Cubs' chances in the pennant race. Jake figures now he will have it all over his competitors.

* *

"What streets," queried Patrick J. Donovan, acting superintendent of same, "are worst in Marquette, Gage park and adjoining areas?"

"All of them," he was told.

Sundry motor vehicles of our citizenry have burgeoned with a new device, pendant from the license plate and reading in bold capital letters, to-wit: "Al Smith." Curious as to what manner of motorists such might be, your correspondent copied a couple of license numbers at random and identified the owners as, to wit or two-wet: Michael J. Sullivan, 882 Pine street, Winnetka, and John J. Corcoran, 5729 Kenmore avenue, Chicago.

An anxious subscriber quite upset the even tenor as well as all the mezzo sopranos of our way in ye Sunday room sanctum by a phone inquiry as to what is the correct style garb for a gentleman to wear who is to officiate at a cornerstone laying. It stumped the best minds in the sanctum, which is cruel and unusual. It just so happened that none of us had laid a single corner stone this year.

Mrs. Frank P. Ayer of 5229 Dorchester avenue is now sojourning in Chichester, N. H., where, she writes Hyde Park friends, she is adding a number of choice specimens to her rare collection of aurora borealises.

LLOYD MAXWELL.

THE "I Knew Him When" club presents Lloyd demonstrating flaming youth in the days of '93, or the world's fair. The modish derby, we regret to say, was black, not brown. The concealed weapon at the other end of the anchor chain, dangling carelessly from Lloyd's sack coat, was a timepiece about the size of a pineapple, but not quite so loud. Lloyd has since gone in for knickers and golf when he isn't grand marshaling for the Elks. One of our prominent advertising men—president and general manager of Williams and Cunnyngham.

Do You Know These People in Literature?

Questions About Famous Fiction Folk.

Here are a number of hints as to the identity of sundry characters of more than passing fame. Some of these were created by Homer, Sheridan, Goldsmith, Dickens, Scott, and other immortal authors. Just how many of these "brain children" do you know? For each correct answer count one. Then, 70 means you belong to the high school group; 80 means you are in the college student group; 90 that you belong in Gene Tunney's Yale university class, and 100 that you are of the élite literary intelligentsia.

Answers are to be found elsewhere in this section.

And Finds It in North Side Millinery Shop

But Not Without Suffering Many Rebuffs.

By Helen Dare

HER smile wins.

A million dollar smile? Well, perhaps that would be exaggerating. But it was worth $50 to her the day I encountered it in my pursuit of politeness.

It greeted me first from over a mop. The day's dreary rain had flooded the little millinery shop at 1643 Belmont avenue and she was busily salvaging the stock and mopping up water. Not too busy to smile at me or bring out hat after hat to a never quite satisfied customer.

"It's sort of hard to pick out a hat," she consoled me, "when you don't know what kind you want, but I don't mind showing them to you."

I turned from cloches to vagabonds, from straws to felts. I tried on blue ones and green ones and red ones. There wasn't any style or color I wouldn't try. And all the while she was trundling them back and forth her bright smile was in evidence.

* *

Smiling Through Defeat.

"It's terrible weather," she remarked, so cheerily that she might have been wishing me a happy New Year. "I was alone here when the worst shower started and it was all I could do to save the hats before I got help."

Now I was trying on broad rimmed beach hats.

"It's nice, but I'm too short to wear a big hat," I said as I tried the effect in three mirrors at once.

"Well, I don't know about height, but you're slim enough," she assured me.

Sales flattery, perhaps, but she must have catalogued me as a "looker" by this time and the hat at stake was priced $1.45. No, politeness, I decided—not the politeness of thank yous and excuse mes, but the kind that comes from a pleasant disposition and a desire to set people at their ease.

I put on my own hat and started

Bottles and Bowls from Sweden

Exquisitely Designed Glassware and Other Novelties

A silver bowl by one of the world famous modernists. Its design and workmanship make it worthy of any tradition, and it departs from all tradition in its modern perfection.

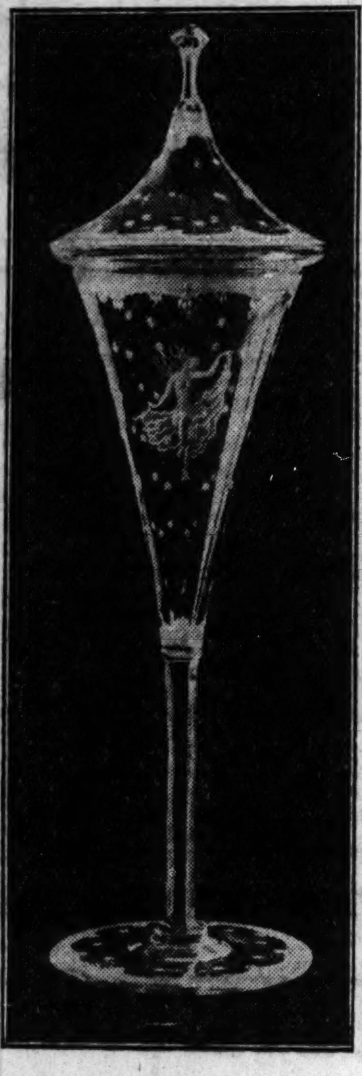
A glass bowl made in Sweden by a famous factory and of such exquisite workmanship that, if it were antique, collectors would be bidding for it at auction in four figures. The drawing as well as the etching is superb.

A silver compote in handwrought design. Its size as well as its chaste beauty make it a fitting ornament for the center of the small dining table. It is not prohibitive in price, though of sterling silver and comparatively heavy.

A covered glass bowl which can be used with the cover on for sweetmeats or rose leaves and, without the cover, for holding flowers. It is particularly finely etched and the glass itself is of a superior quality.

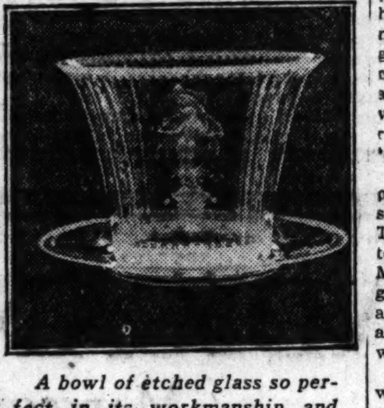
A very amusing beverage bottle for a gift to a man. It has a tight cork and can be used also as a shaker. The design is a convivial one of a cafe table on which are a number of empty glasses.

A small but very beautiful covered glass bowl. Its design and quality are up to the standard of the famous Swedish factory, from whence it came, and which captured most of the prizes of the International Exposition of Arts and Crafts.



A covered glass urn in modernistic design which shows to what classic beauty modernism can attain in the hands of a fine artist. The allover design is in stars with seven points, and the flying figure is draped in a cloud.

Another amusing beverage bottle designed to hold whatever is served with the appetizers, for on its face are etched pictures of delectable fish, olives, toast, and other dainties. It, too, can be used as a shaker, as it has a silver airtight cork.



A bowl of etched glass so perfect in its workmanship and design that the Chicago Art institute has, in its permanent exhibition, several pieces from the same factory and by the same artist in Sweden.

London's Queen of Night Clubs, Jailed, Retires

One of Titled Son-in-Laws to Sell Gay Resorts.

DETHRONED

Mrs. Kate Holmes Meyrick, sentenced to six months' imprisonment for violation of the club license laws of the British metropolis.

and dance halls achieved a tremendous vogue. Soldiers and sailors on leave thronged the gay resorts and the mad women of the time gathered there to meet the soldiers and sailors.

* *

Raided by Police.

Her first club was in a basement in Leicester square, and the gayety of the place soon made it one of the most popular in London. The club was the liveliest in the hectic west end and tense nerved revelers of all classes poured money into her hands. Thieves and peers elbowed each other on its tiny dance floor.

That club was closed in time, but she opened others, running three or four at once. The police raided them frequently, usually for violations of the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicants after midnight. But whenever one of her places was closed, Mrs. Meyrick opened another elsewhere, keeping the police always jumps behind her.

Before her latest arrest, a magistrate issued twenty-six summonses against her clubs. She always pleaded guilty, paid the fine, and promptly opened another place. At different times she has operated forty-three.

Girls Dance with Dukes.

Meanwhile her children were being educated at the most exclusive schools in England under assumed names. Son Leslie attended Harrow, most of whose students are chosen from members of the aristocracy, while the two girls went to Girton, the feminine equivalent of Harrow. During vacations they toured the continent wth well paid chaperons, and they never set foot in any of their mother's clubs until after graduation.

By that time, however, they were able to take a hand in the business, appearing nightly at their mother's sumptuous Forty-Three club. They became one of the chief attractions of the place, and their mother boasted that her daughters had danced with princes, dukes, and cabinet ministers.

Informality the Magnet.

The Forty-Three in Gerrard street was Mrs. Meyrick's favorite establishment. Expensively decorated within, it had a plain, heavily curtained, plate glass front, guarded by two huge and gorgeously uniformed commissionaires—really bouncers in disguise. Within, seated at a small cashier's desk, was the proprietress, always dressed in the same shabby velvet coat, with untidy hair and a ready smile which exposed a missing tooth.

There were two scales of admission prices—a pound if the patron wore a silk hat and five shillings if he didn't. Titled personages were never pressed to pay, it being enough for Mrs. Meyrick to have a nobleman for a guest. She accepted rubber checks and I. O. U.'s carelessly, often giving a youth a sovereign when she saw he was broke.

The merry informality of the place was the magnet which drew the crowd. In the kitchen any morning one might find a famous actress cooking herself a breakfast of bacon and eggs, with a burglar making coffee and a duke washing up at the sink. Liquor was sold freely at all hours despite the law, and even imprisonment did not prevent her from keeping the place wide open.

* *

"Sink of Iniquity."

At the opposite extreme from this fashionable club she owned another called Dalton's—once denounced by a magistrate as a "sink of iniquity." It was the worst kind of underworld dive. The orchestra consisted of three Negroes, who played until they tired. Then they would turn on a phonograph and mingle with the guests. That club was soon closed.

Nevertheless "Mother" Meyrick saw to it that her daughters met only the "right" men, the men best in reputation and family tradition, though not always in cash. In Paris, where she was helping to run a Montmartre cabaret called Meyrick's Gaiety, Dolly met the 19 year old Baron de Clifford. He was one of the "right" men. His title dates back to 1299, but his estate is only credited with some 13,000 acres in County Mayo, Ireland — not a particularly valuable asset.

Back in London, Dolly opened a club of her own, the Manhattan, and De Clifford became the most frequent guest. For several months he and Dolly were constantly together, and one night they suddenly disappeared. The next day it was disclosed that they were married.

* *

Walked Home at Dawn.

With Dolly removed from the trio, May, the other daughter, took a still more active part in directing her mother's clubs. Mrs. Meyrick exercised the same precautions in choosing her dancing partners as she had with Dorothy's, and presently another "right" young peer appeared.

The earl of Kinnoull was not perhaps so "right" as he might have been in point of contemporary reputation, but his family was famous in Scotland three centuries before King James I, created the earldom. When he met Miss Meyrick at the Silver Slipper club he was still legally married to his first wife, the former Miss Enid Fellows. He announced his engagement to May just one day after she, the countess, secured her divorce.

The clubs would close up at dawn. Mrs. Meyrick would make the rounds of her establishments, stuff the night's receipts into an old black bag, and walk the mile or so home. She considered taxicabs extravagant. A tired, rather bent and shabby little woman, no one would have suspected her to be "London's most notorious law breaker," carrying home more than a thousand pounds!

SHIELDED

Lady de Clifford, Mrs. Meyrick's elder daughter, who met only the "right" men in her mother's resorts.

Former Kaiser Draws Tourists to Dutch Town

DOORN, Holland.—(AP)—Since William II., erstwhile emperor of Germany, took up his abode at Doorn, the population of this village has risen from 3,400 to 4,000.

This is due to two factors in the opinion of the secretary of the local "Verkeersvereeniging," or travel bureau—one, the increased business opportunities which the presence of the Hohenzollerns has brought, the other, the attraction that the presence of the ex-kaiser exerts upon the tourist.

"There is no doubt that our village has grown because the ex-kaiser now resides in our midst," the secretary told the Associated Press. "Doorn castle buys its supplies in the village, the Germans constituting the former emperor's retinue shop in the community, and the numerous guests who visit his majesty leave money here."

TRADE'S PICKING UP

"WE'VE got one customer, anyhow," smiles Roselle Cahn, 6706 South Cornell avenue, as she pours out a glass of her own make of lemonade. Roy Thompson, 6718 South Cornell avenue, is the customer with the necessary three cents, and Rosemary Payne, 6712 South Cornell avenue, is assisting in the store today as chief clerk. YOUR FLOWER GARDEN

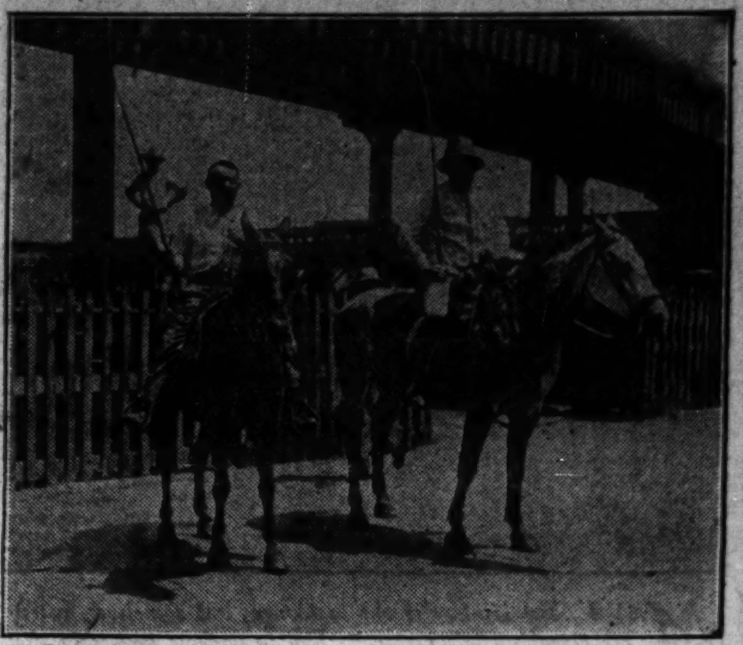
THE sunlight falls on blossoms that bid you come and enjoy their beauty and fragrance as they nod from their stems in Garfield park. And, standing south of Madison street, you have this view of the huge garden framed by the shade and leafage of kindly trees that grow along its border. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

OUT FOR THE SUNSHINE

THE golf game is incidental with Alice Butler, 2907 Warren avenue, and Grace Walsh, 3125 Warren avenue. The idea of the neighbor girls is to get out and soak in the sun's rays while laughing their way around the links at Garfield park. Can't tell, though, they may be taking the contest in dead earnest before they finish the twosome. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

CHICAGO COWBOYS

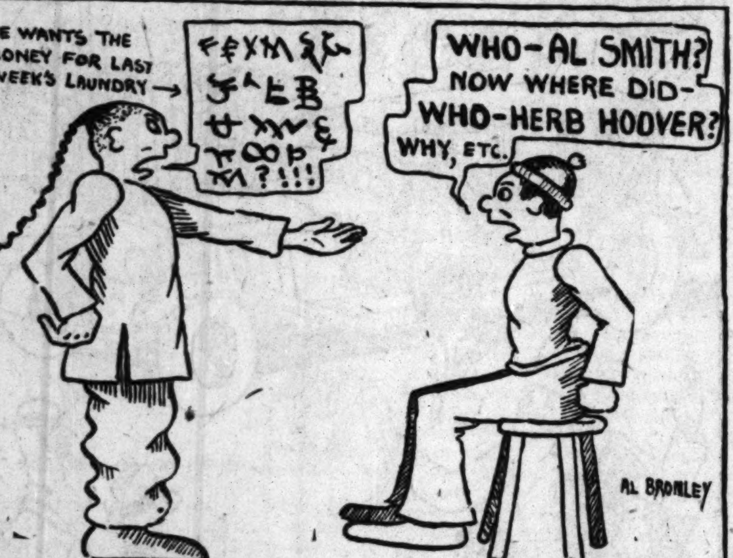


THEY may not be as picturesque as some of the cattle men in the movies, but Phillip Siegel, 7931 Essex avenue, and Max Farley, 8226 South Sangamon street, come in contact with plenty of live stock. They are among the gentlemen who sit in the saddle and crack their whips while handling herds at the stockyards.

AL ARGUES WITH THE LAUNDRY

Solves Great Mystery of the Mangled Bed Sheet

By Snowshoe Al.



HE WANTS THE MONEY FOR LAST WEEK'S LAUNDRY →
?!!!
WHO-AL SMITH? NOW WHERE DID- WHO-HERB HOOVER? WHY, ETC.
AL BROMLEY

YESTERDAY afternoon I breezes into the Chinese laundry across the avenue from our house, and I was in a murderous mood when I entered the dump, believe me! A Slant-Eye was standing behind the counter ironing a shirt. He was wearing a pair of bedroom slippers and fourteen yards of thin black cloth which was evidently supposed to be a pair of pants.

"Hello," says Mr. Slant-Eyes; "velly nice day, huh?"

"Who cares?" says me, very sarcastically. "Listen, Mongolian person, I ain't here to argue with you about the weather! You just delivered our laundry, and I found this thing (unwrapping a small bundle which I had brought with me) among it. Look at it!"

"Him look like funny lace curtain!" grins Mr. Slant-Eyes.

"Yeh," says I, "but him was a bed sheet when we sent him to you! I know it must have been a bed sheet because we ain't got no lace curtains in our wigwam. Hell, it looks worse than a lace curtain—it's got more holes in it than a screen door! What the dickens did you do to it?"

"I mangle him," says the Chink.

Al Loses His Temper.

"I'm glad you admit it," says I, feeling rather relieved. "I thought I better bring it back to you before my wife sees it—you're lucky she ain't home this afternoon. Well, what are you gonna do about it?"

"No do nothing about it," squawks Opium Oswald; "that's the way him come here in first place!"

"You are a monkey-faced liar," says I, "because you just got through admitting that you mutilated it! Why don'tcha stick to one story? You change your mind oftener than a chorus girl changes her address. You are so dumb you think an oyster cracker is some sort of a hammer. If I lose my temper, I'll——"

"Him look like that when him come here!" insists Mr. Slant-Eyes. "Your wife allus tell me to mangle bed sheets an' other large pieces!"

"Are you trying to be funny, you Oriental Shirt-Scorcher?" howls me, getting real peeved. "You've got a flock of nerve telling me my wife suggested that you destroy some of our laundry! She wouldn't think of doing that any more than you would think of taking a bath. Your name must be Ananias."

"My name Charlie Bum Lung," squawks him.

"Yeh?" sneers me; "you'll have more than bum lung if you don't pay for this damage—you'll have a couple bum eyes. I'll smack you into silence or any other place you want to go! I betcha this sheet was worth at least three berries before you slaughtered it—cough up three bucks!"

* *

Threatens Damage.

"No understand," says Mr. Bum Lung.

"All right, me try talkee your language," says I, pointing to the remains of the sheet; "you mangle him, huh? Yes?"

"Sure," says he.

"Well, me no likee him no more," says I, "so you keepee. You allee samee, slippee me three frogskins or me sockee you on snoot. You catchee idea now, huh?"

"ASDFG ZXCVB HJKLM YUIOP!" howls Mr. Bum Lung.

"That static don't mean a thing to me," says I; "you sound like my radio when six stations are coming in at the same time. Lay off that goofy Hongkong conversation an' start talking business! Give me three dollars and you'll still have a laundry, otherwise you ain't gonna have anything except a blank mind; in fact, the morning papers will probably contain news items such as:

"'POLICE FIND DAZED SLANT-EYE IN VACANT LOT! Mr. Charles B. Lung, prominent soapsuds merchant, was picked up in a somewhat mangled condition last night by the police. He was lying in a vacant lot, surrounded by several dirty shirts and a couple piles of lumber. Neighbors insist that there was a laundry on the premises yesterday, and the piles of lumber have a tendency to substantiate their statements. The cops believe the joint was struck by a cyclone. Mr. Lung was carried to a hospital in six bushel baskets, and the doctors wish to assure his friends (if any) that he will be perfectly well again in about twenty or thirty years.'"

New Arrival.

"LKJHGFDSA POIUYTREWQ CXZ MNBVGF!!!" squeals Mr. Bum Lung, picking up a flatiron.

"You're another, you $@$@$@$@$ @$@$@$@$@!!" says I, picking up a large bottle of bluing; "when I get through with this shack you can look at it an' sing 'My Blue Heaven.' You better grab the phone an' call a doctor right now before we start—it'll save time. Also phone your milkman an' tell him to stop delivering cow sirup to this address until the year 1945!"

At this moment another slant-eye breezes through the back door and enters the laundry. This baby looked like a cross between a shriek of laughter an' a cry for help! If he only had a muzzle on him he could have got a job in any Dog and Pony show on earth. He had patent leather hair, patent leather shoes, red socks, white pants, and a funny face. His mother must have had poor eyesight, otherwise she would have picked him up right after he was born an' handed him to the cat. Yup, I've seen better looking things in garbage cans.

Mr. Charlie Bum Lung greeted the newcomer with huge quantities of enthusiasm and slung about five thousand words of conversation at him in less than two minutes. Anybody could tell that the conversation was about me, because Charlie pointed in my direction several times and waved his flatiron wildly. The new arrival raised his eyebrows and seemed very much amused; then he jabbered right back at Mr. Lung. Whereupon the latter turns to me and says:

* *

Mr. Ching Sing Ling.

"Him my cousin. Him talk to you! Him talk better than me! Him got college education!"

"You're a liar," says I; "him ain't wearing raccoon coat!"

"Nevertheless," horns in the newcomer, "I am the cousin of Charlie Bum Lung, and I——"

"I suppose your name is Algernon Bad Tonsils," sports me, "or maybe your Horatio Punk Stomach, or possibly Reginald High Blood Pressure. All right, I'll lick both of youse——",

"My monicker," says he, lighting a cigaret very nonchalantly [whatever that means] and blowing a mugful of smoke towards the ceiling, "is Ching Sing Ling, and I——"

"It sounds like somebody rattling a pocketful of small change," says I; "either that or part of the Westminster chimes. No matter what your name is, you better dive under a stove or any other place which looks convenient, because me and your cousin are all prepared to cheat the air mail by sending packages through the atmosphere at each other without bothering to stick postage on 'em."

"My cousin just explained the situation to me," remarks Mr. Ling, "and it strikes me very funny—"

"If this bottle of bluing lands between your ears you will either be struck funny or knocked silly," says I.

* *

The Fireworks Start.

"I understand," says he, "that you want Mr. Lung to pay for one of your articles which he mangled. The word 'mangle' has two entirely different definitions. My cousin mangled the article with this large machine which you see in the corner. Didn't you ever see anything get mangled with a large machine?"

"Certainly," says I; "I once saw a drunken sailor fall in front of a swiftly moving beer truck. What's that got to do with my three dollars?"

Just then a very tough looking person walked into the laundry. I could see that he was just aching to hand somebody a slam in the ear. His name was probably Oscar Bloodshed; anyhow, that's how he looked.

"Listen, bums," says he to the two Slant-Eyes; "for the last two days I've been looking for my minnow net and my wife thinks she sent it to you among my dirty shirts by mistake. Well, if she did, it never came back! You're a pair of crooks an' I'm gonna wreck this dump right now!"

Whereupon he rolled up his sleeves and rushed behind the counter. The result was beautiful! A flat iron hit him in the stomach, a teapot smacked him on the chin, and several cakes of soap bounced off the top of his head. Mr. Bloodshed staggered backwards and sat down in a corner. Mr. Charles Bum Lung then started slinging washboards at the poor gentleman. I ducked through the front door and went home.

"Where have you been?" says my wife to me.

"Over to the soapsuds establishment," says me.

"What's that funny looking piece of goods you're carrying?" says her.

"O, that!" grins me; "it came here today in our bundle of laundry, and I thought it was a bedsheet full of holes. However, I now have reasons for believing that it is a minnow net."

OUT ON THE WEST SIDE

Mexican Girls Anxious to Be Pilots of Air

MEXICO CITY.—(AP)—Eleven young ladies and more than 500 men have applied for instruction in a proposed school of commercial aviation here. The Mexican Aeronautical association, composed of a group of civilians anxious to encourage commercial flying in Mexico, has announced it will open a school to train pilots as soon as planes can be bought, instructors secured and a field established.

Planes in France Are Parked Free

PARIS.—(AP)—The French government has provided free parking fields for private airplanes as a means of encouraging the adoption of airplane travel by the public.

Seventy permanent fields have been created and designated "civil fields." This will distinguish them from the military landing areas. There is a time limit of 48 hours on the free parking privilege after which a small fee is charged.

Chicago Poles Plan National Drama Society

Success of Local Alliance Inspires Expansion.

JULY FOURTH, this year, was of double significance to the Polish people of Chicago, for in addition to celebrating the birthday of American independence, they also commemorated at the same time the birthday anniversary of the Alliance of Polish Literary and Dramatic Circles of America, an organization which now has a membership of more than 2,000 Poles in Chicago and which, according to Walter M. Zolla, general secretary, has plans for embracing similar organizations throughout the United States.

The principal object of the alliance is a broad, extensive and influential work of propagating and teaching the younger American born Poles the beauty of Polish speech, art, drama and literature and to inculcate in the Polish youth the love and desire for education.

Presents Polish Plays.

The Alliance was organized a year ago by representatives of twelve of the most active literary and dramatic clubs in Chicago, namely the Ossolinskich, Ognisko, Kraszewski, Julo Slowacki, Synowie Wolnosci, Wolna Polska, Milosc Ojczyzny, Brodzinskiego, Holy Trinity, Sacred Heart of Jesus, and A. Mickiewicz Literary and Dramatic circles; also the Polski Klub Artystyczny [Polish Arts Club]. During the first six months of this year, eight other societies, including the C. W. Reymont, Zjednoczenie, Tysiac Walecznych, and St. Francis Literary and Dramatic circles, applied and were admitted to membership.

Although in existence only a year the organization has already presented to the Polish people of Chicago such gems of Polish art as "Zaczarowane Kolo" [The Enchanted Pool] and "Chata za Wsia."

* *

Honor Professor Stembler.

The play "The Enchanted Pool," a quasi-fantasy, is the creation of Lucian Rydel's pen. It shows the fantastic in the old legend of Faust, the signing of a pact with the devil for the sake of worldly gain, and the real in the great love of the miller's wife.

The "Chata za Wsia," is another gem of Polish drama. It is based on an old Polish legend. The title translated in English is "The Cabin Outside the Village."

During Professor Stembler's visit to America the Alliance arranged a banquet in his honor and presented him with a beautiful white gold ring bearing the ensignia of the Alliance artistically engraved.

Seek University Chair.

The Alliance is now busily engaged in preparing a play from the pen of the peer of Polish dramatic authors, Alexander Fredro. The play will be staged Nov. 18 at Pulaski hall, 18th street and Ashland avenue. The administration is also working towards organizing a Polish Literary club at the University of Illinois, with the object of later persuading the faculty towards installing a chair of Polish literature.

The administration of the Alliance is composed of the following members of the various circles: Edward Wojcik, president; J. Stefanik, vice president. Miss S. Kobylaska, vice president; Walter M. Zolla, general secretary. [4443 South Richmond street]; K. Sechman, financial secretary; S. Macewicz, treasurer; A. Swiatoniowski, librarian and J. Wcislo, dramatic director.

Monthly meetings of the house of delegates are held at Stefanik's hall, the third Monday of each month.

FAMOUS HOMES

Making It Good.

Seeing a sign on a loop cigar store advertising cartons of four leading brands of cigarets at a very low price, I stepped in and asked for a carton of my favorite ones. The clerk told me that he had just sold the last of that kind but was expecting more any minute.

Being in too much of a hurry to wait, I turned to go, but the clerk detained me and recommended another make as being "practically the same."

I purchased it and departed. Sometime later I again stopped in this store and asked for one package of my favorite cigaret, remarking to the clerk that I considered the brand he had advised me to purchase before as decidely inferior.

Without another word, the clerk, instead of giving me the package I had requested, handed me a carton of them, saying, "My mistake, sir. Please accept these with my apology!"

Needless to add, I have ever since patronized this store exclusively for my smokes. E. G. Mc.

Fixed the Overshoes.

Two years ago, in the late winter, I bought a pair of overshoes for which I paid $4.50 but which proved to be unsatisfactory, as they barely covered my ankles.

In a short time one of them burst out from the fastener, but I continued to wear them that winter. The following winter I thought I would go back to the store where I bought them to see if they could be mended some way, and much to my surprise they replaced them with a new pair about two inches higher than the others without question as to when I had bought them or how long I had worn them.

I always buy my footwear there now. A. M.

A Pleased Customer.

One day as I passed a dress shop I noticed a chic frock for $15. I had not the money with me then—not even enough for a deposit. I went in and asked the woman if she would put it aside for me.

She charmingly assented. The next day I paid her the full amount and left the dress there, to call for in the evening. When I returned and asked for my dress to my astonishment the woman handed me $5.10 and explained that a sale started that day and my dress would have been included in it. Needless to say I always get my frocks at a certain store now. M. S.

Hungary's Girls Said to Wear Shortest Skirts

BUDAPEST.—(AP)—Prominent society women have opened a campaign against the short skirts worn by Hungarian girls. It is charged that nowhere in the world has the style for brevity been carried to such startling extremes as in Hungary.

The appearance of girls and young women on the promenades and in the fashionable tea rooms along the Danube with skirts four or five inches above the knee has produced an outcry in press, church and parliament.

Archduchess Isabella of Hapsburg, who is the patron of several philanthropic associations in Hungary, is among the chief opponents of the abbreviated skirt.

"Our women are simply crazy," she said to the Associated Press correspondent. "They would sooner starve than run counter to the exigencies of dame fashion. I have just been looking at the Paris fashion journals, and nowhere do I find skirts so short as those worn in Hungary. It is simply a disgrace. Our women are degrading our nation and themselves by exposing their legs beyond the limit of decency."

Married Men in Germany Found to Live Longest

BERLIN.—(AP)—The German statistical bureau has uncovered scientific evidence that married men live longer than bachelors.

Facts based on a national investigation, however, failed to substantiate the popular notions of relationship between marriage and morality. Bachelors, widowers and divorced men took all the prizes for good conduct.

The differences in length of life were most marked for men between the ages of twenty and twenty-five when sixty per cent more unmarried than married men die. With advancing years the ratio tends to become even.

The chief reason given for the longevity of married men was their more ordered existence, regular meals and sleep.

Cricket Fighting Is Sport of Orientals

IN China a popular sport is cricket fighting. The belligerent insects need no urging when males of certain kinds are brought together. A champion fighting cricket is cared for as carefully as a race horse, and it is sold sometimes for as much as $50.

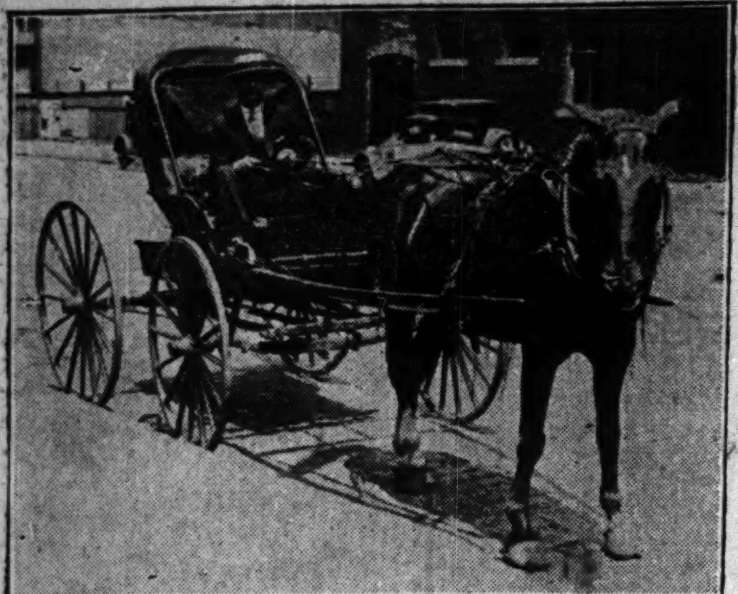
LIKES BUGGY RIDE BEST



MAYBE Joe Hinkey is old fashioned, but somehow, when his plumbing business calls him to various homes in the neighborhood, he prefers Bess and the buggy to the newer methods of transportation. The picture of Joe's equipage—of a sort that in its day would have aroused deep envy—was taken at 47th street and Ashland avenue. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

TIME TO TAKE A DRINK

THE old oaken bucket may have been romantic, but it has nothing on the little tin cup, according to W. C. Richter, who has come up for a bit of liquid refreshment on a hot afternoon. N. Margiotta, 220 Whiting street, a fellow telephone worker, is the Gunga Din of the episode. Richter's home is at 5501 North Mason avenue. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

THE OLD CLOTHES MAN

"THESE are going to be just the fit for somebody," soliloquizes Abraham Dvorkan, 1235 South Avers avenue, as he emerges into the street again with a castoff garment over his arm. Abraham was collecting in the vicinity of Monroe street and Central Park avenue when sighted by the photographer.

PREPARING FOR WINTER

THOUGH it's summer and vacation time, William Bevo, 328 South Spaulding avenue, is not unmindful of the fact that kindling wood will come in handy later on. This cart load was picked up where an old building was being torn down. William is going to build a house of his own which, in the fall, can be chopped up in sizes to fit the furnace. Girl Reporter Goes to Look for Politeness

And Finds It in a North Side Shop.

out. She came to help me with the door.

"Good-by," she said, with no hint of the exasperation that should have been hers by rights. "I'm sorry you couldn't find anything," she smiled at me again.

* *

The Cigaret Lady.

I wandered down to a combination candy and cigaret shop at 1709 Belmont. I asked the woman behind the counter for a fancy brand of cigarets.

"We don't carry them," she said, looking up at me disapprovingly from a letter she was writing.

I suggested a commoner brand and she gave them to me without a word, but careful to enclose them in a candy bag.

Then I decided to go in for furniture. Armed with a wedding ring and an engagement ring procured at a local 5 and 10, I entered a furniture store at 4822 North Lincoln avenue—a June bride just furnishing her three room apartment.

* *

Parlor, Bedroom and Bath.

"Do you want linen frieze or mohair for your living room suite?" questioned the clerk, "or would you prefer to look at tapestry needlepoint or velvet?"

I wasn't proud. I would and did look at any and all of them.

"Have you a price limit in mind?" he asked apathetically when I had finally found one that suited but was too expensive.

Naturally, I hadn't, but after quick calculation I decided.

"About $1,500."

He became a little more genial.

"You can do very nicely with that. Suppose we select the dining and bedroom sets first.

He calculated total prices for me, including all the extras I wanted thrown in, and we had enough left to buy lamps and rugs.

"Well," I said, "I'll bring my husband in to look them over some time. And he grunted. So I departed, seeking further fields to conquer me.

* *

High, Wide, and Handsome.

Down the street a ways, at 4740 Lincoln avenue, I passed another furniture store. I noticed a sign for high chairs and went in to see what polite luck I might have with them.

"Can I show you something, Miss?" the clerk asked as I entered.

"I'd like to look at high chairs," I said staunchly.

"Yes, madam: right this way, madam.

There wasn't much range of variety in high chairs, I soon discovered. You could have them painted or varnished, and that was about all.

He pointed out the special features.

"See, this strap will keep the baby from falling out."

"O, yes," I said, "but they seem awfully large."

He laughed.

"I guess you haven't bought many high chairs.

I admitted it, and he continued: "Well, I've sold a lot, but I haven't bought any myself. Marriage and kids is all right for them as likes it."

I was seeking a way out.

They didn't have any white ones, so I immediately set my heart on a white one. He tried long and vociferously to talk me out of it, but gave up after a while and let me go.

* *

Hot Weather Bargaining.

I stopped in a bakery at 4705 Lincoln avenue.

"I'd like some cream puffs," I said, cream puffs being one of my weaknesses.

"They won't keep in hot weather," the girl said, "so we don't make them. I can give you some filled with marshmallow."

I didn't care for marshmallow, and asked for cheese straws.

"No, we haven't any cheese straws, but," she added helpfully, "we have cheese cake on Saturdays."

"Well, how about 'Banbury tarts?"

"Banbury tarts," she said in amazement. "Now, what are they?"

I admitted I didn't quite know either, but they sounded as if they ought to be good. I finally went out with two blueberry muffins [for a nickel] under my arm and one pair of eyes staring incredulously after me.

* *

Searching for Stockings.

Up the street again, to a dry goods store at Lincoln and Lawrence, this time in search of silk stockings. The woman who waited on me was pleasant-eyed, and patient with my insistence on narrow heeled hose.

"No," she reiterated, "we haven't any like that, but we have pointed ones." And she showed me several varieties with double points and points on top of points.

"O, dear," she said, as there came a heavy clap of thunder. "I wish this rain would stop. My mother's in a cottage 'way out in the country and I help but worry about her."

I paused at a hair net counter, which she also served.

"Does anybody really wear these things any more?" I asked.

"For motoring," she informed me, "and in the evening, sometimes."

"I passed on out, weighing her politeness against the others.

* *

Sweet Sixteen?

The next stop was a dress shop at 4802 North Western avenue. There was a sale in progress, but the weather had kept every one except the politeness reporter away.

"I'll show you the bargains first," the attendant announced when I was safely inside. "What size do you wear?"

"Sixteen, usually," I declared.

"O," she said, "I think you take more than that," and I knew in my heart that she would have to give a tall exhibition of politeness to convince me she had earned the award.

But she was right about the size The sixteens were a pretty tight fit and I had to succumb to the larger sizes.

"I thought you were a litle plump." she insisted. She tried to convince me that a pink party dress trimmed in lace was just the thing for me. But it sagged on one shoulder and drooped at the back and I had struck her off my list anyway, so I refused it, and left.

* *

Wording a Wedding Card.

I went to a shop at 2253 Lawrence avenue that placarded "Wedding announcements." Hurriedly slipping off the wedding ring and leaving only the "diamond," I went in and asked to look at samples.

He was a huge man and he gathered himself into a chair in front of his sample folder, leaving me to drag one across the room or look over his shoulder.

"Well, now," he said, "there are really only three sizes," and he pointed them out to me—large, larger, and largest.

"Haven't you got any cute, tiny ones?" I mourned.

"Wait; we've just got in a new small one that goes into the envelope unfolded."

He showed it to me and I was properly entranced. The engraving, I was informed, could be variations of script, text, or a little used outline letter. The only samples he had of this were on black edged bereavement thank you's. So I didn't care for it.

"Now for the wording." He looked at me questioningly. "Your family going to announce it?"

"Why, I guess so," I faltered. "How else can you do it?"

My education was enhanced when he showed me a sample reading: "Miss Mary Blank and Mr. Johnny Jones announce their marriage to each other——"

But I decided to stick to the good old regulation form.

"Shall I make you a layout?" he urged.

"O, no," I breathed, "I'll have to discuss it with mother first," and I made a hasty exit.

* *

Back to the Start.

It was in search of entertainment for a sick friend that I approached the book counter in a department store at Lawrence and Winchester avenues.

"How about 'The Ten Commandment's?'" suggested the attendant. "That was an awful good movie. Or, here's a real exciting Harold Bell Wright."

While I was pondering over the merits of the two she lost interest in me and turned to more promising material, and I turned and went out.

Back to the hat shop, I decided. I'd give her another test and if she passed it the award was hers.

* *

The End of the Trail.

She recognized me as her torturer of earlier in the day, but the smile still persisted. It left in a moment of amazement when I handed her the card. And then was replaced by a reproachful glance—the first. I would kid her, would I?

I assured he it was real, on the square, and not a dream.

"But what have I done?" she exclaimed in wonderment. "I've read about it, of course, and envied the people who got it, but I never thought I would."

She was all blushes and confusion as in a rush she told me her name was Mrs. Coralie Williamson and she lived across the street, at 1644 Belmont avenue; that she had a little girl named Doris; that she and her husband both worked, and the money would come in mighty handy.

By the way, I did finally buy that beach hat.

TORTURED

Mrs. Coralie Williamson of 1644 Belmont avenue was pestered to the exhaustion point by a stranger in search of a hat, but she felt well repaid when this stranger informed her that the real quest was for a polite person, and that $50 was her reward.

English Rulers Attend Their First Cabaret

LONDON.—(AP)—King George and Queen Mary have gone to their first cabaret show.

The twinkling toes of the cabaret girls amid bright shifting lights have hitherto been to the reigning couple of England only so much "newspaper talk."

They saw it all with their own eyes when they attended Lord Lonsdale's golden wedding celebration. The "world's greatest sportsman" had the honor not only of providing the king and queen's first cabaret, but also of being host to the first golden wedding ever attended by the reigning sovereigns.

WORN OUT.

Costliest Car to Have Body Made of Gold

British Lord's Auto Will Be Worth $200,000.

LORD ROTHERMERE, British publisher, may soon be the proud possessor of the world's most expensive automobile. It will have a chassis of solid silver and a body of hammered gold. On its glittering radiator the car will bear in gold the motto, "Veritas Vincit"—Truth triumphs. This creation, fit to quicken the pulse of the most blasé automobile thief, will cost $200,000.

Franz Bert, automobile manufacturer, has asked the Hungarian government to approve the gift, which is to express gratitude for Lord Rothermere's aid in restoring to Hungary certain bordering territories. If constructed, it will be the most costly gas buggy on record.

Even the automobiles of fabulously rich oriental potentates, most lavish of the world's spendthrifts, cannot compare with this one. For in their choice of cars Asiatic princes are surprisingly practical. Most of them are content with American limousines, redecorated with magnificent tapestries and ornaments.

One with Ivory Handles.

The Maharajah of Patiala owned a sport touring car worth $30,000. It was built for big game hunting, enameled all over in a camouflage design, and bristling with guns like a battleship. The car's interior was decorated in mahogany, with pure white ivory handles on all the controls. Yet it was intended for use rather than for display.

Most motorists, however, are probably more interested in finding the cheapest practicable automobile rather than the most expensive. Such a one is the Passion 8, a collegiate flivver bought for $12 in 1915 by a Columbia university student and still going strong after about 75,000 miles. Many of its parts were picked up from wrecked cars and dump heaps, and it is tastefully decorated with red paint and wise-cracks. Its owner boasts of a speed of seventy miles an hour and forty-two miles to a gallon of gas. "The Passion 8 is mechanically perfect," he says, "but it looks like hell."

First Car Still Exists.

Ever since the invention of the "horseless carriage" nearly forty years ago, inventors have been constantly improving on the original device. There have been steam cars, electric cars, motors using wood, sawdust, charcoal, or alcohol for fuel. But of the 30,000,000 automobiles now in the world practically all are built along the general lines first laid down by Elwood Haynes in 1893.

The first—the very first—self-propelling road vehicle is still in existence at Oyster Bay, N. Y. It is the "Fiery Demon," built by one Richard Dudgeon in 1855. The strange contraption, which looks like a cross between a locomotive and a hay wagon, was propelled by a steam engine, using coal as fuel. It could develop a speed of seventy miles an hour, but no one could make it hold the road by steering. When starting a lengthy run, a horse and wagon had to be sent ahead with a supply of coal. But in its construction were incorporated the first rotary pipe boiler and "sovereign" hub.

The gasoline automobile was first patented by Elwood Haynes, and his model is now in the Smithsonian institution. But the honor is also claimed for Charles H. Black, an Indianapolis blacksmith, who perfected a gasoline runabout in 1891. He asked for a patent on his engine, so the story goes, just two weeks after the German inventor of the gasoline motor had filed his application. Although he was offered protection for his differential gear and floating rear axle, now used on all cars, Black was disgusted and declined. The rusty wreck of his automobile is still in existence.

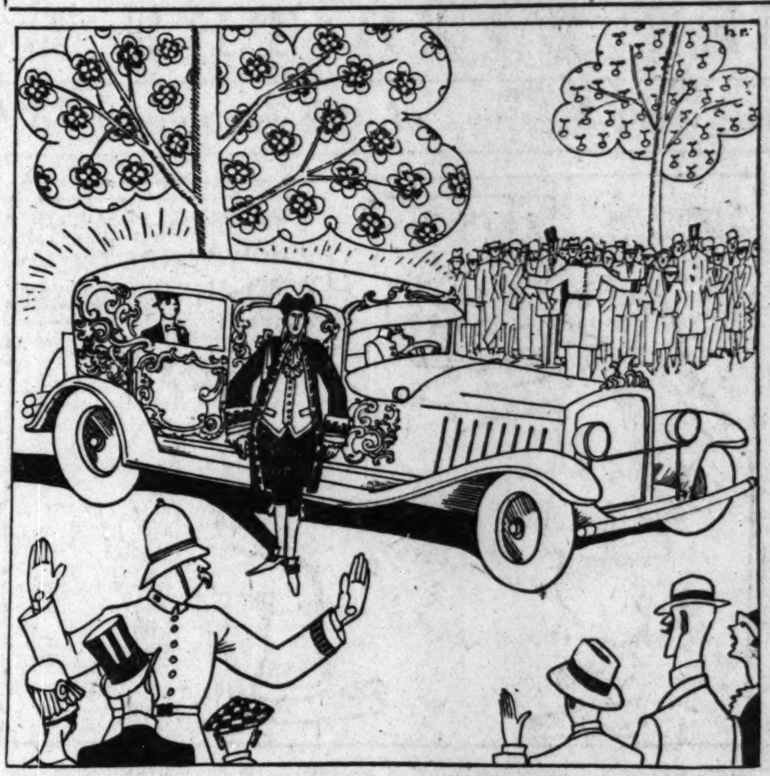
Faster Than Airplanes.

Speed has been developed in the racing car to such a degree that it is faster than most airplanes. The fastest automobile in the world at the moment—when records are being shattered every month—is the thirty-six cylinder Triplex of Ray Keech, who at Daytona Beach drove it two miles at an average speed of 207.6 miles per hour.

Airplane motors are used on all modern racers, and some designs have aerial propellers. But the greatest speed has been developed by the usual form of wheel drive. One inventor recently evolved a sort of "hybrid" racer, adapting the body of an airplane to a ground-propelled vehicle. It had a powerful motor in front driving the two forward wheels, but the body tapered away in back to a vertical rudder and two horizontal surfaces like the elevators of a flying machine.

At rest the car stood on its two front wheels, with the tail supported on one small rear wheel. As soon as the machine gathered speed the air pressure on the elevators lifted the tail into the air. Only the two front wheels touched ground at high speed, the rest of the weight being borne by air pressure on the tail. The contraption was steered by both the wheels and the air rudder. Phenomenal speed was predicted for the car, but it never was put to a public test.

AUTO THIEF'S DREAM



Suppose you had to park a car that had a chassis of solid silver and a body of hammered gold? This is the problem that faces Lord Rothermere.

Wane of Bobbed Hair Welcomed by Net Makers

SHANGHAI.—(AP)—The Chinese hair net industry, that accurate barometer of the bobbed hair situation throughout the world, is once more moving toward prosperity.

Hair net magnates throughout central and eastern China are breathing easier and saying that the worst is over. Their export figures show a steady increase in shipments to all western countries. These figures, they say, never lie. The fad among women of cutting their hair short, which spread starvation and bankruptcy in parts of China, they say is definitely on the wane.

New York is the largest buyer of hair nets in the world and orders are increasing. Shantung province is the center of the Chinese industry. It has remained a home trade, controlled by women and girls who weave the nets and send them to central depots for inspection at shipment.

Londoner Has Will Tattooed on Back

LONDON.—(AP)—A 200 word will bequeathing large sums of money to several people has been tattooed on the back of a man who walked into a tattooing establishment in Waterloo road.

He had the will written out on a piece of paper, and asked that it should be transferred to his back. He sat for five hours while the work was being done, and the will was duly witnessed.

Plan Records of AdPrograms for Small Stations

250 Might Broadcast Same Stuff at Same Time.

Washington, D. C., July 28.—Despite the fact that the idea apparently has not made much of a hit with the federal radio commission, great possibilities are held out by the sponsors of electric reproduction for typing together without wires the hundreds of smaller broadcasters into vast chains.

Electric reproduction, it may be explained, is broadcasting phonograph records without the aid of a microphone, but direct to the transmitter by means of an electric needle device.

The newest chain scheme seems to be to make a record of an advertiser's hour, send this record to a hundred or more smaller stations, and have it electrically reproduced and broadcast all over the United States at the same hour.

Judge Robinson Fooled.

Already Judge Ira E. Robinson, chairman of the radio commission, has come out openly as being against the broadcasting of phonograph records, and several other commissioners have privately expressed themselves adversely. So nearly do these electrically reproduced phonograph records sound like the real thing, however, that Judge Robinson himself admitted he had been fooled by them.

This has resulted in a stricter enforcement of the regulation that all phonograph records broadcast must be so announced.

The process of electrical reproduction was brought directly to the attention of the commission by Clinton R. White of Chicago, president of the Independent Broadcasters association, when he appeared in Washington in defense of his station, WCRW, which has been ordered to show cause why it should not be silenced on Aug. 1, together with 164 others.

Broadcast Many Records.

Mr. White testified that he was one of the first broadcasters to use records for air dissemination, and that at first the radio audience did not respond. However, since that time listeners have come to consider the electrical reproduction a very high grade of entertainment, according to Mr. White.

"Is it your opinion that electrical reproduction is a very important contribution to broadcasting," asked Louis G. Caldwell, chief counsel for the commission.

"Absolutely," replied Mr. White. "Station WENR, Chicago, is using electrical reproduction for two solid hours each morning, and other stations all over the country are turning to it."

Mr. White declared that he used these records in connection with direct advertising and that they are announced as being phonograph records in accordance with the commission's ruling.

Plan Huge Advertising Chains.

Mr. White also explained to the commission a plan whereby an advertiser who desired coverage in several cities of the country could have records made and distributed to broadcasters in these cities, and arrange to have them played for transmission to the radio audience at a certain hour on a certain evening. This would constitute a sort of chain, but would be used by only one station in one community, leaving the listener's dial free. These advertising records could be distributed to 100 or more stations electrically equipped to reproduce them throughout the country.

What the Chicago broadcaster said was the first public intimation that with the aid of electrical reproduction and phonograph records there might be competition offered by smaller stations to the present chains composed of larger stations in the selling of advertising time.

"It is really the first time any one has thought out a way to make smaller stations pay," an independent broadcaster remarked. "Why should not an advertising hour be heard on 250 stations instead of 50 stations?"

Open Air Concerts by Loud Speaker Moscow Feature

MOSCOW, July 28.—U. P.]—Open-air radio concerts at all hours of the day and late into the night are a characteristic feature of life in the capital during the spring and summer months.

Powerful loud speakers are installed at a dozen or so of the principal squares of Moscow and broadcast a continuous stream of speeches, music, and even vaudeville sketches. The loud speakers are usually perched high on a telegraph pole or a roof, so that the voices seem to issue from the clouds.

The sudden eruption of a booming tenor or piercing contralto as one walks unsuspectedly along the streets must be responsible for cases of severe shock among Mucovites, and especially among visitors unaccustomed to this form of public entertaining. When the weather is good—apparently a rare occasion in Moscow—little knots of people are gathered around these loud speakers.

Recently voices familiar to music-loving America filled the air in Moscow through these outdoors radio concerts. Titti Ruffo, Galli-Curci, Enrico Caruso, Tito Schipa and Sergei Radomsky entertained enthusiastic groups of radio fans on the streets of Moscow.

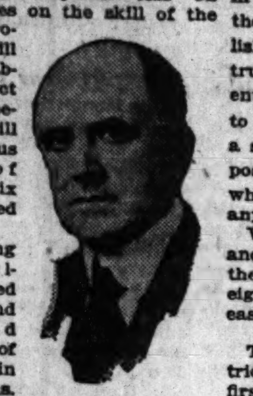
They were broadcast from American phonograph records, loaned to the soviet authorities for the occasion by Radomsky, who is now in Moscow, preparatory to a concert tour in the Caucasus.

Tommy's Soiree on Air Again Wednesday

Wednesday evening at 7:15 brings another artistic production of "Tommy's Soiree." This week's program will be more modern that previous ones, though in no way will it lack in variety. German, Spanish, English and American trends in the modern musical movement differ so radically that a sample of these and more will furnish an interesting three quarters of an hour of entertainment.

Lessons in Auction Bridge

BY R. M. ROGERS.
ARTICLE XIX.



R. M. ROGERS.

Winning bridge depends less on luck than it does on the skill of the player. About two-thirds of the skill required is attributable to correct bidding and one-third of the skill to advantageous manipulation of the twenty-six cards controlled by the player.

Skill in bidding requires knowledge of accepted principles and conventions and the meaning of the terms used in different positions. These can all be learned from written instruction.

Skill in play requires what can also be learned from written instructions and applied to actual experience in play, and the effect would be materially quickened by comments if obtainable of an expert player or expert play instructor.

There are many expert players, but few of them are instructors, and few instructors are like one I have seen play in one of the clubs, and who, as I happen to know, has lost but eight times in fifty sittings of play. There must be something besides luck in his success at the game.

Instruction on playing must explain and illustrate the features of bringing in long suits, or cross ruffing, placing the lead, when and when not to establish the long suit before exhausting trumps; how to establish cards of reentry in the hand holding a long suit to be brought in, etc. By bringing in a suit is meant making all the tricks possible in it, and it is established when no one but the holder can take any more tricks in that suit.

We give below a deal where north and south play a no-trump, at which the novice would take six, or seven, or eight tricks, while a skillful player will easily make ten tricks.

The difference in the number of tricks made would lie in two plays, first, waiting till the third round to win the first heart trick by south, at which time east will no longer have any hearts to lead to his partner. The second feature is for south to let east win the first spade trick, and when south gets in on anything that east may lead, his play of his second and last spade will be overtaken by the king in dummy, followed by the ace, and the suit is established and all the rest of the spades in dummy's hand will be good, as no one can follow suit.

If dummy was to take the first round in spades with the king and return the ace, the queen would still be out in the hand of west and north, the dummy, has no trick taker in any other suit so that he can get to make the rest of the spades.

THE HANDS.

North:
Spades—A, K, 8, 6, 5, 2
Hearts—7, 6
Diamonds—8, 6, 2
Clubs—9, 4

West:
Spades—Q, 4, 3
Hearts—K, Q, J, 10, 5
Diamonds — 9, 7, 5
Clubs—K, 8

East:
Spades—J, 10
Hearts—9, 4, 2
Diamonds — J, 4, 3
Clubs—Q, 6, 5, 3, 2

South:
Spades—9, 7
Hearts—A, 8, 3
Diamonds—A, K, Q, 10
Clubs—A, J, 10, 7

THE BIDDING.

S.	W.	N.	E.
1 No Trump	2 Hearts	2 Spades	Pass
2 No Trump	Pass	Pass	Pass

N. and S. take 1 Heart trick, 3 Diamonds, 5 Spades, 1 Club. Total, 10 tricks, making a game and rubber.

We will admit that in the bidding north would undoubtedly bid three spades but just as certainly South would bid three no trumps.

The difference in the score is considerable and may be tremendous because if it is the rubber game and north and south fail to take nine tricks another deal must be played and if east and west win it they will secure the bonus of 250 points, which north and south might have obtained by properly playing the previous hand, which of itself makes a difference of 500 points.

Questions and comments will be given cheerful attention, and unique hands analyzed for our readers, if stamped envelope is enclosed for a reply. Address Bridge Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN A. RYAN.

WITH the talking moving pictures taking the film world by storm, we are moved to wonder if the ladies of the celluloid will be as unpopular when their voices are recorded in dialogue and in song, as are the ladies of the radio. The process of picking up the voice is the same in the talking pictures as in the radio. Regular radio microphones are used. And, by and large, women's voices do not register pleasantly on the radio; so why should they be any better in the audible films?

Gloria Swanson, Mary Pickford and others are holding up their newest productions, undecided as to whether the insertion of vocal effects would enhance their films or ruin the valuable reputations they have built up pictorially.

It is a nice treat to hear Dolores Del Rio sing "Ramona" and elocute a bit in broken English, with a pronounced Spanish-Mexican accent, as she did once on a radio chain program; but we fear that her speaking throughout a moving picture would be unintelligible and unhappy.

We find the ladies participating less and less in radio programs. Sopranos who have ever been unpopular, are fewer. Two, for whom we must make an exception, because they are a delight every time we hear them, are Belle Forbes Cutter and Virginia Rae, the latter of the chain programs. Ladies in the radio playlets are fewer; we have heard many dialogue sketches on chain programs lately, but they were without benefit of femininity.

So we believe the going will not be easy, when the movie gals commence to act into the movie microphones.

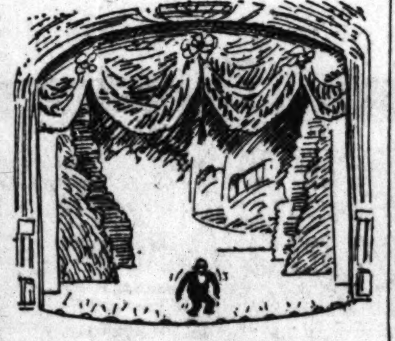
SUBTITLES, too, we understand, are going to be made vocal in the talking fims. That's a new job for us radio announcers, "Came the dawn, and two hearts entwined. This is Paul Schlitz announcing."

ONE OF the irritating habits of the men who write the announcements for the men who announce the chain advertising programs is the use of eastern time in their requests to "listen in again for this program at such-and-such an hour next Monday." The announcer of the Gypsies program, for instance, asks us to be with them again on the following Monday evening, "at 8:30," omitting even the specifications of eastern daylight saving time. Probably he reasons that by enumerating "Eastern time," "Central time," "Rocky Mountain time," and "Pacific Coast time" he would annoy some listeners—but not so much, we think, as he does by the ostensible disdain for the auditors who get the program from stations west of Detroit.

TODAY we make our first public appearance in this city, when we open a week's engagement at the Riviera theater. Heaven give us strength!

We learned a little while ago, upon the vaudeville stage in Madison and Rockford, that years of talking to an invisible audience makes one a bit self-conscious when addressing a real audience. We appreciated, when facing the footlights, the nervousness of footlight actors when they face the microphone.

What does an announcer do on the stage, you ask? Well, many of the radio people have been performing in the theaters for a long while. Ford and Glenn spend about half their time filling theatrical engagements about the country; Graham McNamee ducks away from the studio every once in a while to sing some songs and recite a few anecdotes for a week in a vaudeville theater; Al Carney, Pat Barnes, Art Linick, Uncle Bob and others are found on their nights off in nearby towns, yodeling and monologuing. In our case, we exhibit our own movie, "My Radio Scrap Book," showing our most important broadcasts and our manner of doing them—the Scopes Evolution Trial, the Red Grange games, the world series, the Indianapolis auto races and the Punch and Judy show. We chatter through the reeling of the movie, then a little talk, and finally a fast vocal reproduction of the Kentucky Derby.



Serial stories are very popular on the radio. Of course, folks will always listen to a story, but it was problematical at first whether a story read day by day over the air would attract a sustained interest. We have found that a novel which is read, a chapter a day, has a large audience, who write and phone in consternation when some other feature crowds out or postpones an episode.

Trombone Expert to Conduct Family Party Program

Arthur Pryor, world famous trombone soloist and leader of one of the oldest and most popular bands in America, will conduct the family party program over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, tomorrow night with his celebrated company of brass, reed and string musicians, assisted by Olive Kline, soprano.

The program will run a full hour instead of a half hour and will be the second presentation of Arthur Pryor's band as a radio entertainment feature, its first radio concert having been given a year ago.

Although he has made an outstanding success as a band leader in recent years, the secret of Arthur Pryor's hold on American popular fancy dates back to his career as a trombone soloist. He could do things with a trombone never done before or since. Experienced players of the instrument used to think he had secret attachments which explained his trills, runs and tones. In Berlin a group of musicians called on him and insisted on inspecting his trombone, so certain were they that it was different from others.

W-G-N to Start New Feature on Famous People Thursday

A new feature makes its appearance on W-G-N's program this week. It is the beginning of a series of "Intimate Conversations of Famous Men." Next Tuesday evening at 7:15 o'clock, John Griggs, the author of these authentic glimpses into the lives of the historic characters, will impersonate Edgar Allen Poe, the renowned critic and imaginative writer of half a century ago.

Each week a new personage will be made to live again in the studio of W-G-N, dramatic scenes in the lives of these men and women who have made history in art, letters and music, being broadcast. Richard Wagner, Walt Whitman, and Abraham Lincoln are among those to be portrayed. Each story or incident presented is investigated as to its authenticity, and though a few liberties may be taken, the bulk of the stories may be relied upon as sound history.

Hoover's Speech of Acceptance on Huge Chain

Will Talk at Hour Whole Nation Can Listen.

One of the first moves on the part of the Republican national committee has been to form a radio bureau. O. P. Gascoigne, formerly manager of station WCAP which was later sold to station WRC in Washington, is at the head of the bureau. Mr. Gascoigne will supervise all details of broadcasting during the campaign.

Just as the Democrats staged their keynote speaker Claude G. Bowers for a night session to catch listeners at home so has the notification speech of Secretary Hoover, on Saturday, Aug. 11, from Leland Stanford university at Palo Alto, Cal., been timed so that the great middle western and eastern radio audiences may tune in on it during the evening hours.

Will Speak at Odd Hour.

To do this, however, and because of the difference in time between the Pacific and Atlantic coasts Mr. Hoover will have to begin his speech at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. At first glance this seems to be an odd hour to make a campaign speech but inasmuch as this is on Saturday afternoon daytime toilers in San Francisco and vicinity will be free to attend.

More important than that 5 o'clock Pacific time is 6 o'clock mountain time, 7 o'clock central standard and 8 o'clock in the evening central daylight time as prevails in Chicago and other cities. It will also be 8 p. m. eastern standard time in Washington and 9 o'clock eastern daylight time in New York and Boston.

Why Saturday Night Was Picked.

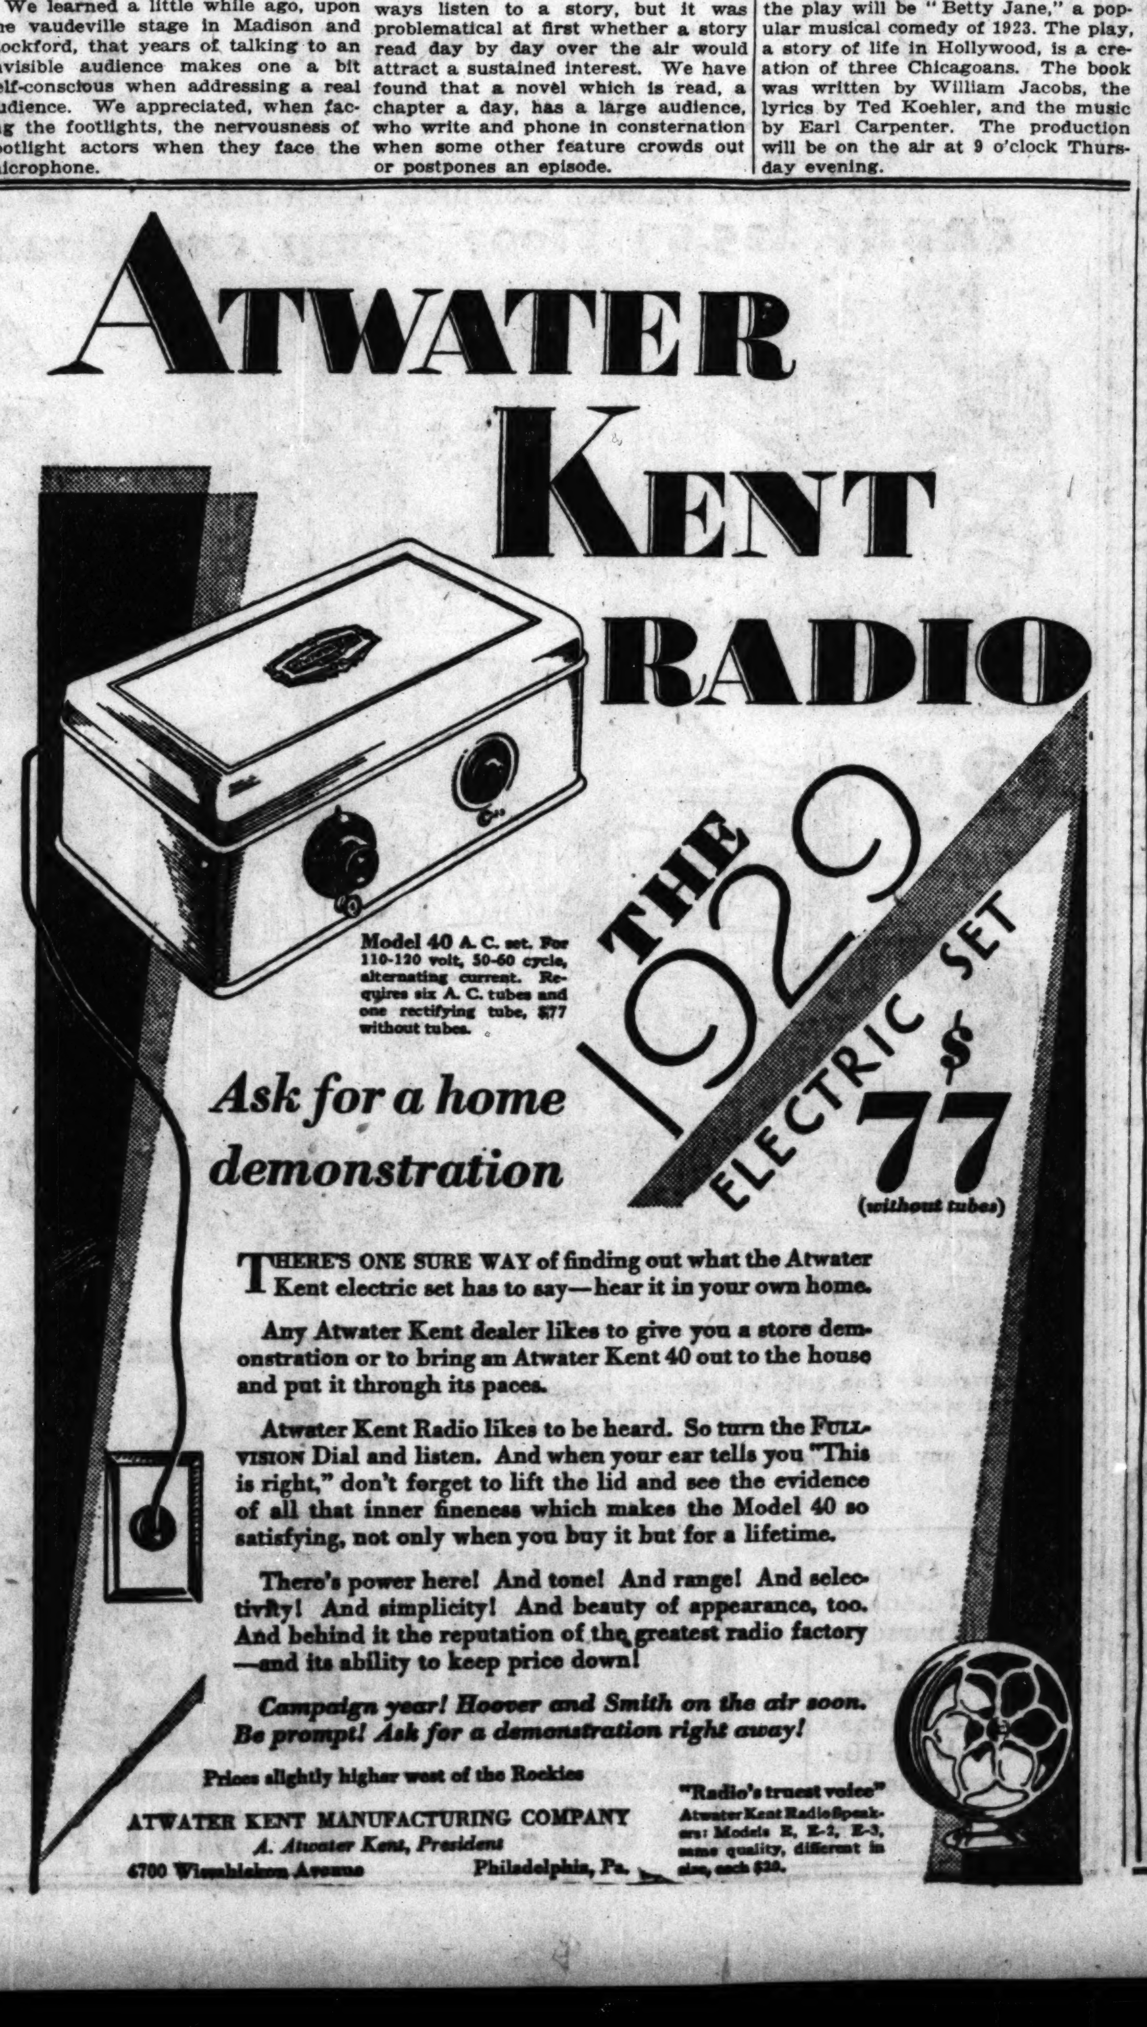
Thus the middle western and eastern territory where Mr. Hoover's managers' figure he will have the hardest fight will be covered better from a radio standpoint than the far west which he is almost certain to carry anyway.

More radio canniness is shown in setting the speech on Saturday night inasmuch as there are fewer advertising hours, less contracted time on the air, that evening than any other in the week. Inasmuch as the advertisers pay for the broadcasting of their hours they must be consulted with regard to giving them up.

However, since there are comparatively few of them on that night considerably less shifting will be required to give Mr. Hoover the right of way from coast to coast and border to border thus insuring him an enormous hookup.

Betty Jane, Musical Comedy of 1923, on W-G-N Next Thursday

W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, announces another of its musical comedy revivals which are directed by Harry W. Spingold. This week, instead of going back twenty years for a production, the play will be "Betty Jane," a popular musical comedy of 1923. The play, a story of life in Hollywood, is a creation of three Chicagoans. The book was written by William Jacobs, the lyrics by Ted Koehler, and the music by Earl Carpenter. The production will be on the air at 9 o'clock Thursday evening.



Model 40 A. C. set. For 110-120 volt, 50-60 cycle, alternating current. Requires six A. C. tubes and one rectifying tube, $77 without tubes.

Ask for a home demonstration

THERE'S ONE SURE WAY of finding out what the Atwater Kent electric set has to say—hear it in your own home.

Any Atwater Kent dealer likes to give you a store demonstration or to bring an Atwater Kent 40 out to the house and put it through its paces.

Atwater Kent Radio likes to be heard. So turn the FULL-VISION Dial and listen. And when your ear tells you "This is right," don't forget to lift the lid and see the evidence of all that inner fineness which makes the Model 40 so satisfying, not only when you buy it but for a lifetime.

There's power here! And tone! And range! And selectivity! And simplicity! And beauty of appearance, too. And behind it the reputation of the greatest radio factory —and its ability to keep price down!

Campaign year! Hoover and Smith on the air soon. Be prompt! Ask for a demonstration right away!

(416.4 Meters—720 Kilocycles)

SUNDAY, JULY 29

Jackie Coogan

Jackie Coogan

They're going to have company, Cuckoo and Jumbo and Duck-Lucky and Rosie, the Little Wabbly Calf. The animals are spending all day today getting ready for a visit from Jackie Coogan at their Punch and Judy Show. Puff is washing her face and Pal is keeping out of the stickers. Listen in for Jackie (you know, the little boy in the movies who will appear in person at the Chicago theater starting tomorrow) from W-G-N at 6:20 this evening.

The SOX and the SENATORS . . . .

THE microphone is at the south side park today ready to pick up the hub-bub of the battle between the Chicago White Sox and the Washington Senators. The afternoon's sport feature starts on W-G-N at 2:55 o'clock. Have the dials polished and tune in!

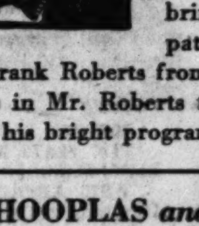
The A. K. Concert

tonight has as its guests the Sittig Trio, that well known group of string artists, playing such tunes as "Song to the Evening Star" and "Bolero." The Trio consists of Fredrick Sittig, pianist, Margaret Sittig, 'cellist, and Edgar Sittig, violinist. You may hear them from W-G-N at 8:15.

"Fess Williams E'spo'tulatin'"

THEY'RE still at it, this hot colored band under the personal direction of Fess Williams with the rest of his jazzy crew. They're still at their business of creating the most rhythmic and most typically colored program on the air. This show comes hot on hot wires directly from the Regal Theater where Harry Gourfain herds the notes into the microphone at 11 o'clock this evening.

Frank Roberts, Tenor . . . . .



THERE has been much favorable comment regarding the voice of this young tenor, and well deserved comment it is. 10:15 brings to you a live patter of song sung by Frank Roberts from station W-G-N. Tune in Mr. Roberts this evening and hear his bright program.

HOOPLAS and HISSES

HUMPH!

W-G-N:
Why don't you take down the towers when Quin Ryan is at the mike? You don't need them.—Carl Pierce, Morris, Ill.

THANK YOU, PAUL.

Dear W-G-N:
Just a slight appreciation for your wonderful programs. When we want to be sure of high class entertainment we invariably look to your station.—Paul V. Zinns, Milwaukee, Wis.

Henry Dixon's Hawaiians

THE strains of Waikiki will be strummed snappily today at 1 o'clock sharp marking the opening of the half hour of Hawaiian music presented every Sunday afternoon from W-G-N by Henry Dixon's Trio. They're contented lads, these Hawaiians, and happy. They sit dreamily in W-G-N's studio, just as though they were sitting under a spreading palm tree on their native beach tuning their guitars and ukulele to their keen ears. They play vivid music, popular, classical, marches and, best of all, characteristic music of their native islands. Just in time for Sunday dinner.

100! 100! 100!

Set your dials to W-G-N tonight and leave them there each night until the number of hours you have listened equals 100. Then send in your name for the official membership certificate. Today's additions to the roster are:

424. O. Jim Read, Elkhart, Ind.
425. Bernard Brozowski Jr., Wauconda, Ill.
426. Marion Guthmann, Chicago, Ill.

Dr. and Mrs. J. G. McNeil of 12204 Stewart avenue are gadding about by airplane on their vacation. They hopped from here to Cheyenne, Wyo., for a visit with Mrs. McNeil's sister. "And how's business?" we politely interrogated, as is our wont, Miss Carey Hoey, the indispensable real estate lady of Wilmette.

"Just fine," she chirruped. "I put a three line ad in the Sunday Trib for a piece of vacant and my phone's been ringing all morning. I guess I have fifty prospects. If there's business the Trib gets it." Advt.

As was to have been expected, the annual picnic of the West Englewood Old Settlers' association was a success. Among the prize winners were Mr. and Mrs. William Weibel, 6512 Whipple street, oldest married couple; William Groener, 6318 Artesian avenue, horseshoe pitching; Edward W. Chopp, 7010 Oakley avenue, second place in the shotput.

A slightly used calaboose can be had on reasonable terms by applying to William Laatz, village president pro tem. of Spring Forest, over in southwestern Cook. It has been unoccupied for some time, except as a chicken roost, due to peaceable conditions generally, and a new two passenger gaol specifically. The latter, however, has never yet been filled to capacity, let alone overflowing. To the right kind of buyer, the village president will also throw in an old fire station.

Mr. and Mrs. Siegfried Hirsch of 7301 Constance celebrated their silver wedding anniversary and I. G. Herzka, the toastmaster, commemorated it in poetry. We shall quote a few stanzas:

I hear the chime of silver bells,
So sweetly, sweetly ringing;
Of happy years their music tells,
Of gladness they are singing.
They ring of that day long ago
When 'neath love's banners spreading,
Two lovers stood with hearts aglow—
'Twas Sig and Alma's wedding.

And in this circle here today
Are many friends and neighbors,
Who've journeyed with them on the way
In pleasures and in labors.
There's Tessie and her Hugo dear,
And Bella and her Mose;
Selma, Bertha, Sig are here,
All in their Sunday clothes.

Bertha and Hugo, Anna, Nate,
And Blanche and Albert, too;
With Fanny and her toothpick, Art,
To swell the happy crew.
There's I. G. with his Irish Rose,
Who won't let him get chilly;
Our honorary Mamie and Dan,
And Rose and Banana Willie.

It seems needless to say a good time was had by all, and ye ed wishes he had space to print the rest of the verses.

William R. Wilson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Wilson of 6827 Hobart avenue, is entering the United States Naval academy as a commissioned officer without the aid of any political influence or pull. He won his appointment solely upon his merits in a competitive examination. He is a graduate of the Carl Schurz high school. He served with the Norwood Boy Scout Troop No. 899, retiring as an eagle scout. William is one of those reasons why we're proud to be Chicagoans.

John Matthews of River Forest has realized his lifelong ambition. He is chief of that suburb's fire department. Born near Palos, Ill., in 1872, Mr. Matthews started going to fires as a boy. He never missed one. When he moved to Oak Park 35 years ago he promptly joined the volunteer bucket brigade and further enlarged his experience. In between fires he served customers at Whittlesey's grocery store, Lake and Marion streets. He used his delivery wagon team to haul the apparatus. Later he moved to River Forest and opened a grocery store of his own. His reputation had preceded him. He was importuned to join the department. The first time the alarm sounded he did. Since then he has made every fire. His yeoman service was rewarded when the chieftainship of the River Forest departmen became vacant and the village father said, "John, you're it."

About writing: Mrs. Maurice B. Rothrock of 6646 Woodlawn avenue, who manages to do her own housework and compose worthwhile poetry, says one never "sits down" to write. Writing, or creation, is an endless process. "You write as you wash or dry the dishes, or cook the evening meal, or, perhaps, as you make your way through the hurly burly of the loop or saunter through the cool sanctuary of a country lane." Mrs. Rothrock has just had published a book of verse, "Autumn Garlands," dedicated to her 83 year old mother.

Our industrious fellow townsman, Henry Rhode, steward of the Furniture Mart club, merits a word of commendation, if not two or three. He feeds from 5,000 to 6,500 every noon hour during the annual show. He bosses and keeps the peace and his temper in a family comprising fourteen cooks, five butchers, twelve dishwashers, ten pantry girls, five vegetable girls, 100 waiters, and forty bus boys. And when not so occupied he is treasurer of the village of Lake Forest. Henry, we salute you.

London Debates Health of Its Flower Sellers

LONDON.—(AP)—The welfare of Piccadilly's flower girls, most of them past fifty, has become the subject of much controversy in the London county council.

Heretofore they have conducted their colorful business exposed to the buffeting of wind and weather and the council has now submitted to the proper municipal authorities a plan for building flower kiosks.

Popular opinion is divided. If the kiosks are erected, say the die-hards, who deplore any effort to change old London, the picturesqueness of these buxom, red cheeked "girls" will be lost. The streets will no longer flaunt gorgeous splashes of color as an antidote to fog and gloom.

One of the girls, now in her seventy-first year, points out that she has no need for shelter, never having been ill in her life.

Rare Old Coin.

While I was working as a cashier in a small town moving picture house a farmer questioningly offered me an old 50 cent piece in return for a ticket to the show. I accepted it and later examined it, finding the date upon it read 1775.

Changing it for one of my own 50 cent pieces, I took it to a city numismatist, where I received $50. H. B.

More Than She Expected.

About fifteen years ago I bought at an auction sale a brass bed, mattress and springs for ten dollars. After using it all these years I decided to get rid of the bed for a single one, so called in a second hand dealer. He looked it over carefully, then looked at me, and I thought he would offer me about a dollar.

When he said, "Now, lady, don't faint, for I cannot possibly give you more than $10," well, I did nearly faint, for I never expected so much.

Making a Large Profit.

While rummaging through the attic of a friend's home, she pointed out an old center table which she thought was so ridiculously old fashioned, she would consign it to the furnace. As it was just what I had been searching the antique shops for, I greatly admired it and she, thinking I was not sincere, in joking way said it was mine for a dollar.

I surprised her by quickly completing the deal. When I took it to a firm to have it refinished, they told me it was a rare antique and offered me $75 for it.

I call the purchase of this table a real bargain, as the profit paid for my summer vacation. J. C. R.

It Pays to Know.

One summer evening while walking we came upon a window with a card reading, "Selling Out." The window was filled with Parisian jewelry, objets d'art, and a framed Simon colored etching, priced $20. It was one of Simon's snow scenes, which I happened to know had advanced in price to $50.

I purchased several pieces of jewelry at attractive prices, that I kept, and was careful also to purchase the Simon etching. This I sold in a few days at $50.

Is there an easier or a more pleasant way of finding a bargain, and, incidentally, picking up $30?

Girl Reporter Sallies Forth in Pursuit of Politeness

London's Queen of Night Clubs, Jailed, Retires

One of Titled Sons-in-Law to Sell Gay Resorts.

BEHIND the bars for a second time because of her night club operations, Mrs. Kate Meyrick, "queen of clubs," has finally surrendered after a long struggle with London's police. She announced at her trial in Bow street police court that she is through with night club life, and her understudies, one of them an earl, are preparing to get rid of her clubs.

Judging from the reaction of the fashionably dressed audience that heard the sentence passed, her retirement is a catastrophe to social London.

The police call Mrs. Meyrick the worst breaker of license laws in the metropolis, but her friends declare her to be the most remarkable woman in London. Certainly she has made her gay resorts necessary to fashionable London, counting among her friends and patrons peers, generals, and men in the public eye. Despite her dubious profession, she succeeded in marrying off her daughters into two of the oldest families in Britain.

Two years ago Dorothy ["Dolly"], the elder daughter, was married to Baron de Clifford and more recently the younger, May, married the Earl of Kinnoull. In both cases prison sentences for Mrs. Meyrick followed the weddings, but the Earl of Kinnoull became her right hand man in directing the night clubs.

"Mother" Meyrick is an astonishing and contradictory character. Described as a sentimental, motherly sort of person, she was long the most notorious, picturesque, and beloved figure in London's hectic night life. Although a model parent, she defied the law and operated certain resorts appealing to the lowest sort of patrons. Yet some of her clubs were the most fashionable in London. And her daughters, carefully shielded from their mother's notoriety during their school days, made their debuts from behind the footlights of a night club.

Left Without Support.

Before the war Mrs. Meyrick was the wife of Dr. Ferdinand Meyrick, a Dublin physician and psychoanalyst. He had a pet idea of a sanitarium for neurotics, an idea now proved practical but then derided. He sacrificed everything to keep up his hospital, and for twenty years the family struggled along on a small income. Then about the time war broke out husband and wife parted.

Mrs. Meyrick had been satisfied with the usual middle class existence, but after the separation she and her children were left practically without means of support. An advertisement concerning a cabaret for rent cheap caught her eye and she determined to have a fling at the night club business. But she retained the ambition properly to educate her children and to marry her two daughters well.

Perhaps she foresaw the future profit to be made from the restaurants which the war was making so popular. The nervous hysteria of the conflict had struck London. Dancing

Jacob M. De Winner, the barber, has closed his shop at 508 West 63d street for to take in the sights at Yellowstone park and replenish his stock of conversational tidbits. Jake hadn't had a vacation in twenty-two years and it was sadly depleted. In fact, it had narrowed down to the weather and the Cubs' chances in the pennant race. Jake figures now he will have it all over his competitors.

"What streets," queried Patrick J. Donovan, acting superintendent of same, "are worst in Marquette, Gage park and adjoining areas?"

"All of them," he was told.

Sundry motor vehicles of our citizenry have burgeoned with a new device, pendant from the license plate and reading in bold capital letters, to-wit: "Al Smith." Curious as to what manner of motorists such might be, your correspondent copied a couple of license numbers at random and identified the owners as, to wit or two-wet: Michael J. Sullivan, 882 Pine street, Winnetka, and John J. Corcoran, 5729 Kenmore avenue, Chicago.

LLOYD MAXWELL.

THE "I Knew Him When" club presents Lloyd demonstrating flaming youth in the days of '93, or the world's fair. The modish derby, we regret to say, was black, not brown. The concealed weapon at the other end of the anchor chain, dangling carelessly from Lloyd's sack coat, was a timepiece about the size of a pineapple, but not quite so loud. Lloyd has since gone in for knickers and golf when he isn't grand marshaling for the Elks. One of our prominent advertising men—president and general manager of Williams and Cunnyngham.

Do You Know These People in Literature?

Questions About Famous Fiction Folk.

Here are a number of hints as to the identity of sundry characters of more than passing fame. Some of these were created by Homer, Sheridan, Goldsmith, Dickens, Scott, and other immortal authors. Just how many of these "brain children" do you know? For each correct answer count one. Then, 70 means you belong to the high school group; 80 means you are in the college student group; 90 that you belong in Gene Tunney's Yale university class, and 100 that you are of the élite literary intelligentsia.

Answers are to be found elsewhere in this section.

And Finds It in North Side Millinery Shop

But Not Without Suffering Many Rebuffs.

By Helen Dare

HER smile wins.

A million dollar smile? Well, perhaps that would be exaggerating. But it was worth $50 to her the day I encountered it in my pursuit of politeness.

It greeted me first from over a mop. The day's dreary rain had flooded the little millinery shop at 1643 Belmont avenue and she was busily salvaging the stock and mopping up water. Not too busy to smile at me or bring out hat after hat to a never quite satisfied customer.

"It's sort of hard to pick out a hat," she consoled me, "when you don't know what kind you want, but I don't mind showing them to you."

I turned from cloches to vagabonds, from straws to felts. I tried on blue ones and green ones and red ones. There wasn't any style or color I wouldn't try. And all the while she was trundling them back and forth her bright smile was in evidence.

* *

Smiling Through Defeat.

"It's terrible weather," she remarked, so cheerily that she might have been wishing me a happy New Year. "I was alone here when the worst shower started and it was all I could do to save the hats before I got help."

Now I was trying on broad rimmed beach hats.

"It's nice, but I'm too short to wear a big hat," I said as I tried the effect in three mirrors at once.

"Well, I don't know about height, but you're slim enough," she assured me.

Sales flattery, perhaps, but she must have catalogued me as a "looker" by this time and the hat at stake was priced $1.45. No, politeness, I decided—not the politeness of thank yous and excuse mes, but the kind that comes from a pleasant disposition and a desire to set people at their ease.

I put on my own hat and started

LIKES BUGGY RIDE BEST

MAYBE Joe Hinkey is old fashioned, but somehow, when his plumbing business calls him to various homes in the neighborhood, he prefers Bess and the buggy to the newer methods of transportation. The picture of Joe's equipage—of a sort that in its day would have aroused deep envy—was taken at 47th street and Ashland avenue.

TIME TO TAKE A DRINK

THE old oaken bucket may have been romantic, but it has nothing on the little tin cup, according to W. C. Richter, who has come up for a bit of liquid refreshment on a hot afternoon. N. Margiotta, 220 Whiting street, a fellow telephone worker, is the Gunga Din of the episode. Richter's home is at 5501 North Mason avenue.

THE OLD CLOTHES MAN

"THESE are going to be just the fit for somebody," soliloquizes Abraham Dvorkan, 1235 South Avers avenue, as he emerges into the street again with a castoff garment over his arm. Abraham was collecting in the vicinity of Monroe street and Central Park avenue when sighted by the photographer.

PREPARING FOR WINTER

THOUGH it's summer and vacation time, William Bevo, 328 South Spaulding avenue, is not unmindful of the fact that kindling wood will come in handy later on. This cart load was picked up where an old building was being torn down. William is going to build a house of his own which, in the fall, can be chopped up in sizes to fit the furnace.

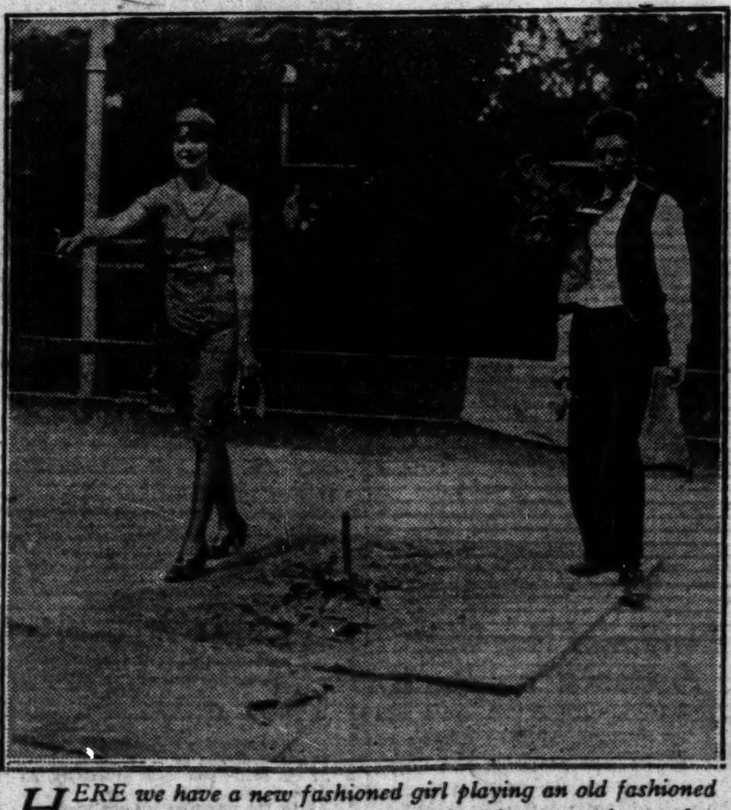
THE VILLAGE SMITHY

THE village in this instance was Chicago, and the W. E. Baxter blacksmith shop was at 5816 North Clark street. Baxter built the shop in 1873 and, in the heyday of the horse, it was a popular establishment. On the right stands the proprietor as he appears today. The picture he prizes, however, is the old timer showing himself and family in the doorway, taken at a period when the anvil clanged. The building now houses an automobile repairing shop.

HURLS A MEAN HORSESHOE



HERE we have a new fashioned girl playing an old fashioned game, and you can tell by comparing the expression on her face with that of her opponent how she's faring in the contest. The players are Grace Blake and Dave Fleming, the scene is in Lincoln park, and the photographer stuck around until Miss Blake put over the ringer that made her victor by a score of 21 to 17.

A BUSY DAY AT THE POOL

BOYHOOD hasn't changed, but the old swimming hole has. The muddy bottom of other days has given way to one of cement in which there are n osnapping turtles. A life guard watches on the shore. Now, as since the world began, there's nothing like a good swim on a warm day. This scene was taken at Gage park, 55th street and Western avenue.

Bottles and Bowls from Sweden

Exquisitely Designed Glassware and Other Novelties

A glass bowl made in Sweden by a famous factory and of such exquisite workmanship that, if it were antique, collectors would be bidding for it at auction in four figures. The drawing as well as the etching is superb.

A silver bowl by one of the world famous modernists. Its design and workmanship make it worthy of any tradition, and it departs from all tradition in its modern perfection.

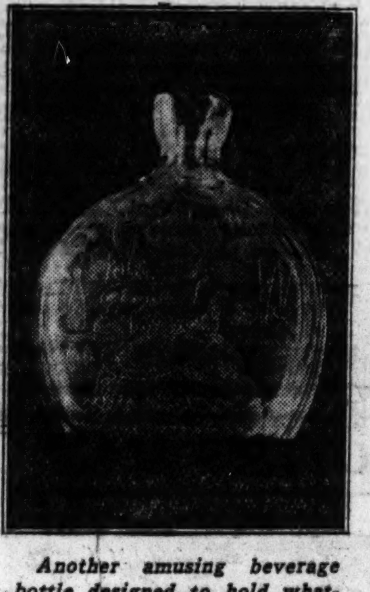
A silver compote in handwrought design. Its size as well as its chaste beauty make it a fitting ornament for the center of the small dining table. It is not prohibitive in price, though of sterling silver and comparatively heavy.

A covered glass bowl which can be used with the cover on for sweetmeats or rose leaves and, without the cover, for holding flowers. It is particularly finely etched and the glass itself is of a superior quality.

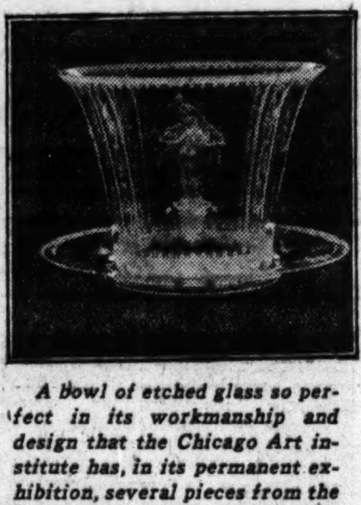
A very amusing beverage bottle for a gift to a man. It has a tight cork and can be used also as a shaker. The design is a convivial one of a cafe table on which are a number of empty glasses.

A small but very beautiful covered glass bowl. Its design and quality are up to the standard of the famous Swedish factory, from whence it came, and which captured most of the prizes of the International Exposition of Arts and Crafts.

A covered glass urn in modernistic design which shows to what classic beauty modernism can attain in the hands of a fine artist. The allover design is in stars with seven points, and the flying figure is draped in a cloud.



Another amusing beverage bottle designed to hold whatever is served with the appetizers, for on its face are etched pictures of delectable fish, olives, toast, and other dainties. It, too, can be used as a shaker, as it has a silver airtight cork.



A bowl of etched glass so perfect in its workmanship and design that the Chicago Art institute has, in its permanent exhibition, several pieces from the same factory and by the same artist in Sweden.

Londoner Has Will Tattooed on Back

LONDON.—(AP)—A 200 word will bequeathing large sums of money to several people has been tattooed on the back of a man who walked into a tattooing establishment in Waterloo road.

He had the will written out on a piece of paper, and asked that it should be transferred to his back. He sat for five hours while the work was being done, and the will was duly witnessed.

and dance halls achieved a tremendous vogue. Soldiers and sailors on leave thronged the gay resorts and the mad women of the time gathered there to meet the soldiers and sailors.

Raided by Police.

Her first club was in a basement in Leicester square, and the gayety of the place soon made it one of the most popular in London. The club was the liveliest in the hectic west end and tense nerved revelers of all classes poured money into her hands. Thieves and peers elbowed each other on its tiny dance floor.

That club was closed in time, but she opened others, running three or four at once. The police raided them frequently, usually for violations of the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicants after midnight. But whenever one of her places was closed, Mrs. Meyrick opened another elsewhere, keeping the police always jumps behind her.

Before her latest arrest, a magistrate issued twenty-six summonses against her clubs. She always pleaded guilty, paid the fine, and promptly opened another place. At different times she has operated forty-three.

Girls Dance with Dukes.

Meanwhile her children were being educated at the most exclusive schools in England under assumed names. Son Leslie attended Harrow, most of whose students are chosen from members of the aristocracy, while the two girls went to Girton, the feminine equivalent of Harrow. During vacations they toured the continent wth well paid chaperons, and they never set foot in any of their mother's clubs until after graduation.

By that time, however, they were able to take a hand in the business appearing nightly at their mother's sumptuous Forty-Three club. They became one of the chief attractions of the place, and their mother boasted that her daughters had danced with princes, dukes, and cabinet ministers.

Informality the Magnet.

The Forty-Three in Gerrard street was Mrs. Meyrick's favorite establishment. Expensively decorated within, it had a plain, heavily curtained, plate glass front, guarded by two huge and gorgeously uniformed commissionaires—really bouncers in disguise. Within, seated at a small cashier's desk, was the proprietress, always dressed in the same shabby velvet coat, with untidy hair and a ready smile which exposed a missing tooth.

There were two scales of admission prices—a pound if the patron wore a silk hat and five shillings if he didn't. Titled personages were never pressed to pay, it being enough for Mrs. Meyrick to have a nobleman for a guest. She accepted rubber checks and I. O. U.'s carelessly, often giving a youth a sovereign when she saw he was broke.

The merry informality of the place was the magnet which drew the crowd. In the kitchen any morning one might find a famous actress cooking herself a breakfast of bacon and eggs, with a burglar making coffee and a duke washing up at the sink. Liquor was sold freely at all hours despite the law, and even imprisonment did not prevent her from keeping the place wide open.

* *

"Sink of Iniquity."

At the opposite extreme from this fashionable club she owned another called Dalton's—once denounced by a magistrate as a "sink of iniquity." It was the worst kind of underworld dive. The orchestra consisted of three Negroes, who played until they tired. Then they would turn on a phonograph and mingle with the guests. That club was soon closed.

Nevertheless "Mother" Meyrick saw to it that her daughters met only the "right" men, the men best in reputation and family tradition, though not always in cash. In Paris, where she was helping to run a Montmartre cabaret called Meyrick's Gaiety, Dolly met the 19 year old Baron de Clifford. He was one of the "right" men. His title dates back to 1299, but his estate is only credited with some 13,000 acres in County Mayo, Ireland — not a particularly valuable asset.

Back in London, Dolly opened a club of her own, the Manhattan, and De Clifford became the most frequent guest. For several months he and Dolly were constantly together, and one night they suddenly disappeared. The next day it was disclosed that they were married.

* *

Walked Home at Dawn.

With Dolly removed from the trio, May, the other daughter, took a still more active part in directing her mother's clubs. Mrs. Meyrick exercised the same precautions in choosing her dancing partners as she had with Dorothy's, and presently another "right" young peer appeared.

The earl of Kinnoull was not perhaps so "right" as he might have been in point of contemporary reputation, but his family was famous in Scotland three centuries before King James I. created the earldom. When he met Miss Meyrick at the Silver Slipper club he was still legally married to his first wife, the former Miss Enid Fellows. He announced his engagement to May just one day after she, the countess, secured her divorce.

The clubs would close up at dawn. Mrs. Meyrick would make the rounds of her establishments, stuff the night's receipts into an old black bag, and walk the mile or so home. She considered taxicabs extravagant. A tired, rather bent and shabby little woman, no one would have suspected her to be "London's most notorious law breaker," carrying home more than a thousand pounds!

SHIELDED

DETHRONED

Mrs. Kate Holmes Meyrick, sentenced to six months' imprisonment for violation of the club license laws of the British metropolis.

FAMOUS HOMES

Former Kaiser Draws Tourists to Dutch Town

DOORN, Holland.—(AP)—Since William II., erstwhile emperor of Germany, took up his abode at Doorn, the population of this village has risen from 3,400 to 4,000.

This is due to two factors in the opinion of the secretary of the local "Verkeersvereeniging," or travel bureau—one, the increased business opportunities which the presence of the Hohenzollerns has brought, the other, the attraction that the presence of the ex-kaiser exerts upon the tourist.

"There is no doubt that our village has grown because the ex-kaiser now resides in our midst," the secretary told the Associated Press. "Doorn castle buys its supplies in the village, the Germans constituting the former emperor's retinue shop in the community, and the numerous guests who visit his majesty leave money here."

Mexican Girls Anxious to Be Pilots of Air

MEXICO CITY.—(AP)— Eleven young ladies and more than 500 men have applied for instruction in a proposed school of commercial aviation here. The Mexican Aeronautical association, composed of a group of civilians anxious to encourage commercial flying in Mexico, has announced it will open a school to train pilots as soon as planes can be bought, instructors secured and a field established.

Making It Good.

Seeing a sign on a loop cigar store advertising cartons of four leading brands of cigarets at a very low price, I stepped in and asked for a carton of my favorite ones. The clerk told me that he had just sold the last of that kind but was expecting more any minute.

Being in too much of a hurry to wait, I turned to go, but the clerk detained me and recommended another make as being "practically the same."

I purchased it and departed. Some time later I again stopped in the store and asked for one package of my favorite cigaret, remarking to the clerk that I considered the brand he had advised me to purchase before as decidely inferior.

Without another word, the clerk, instead of giving me the package I had requested, handed me a carton of them, saying, "My mistake, sir. Please accept these with my apology!"

Needless to add, I have ever since patronized this store exclusively for my smokes. E. G. Mc.

A Pleased Customer.

One day as I passed a dress shop I noticed a chic frock for $15. I had not the money with me then—not even enough for a deposit. I went in and asked the woman if she would put it aside for me.

She charmingly assented. The next day I paid her the full amount and left the dress there, to call for in the evening. When I returned and asked for my dress to my astonishment the woman handed me $5.10 and explained that a sale started that day and my dress would have been included in it. Needless to say I always get my frocks at a certain store now. M. S.

Fixed the Overshoes.

Two years ago, in the late winter, I bought a pair of overshoes for which I paid $4.50 but which proved to be unsatisfactory, as they barely covered my ankles.

In a short time one of them burst out from the fastener, but I continued to wear them that winter. The following winter I thought I would go back to the store where I bought them to see if they could be mended some way, and much to my surprise they replaced them with a new pair about two inches higher than the others without question as to when I had bought them or how long I had worn them.

I always buy my footwear there now. A. M.

No Charge for Altering.

I am very thin and have an unusually hard time to get a dress to fit me.

As I was shopping in one of our loop stores, I saw a dress I admired greatly. The clerk tried it on me and, as I expected, it didn't fit. They sent for their dressmaker and had the dress altered, when they saw my disappointment. It was practically made over and yet there was no additional charge.

That's what I call service. L. C.

TRADE'S PICKING UP

"WE'VE got one customer, anyhow," smiles Roselle Cahn, 6706 South Cornell avenue, as she pours out a glass of her own make of lemonade. Roy Thompson, 6718 South Cornell avenue, is the customer with the necessary three cents, and Rosemary Payne, 6712 South Cornell avenue, is assisting in the store today as chief clerk. YOUR FLOWER GARDEN

THE sunlight falls on blossoms that bid you come and enjoy their beauty and fragrance as they nod from their stems in Garfield park. And, standing south of Madison street, you have this view of the huge garden framed by the shade and leafage of kindly trees that grow along its border. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

OUT FOR THE SUNSHINE

THE golf game is incidental with Alice Butler, 2907 Warren avenue, and Grace Walsh, 3125 Warren avenue. The idea of the neighbor girls is to get out and soak in the sun's rays while laughing their way around the links at Garfield park. Can't tell, though, they may be taking the contest in dead earnest before they finish the twosome. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

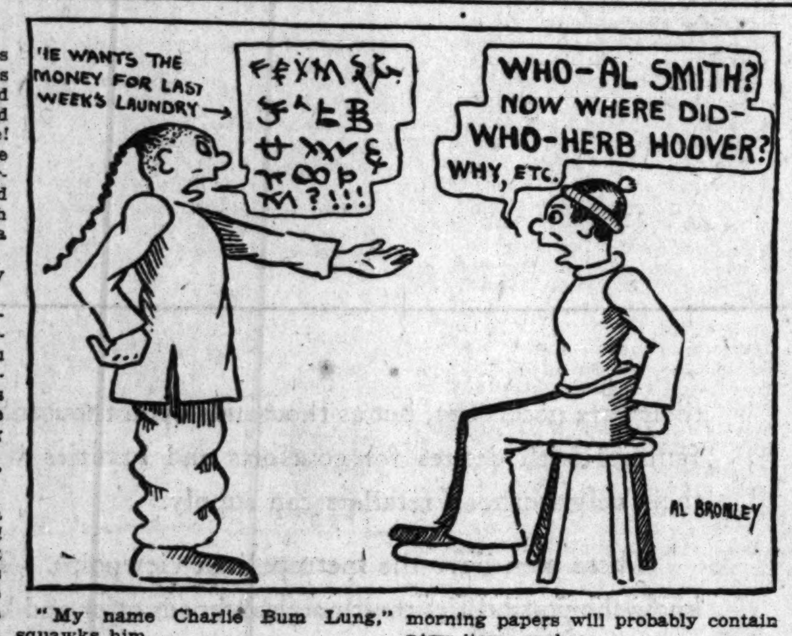
CHICAGO COWBOYS

THEY may not be as picturesque as some of the cattle men in the movies, but Phillip Siegel, 7931 Essex avenue, and Max Farley, 8226 South Sangamon street, come in contact with plenty of live stock. They are among the gentlemen who sit in the saddle and crack their whips while handling herds at the stockyards.

AL ARGUES WITH THE LAUNDRY

Solves Great Mystery of the Mangled Bed Sheet

By Snowshoe Al.



'IE WANTS THE MONEY FOR LAST WEEK'S LAUNDRY
WHO-AL SMITH? NOW WHERE DID- WHO-HERB HOOVER? WHY, ETC.
AL BROMLEY

YESTERDAY afternoon I breezes into the Chinese laundry across the avenue from our house, and I was in a murderous mood when I entered the dump, believe me! A Slant-Eye was standing behind the counter ironing a shirt. He was wearing a pair of bedroom slippers and fourteen yards of thin black cloth which was evidently supposed to be a pair of pants.

"Hello," says Mr. Slant-Eyes; "velly nice day, huh?"

"Who cares?" says me, very sarcastically. "Listen, Mongolian person, I ain't here to argue with you about the weather! You just delivered our laundry, and I found this thing (unwrapping a small bundle which I had brought with me) among it. Look at it!"

"Him look like funny lace curtain!" grins Mr. Slant-Eyes.

"Yeh," says I, "but him was a bed sheet when we sent him to you! I know it must have been a bed sheet because we ain't got no lace curtains in our wigwam. Hell, it looks worse than a lace curtain—it's got more holes in it than a screen door! What the dickens did you do to it?"

"I mangle him," says the Chink.

Al Loses His Temper.

"I'm glad you admit it," says I, feeling rather relieved. "I thought I better bring it back to you before my wife sees it—you're lucky she ain't home this afternoon. Well, what are you gonna do about it?"

"No do nothing about it," squawks Opium Oswald; "that's the way him come here in first place!"

"You are a monkey-faced liar," says I, "because you just got through admitting that you mutilated it! Why don'tcha stick to one story? You change your mind oftener than a chorus girl changes her address. You are so dumb you think an oyster cracker is some sort of a hammer. If I lose my temper, I'll——"

"Him look like that when him come here!" insists Mr. Slant-Eyes. "Your wife allus tell me to mangle bed sheets an' other large pieces!"

"Are you trying to be funny, you Oriental Shirt-Scorcher?" howls me, getting real peeved. "You've got a flock of nerve telling me my wife suggested that you destroy some of our laundry! She wouldn't think of doing that any more than you would think of taking a bath. Your name must be Ananias."

"My name Charlie Bum Lung," squawks him.

"Yeh?" sneers me; "you'll have more than bum lung if you don't pay for this damage—you'll have a couple bum eyes. I'll smack you into silence or any other place you want to go! I betcha this sheet was worth at least three berries before you slaughtered it—cough up three bucks!"

* *

Threatens Damage.

"No understand," says Mr. Bum Lung.

"All right, me try talkee your language," says I, pointing to the remains of the sheet; "you mangle him, huh? Yes?"

"Sure," says he.

"Well, me no likee him no more," says I, "so you keepee. You allee samee, slippee me three frogskins or me sockee you on snoot. You catchee idea now, huh?"

"ASDFG ZXCVB HJKLM YUIOP!" howls Mr. Bum Lung.

"That static don't mean a thing to me," says I; "you sound like my radio when six stations are coming in at the same time. Lay off that goofy Hongkong conversation an' start talking business! Give me three dollars and you'll still have a laundry, otherwise you ain't gonna have anything except a blank mind; in fact, the morning papers will probably contain news items such as:

"'POLICE FIND DAZED SLANT-EYE IN VACANT LOT! Mr. Charles B. Lung, prominent soapsuds merchant, was picked up in a somewhat mangled condition last night by the police. He was lying in a vacant lot, surrounded by several dirty shirts and a couple piles of lumber. Neighbors insist that there was a laundry on the premises yesterday, and the piles of lumber have a tendency to substantiate their statements. The cops believe the joint was struck by a cyclone. Mr. Lung was carried to a hospital in six bushel baskets, and the doctors wish to assure his friends (if any) that he will be perfectly well again in about twenty or thirty years.'"

New Arrival.

"LKJHGFDSA POIUYTREWQ CXZ MNBVGF!!!" squeals Mr. Bum Lung, picking up a flatiron.

"You're another, you $@$@$@$@$ @$@$@$@$@!!" says I, picking up a large bottle of bluing; "when I get through with this shack you can look at it an' sing 'My Blue Heaven.' You better grab the phone an' call a doctor right now before we start—it'll save time. Also phone your milkman an' tell him to stop delivering cow sirup to this address until the year 1945!"

At this moment another slant-eye breezes through the back door and enters the laundry. This baby looked like a cross between a shriek of laughter an' a cry for help! If he only had a muzzle on him he could have got a job in any Dog and Pony show on earth. He had patent leather hair, patent leather shoes, red socks, white pants, and a funny face. His mother must have had poor eyesight, otherwise she would have picked him up right after he was born an' handed him to the cat. Yup, I've seen better looking things in garbage cans.

Mr. Charlie Bum Lung greeted the newcomer with huge quantities of enthusiasm and slung about five thousand words of conversation at him in less than two minutes. Anybody could tell that the conversation was about me, because Charlie pointed in my direction several times and waved his flatiron wildly. The new arrival raised his eyebrows and seemed very much amused; then he jabbered right back at Mr. Lung. Whereupon the latter turns to me and says:

* *

Mr. Ching Sing Ling.

"Him my cousin. Him talk to you! Him talk better than me! Him got college education!"

"You're a liar," says I; "him ain't wearing raccoon coat!"

"Nevertheless," horns in the newcomer, "I am the cousin of Charlie Bum Lung, and I——"

"I suppose your name is Algernon Bad Tonsils," sports me, "or maybe your Horatio Punk Stomach, or possibly Reginald High Blood Pressure. All right, I'll lick both of youse——"

"My monicker," says he, lighting a cigaret very nonchalantly [whatever that means] and blowing a mugful of smoke towards the ceiling, "is Ching Sing Ling, and I——"

"It sounds like somebody rattling a pocketful of small change," says I; "either that or part of the Westminster chimes. No matter what your name is, you better dive under a stove or any other place which looks convenient, because me and your cousin are all prepared to cheat the air mail by sending packages through the atmosphere at each other without bothering to stick postage on 'em."

"My cousin just explained the situation to me," remarks Mr. Ling, "and it strikes me very funny—"

"If this bottle of bluing lands between your ears you will either be struck funny or knocked silly," says I.

The Fireworks Start.

"I understand," says he, "that you want Mr. Lung to pay for one of your articles which he mangled. The word 'mangle' has two entirely different definitions. My cousin mangled the article with this large machine which you see in the corner. Didn't you ever see anything get mangled with a large machine?"

"Certainly," says I; "I once saw a drunken sailor fall in front of a swiftly moving beer truck. What's that got to do with my three dollars?"

Just then a very tough looking person walked into the laundry. I could see that he was just aching to hand somebody a slam in the ear. His name was probably Oscar Bloodshed; anyhow, that's how he looked.

"Listen, bums," says he to the two Slant-Eyes; "for the last two days I've been looking for my minnow net and my wife thinks she sent it to you among my dirty shirts by mistake. Well, if she did, it never came back! You're a pair of crooks an' I'm gonna wreck this dump right now!"

Whereupon he rolled up his sleeves and rushed behind the counter. The result was beautiful! A flat iron hit him in the stomach, a teapot smacked him on the chin, and several cakes of soap bounced off the top of his head. Mr. Bloodshed staggered backwards and sat down in a corner. Mr. Charles Bum Lung then started slinging washboards at the poor gentleman. I ducked through the front door and went home.

"Where have you been?" says my wife to me.

"Over to the soapsuds establishment," says me.

"What's that funny looking piece of goods you're carrying?" says her.

"O, that!" grins me; "it came here today in our bundle of laundry, and I thought it was a bedsheet full of holes. However, I now have reasons for believing that it is a minnow net."

RAILROAD TOGETHER

FEW are the commuters from South Chicago who do not know and esteem Mr. and Mrs. Peter F. Sheehan. Mr. Sheehan, freight agent at the station, has spent forty-eight years in the service of the Illinois Central railroad. For fifteen years his wife has sold tickets at South Chicago. They make their home above the station, so the sound of trains is seldom out of their ears.

Planes in France Are Parked Free

PARIS.—(AP)—The French government has provided free parking fields for private airplanes as a means of encouraging the adoption of airplane travel by the public.

Seventy permanent fields have been created and designated "civil fields." This will distinguish them from the military landing areas. There is a time limit of 48 hours on the free parking privilege after which a small fee is charged.

Chicago Poles Plan National Drama Society

Success of Local Alliance Inspires Expansion.

JULY FOURTH, this year, was of double significance to the Polish people of Chicago, for in addition to celebrating the birthday of American independence, they also commemorated at the same time the birthday anniversary of the Alliance of Polish Literary and Dramatic Circles of America, an organization which now has a membership of more than 2,000 Poles in Chicago and which, according to Walter M. Zolla, general secretary, has plans for embracing similar organizations throughout the United States.

The principal object of the alliance is a broad, extensive and influential work of propagating and teaching the younger American born Poles the beauty of Polish speech, art, drama and literature and to inculcate in the Polish youth the love and desire for education.

Presents Polish Plays.

The Alliance was organized a year ago by representatives of twelve of the most active literary and dramatic clubs in Chicago, namely the Ossolinskich, Ognisko, Kraszewski, Julo Slowacki, Synowie Wolnosci, Wolna Polska, Milosc Ojczyzny, Brodzinskiego, Holy Trinity, Sacred Heart of Jesus, and A. Mickiewicz Literary and Dramatic circles; also the Polski Klub Artystyczny [Polish Arts Club]. During the first six months of this year, eight other societies, including the C. W. Reymont, Zjednoczenie, Tysiac Walecznych, and St. Francis Literary and Dramatic circles, applied and were admitted to membership.

Although in existence only a year the organization has already presented to the Polish people of Chicago such gems of Polish art as "Zaczarowane Kolo" [The Enchanted Pool] and "Chata za Wsia."

* *

Honor Professor Stembler.

The play "The Enchanted Pool," a quasi-fantasy, is the creation of Lucian Rydel's pen. It shows the fantastic in the old legend of Faust, the signing of a pact with the devil for the sake of worldly gain, and the real in the great love of the miller's wife.

The "Chata za Wsia," is an other gem of Polish drama. It is based on an old Polish legend. The title translated in English is "The Cabin Outside the Village."

During Professor Stembler's visit to America the Alliance arranged a banquet in his honor and presented him with a beautiful white gold ring bearing the ensignia of the Alliance artistically engraved.

Seek University Chair.

The Alliance is now busily engaged in preparing a play from the pen of the peer of Polish dramatic authors, Alexander Fredro. The play will be staged Nov. 18 at Pulaski hall, 18th street and Ashland avenue. The administration is also working towards organizing a Polish Literary club at the University of Illinois, with the object of later persuading the faculty towards installing a chair of Polish literature.

The administration of the Alliance is composed of the following members of the various circles: Edward Wojcik, president; J. Stefanik, vice president. Miss S. Kobylaska, vice president; Walter M. Zolla, general secretary, [4443 South Richmond street]; K. Sechman, financial secretary; S. Macewicz, treasurer; A. Swiatoniowski, librarian and J. Wcislo, dramatic director.

Monthly meetings of the house of delegates are held at Stefanik's hall, the third Monday of each month.

Hungary's Girls Said to Wear Shortest Skirts

BUDAPEST.—(AP)—Prominent society women have opened a campaign against the short skirts worn by Hungarian girls. It is charged that nowhere in the world has the style for brevity been carried to such startling extremes as in Hungary.

The appearance of girls and young women on the promenades and in the fashionable tea rooms along the Danube with skirts four or five inches above the knee has produced an outcry in press, church and parliament.

Archduchess Isabella of Hapsburg, who is the patron of several philanthropic associations in Hungary, is among the chief opponents of the abbreviated skirt.

"Our women are simply crazy," she said to the Associated Press correspondent. "They would sooner starve than run counter to the exigencies of dame fashion. I have just been looking at the Paris fashion journals, and nowhere do I find skirts so short as those worn in Hungary. It is simply a disgrace. Our women are degrading our nation and themselves by exposing their legs beyond the limit of decency."

Married Men in Germany Found to Live Longest

BERLIN.—(AP)—The German statistical bureau has uncovered scientific evidence that married men live longer than bachelors. Facts based on a national investigation, however, failed to substantiate the popular notions of relationship between marriage and morality. Bachelors, widowers and divorced men took all the prizes for good conduct.

The differences in length of life were most marked for men between the ages of twenty and twenty-five, when sixty per cent more unmarried than married men die. With advancing years the ratio tends to become even.

The chief reason given for the longevity of married men was their more ordered existence, regular meals and sleep.

The Cigaret Lady.

I wandered down to a combination candy and cigaret shop at 1709 Belmont. I asked the woman behind the counter for a fancy brand of cigarets.

"We don't carry them," she said, looking up at me disapprovingly from a letter she was writing.

I suggested a commoner brand and she gave them to me without a word, but careful to enclose them in a candy bag.

Then I decided to go in for furniture. Armed with a wedding ring and an engagement ring procured at a local 5 and 10, I entered a furniture store at 4822 North Lincoln avenue—a June bride just furnishing her three room apartment.

* *

Parlor, Bedroom and Bath.

"Do you want linen frieze or mohair for your living room suite?" questioned the clerk, "or would you prefer to look at tapestry needlepoint or velvet?"

I wasn't proud. I would and did look at any and all of them.

"Have you a price limit in mind?" he asked apathetically when I had finally found one that suited but was too expensive.

Naturally, I hadn't; but after quick calculation I decided.

"About $1,500."

He became a little more genial.

"You can do very nicely with that. Suppose we select the dining and bedroom sets first.

He calculated total prices for me, including all the extras I wanted thrown in, and we had enough left to buy lamps and rugs.

"Well," I said, "I'll bring my husband in to look them over some time. And he grunted. So I departed, seeking further fields to conquer me.

* *

High, Wide, and Handsome.

Down the street a ways, at 4740 Lincoln avenue, I passed another furniture store. I noticed a sign for high chairs and went in to see what polite luck I might have with them.

"Can I show you something, Miss?" the clerk asked as I entered.

"I'd like to look at high chairs," I said staunchly.

"Yes, madam; right this way, madam.

There wasn't much range of variety in high chairs, I soon discovered. You could have them painted or varnished, and that was about all.

He pointed out the special features.

"See, this strap will keep the baby from falling out."

"O, yes," I said, "but they seem awfully large."

He laughed.

"I guess you haven't bought many high chairs.

I admitted it, and he continued: "Well, I've sold a lot, but I haven't bought any myself. Marriage and kids is all right for them as likes it."

I was seeking a way out.

They didn't have any white ones, so I immediately set my heart on a white one. He tried long and vociferously to talk me out of it, but gave up after a while and let me go.

* *

Hot Weather Bargaining.

I stopped in a bakery at 4705 Lincoln avenue.

"I'd like some cream puffs," I said, cream puffs being one of my weaknesses.

"They won't keep in hot weather," the girl said, "so we don't make them. I can give you some filled with marshmallow."

I didn't care for marshmallow, and asked for cheese straws.

"No, we haven't any cheese straws, but," she added helpfully, "we have cheese cake on Saturdays."

"Well, how about Banbury tarts?"

"Banbury tarts," she said in amazement. "Now, what are they?"

I admitted I didn't quite know either, but they sounded as if they ought to be good. I finally went out with two blueberry muffins [for a nickel] under my arm and one pair of eyes staring incredulously after me.

* *

Searching for Stockings.

Up the street again, to a dry goods store at Lincoln and Lawrence, this time in search of silk stockings. The woman who waited on me was pleasant-eyed, and patient with my insistence on narrow heeled hose.

"No," she reiterated, "we haven't any like that, but we have pointed ones." And she showed me several varieties with double points and points on top of points.

"O, dear," she said, as there came a heavy clap of thunder. "I wish this rain would stop. My mother's in a cottage 'way out in the country and I help but worry about her."

I paused at a hair net counter, which she also served.

"Does anybody really wear these things any more?" I asked.

"For motoring," she informed me, "and in the evening, sometimes."

"I passed on out, weighing her politeness against the others.

* *

Sweet Sixteen?

The next stop was a dress shop at 4802 North Western avenue. There was a sale in progress, but the weather had kept every one except the politeness reporter away.

"I'll show you the bargains first," the attendant announced when I was safely inside. "What size do you wear?"

"Sixteen, usually," I declared.

"O," she said, "I think you take more than that," and I knew in my heart that she would have to give a tall exhibition of politeness to convince me she had earned the award.

But she was right about the size The sixteens were a pretty tight fit and I had to succumb to the larger sizes.

"I thought you were a litle plump." she insisted. She tried to convince me that a pink party dress trimmed in lace was just the thing for me. But it sagged on one shoulder and drooped at the back and I had struck her off my list anyway, so I refused it, and left.

* *

Wording a Wedding Card.

I went to a shop at 2253 Lawrence avenue that placarded "Wedding announcements." Hurriedly slipping off the wedding ring and leaving only the "diamond," I went in and asked to look at samples.

He was a huge man and he gathered himself into a chair in front of his sample folder, leaving me to drag one across the room or look over his shoulder.

"Well, now," he said, "there are really only three sizes," and he pointed them out to me—large, larger, and largest.

"Haven't you got any cute, tiny ones?" I mourned.

"Wait; we've just got in a new small one that goes into the envelope unfolded."

He showed it to me and I was properly entranced. The engraving, I was informed, could be variations of script, text, or a little used outline letter. The only samples he had of this were on black edged bereavement thank you's. So I didn't care for it.

"Now for the wording." He looked at me questioningly. "Your family going to announce it?"

"Why, I guess so," I faltered. "How else can you do it?"

My education was enhanced when he showed me a sample reading: "Miss Mary Blank and Mr. Johnny Jones announce their marriage to each other——"

But I decided to stick to the good old regulation form.

"Shall I make you a layout?" he urged.

"O, no," I breathed, "I'll have to discuss it with mother first," and I made a hasty exit.

* *

Back to the Start.

It was in search of entertainment for a sick friend that I approached the book counter in a department store at Lawrence and Winchester avenues.

"How about 'The Ten Commandment's?'" suggested the attendant. "That was an awful good movie. Or, here's a real exciting Harold Bell Wright."

While I was pondering over the merits of the two she lost interest in me and turned to more promising material, and I turned and went out.

Back to the hat shop, I decided. I'd give her another test and if she passed it the award was hers.

* *

The End of the Trail.

She recognized me as her torturer of earlier in the day, but the smile still persisted. It left in a moment of amazement when I handed her the card. And then was replaced by a reproachful glance—the first. I would kid her, would I?

I assured he it was real, on the square, and not a dream.

"But what have I done?" she exclaimed in wonderment. "I've read about it, of course, and envied the people who got it, but I never thought I would."

She was all blushes and confusion as in a rush she told me her name was Mrs. Coralie Williamson and she lived across the street, at 1644 Belmont avenue; that she had a little girl named Doris; that she and her husband both worked, and the money would come in mighty handy.

By the way, I did finally buy that beach hat.

TORTURED

Mrs. Coralie Williamson of 1644 Belmont avenue was pestered to the exhaustion point by a stranger in search of a hat, but she felt well repaid when this stranger informed her that the real quest was for a polite person, and that $50 was her reward.

Osaka Gets Subway; Loses Its Quaintness

NOT much longer will Japan be the land of quaint mediaeval scenes and customs for the occidental traveler. The Osaka municipality has completed all the geological investigations and other necessary arrangements for the construction of a high speed tramcar service. The system will consist of underground and overhead lines, to be completed at an estimated cost of $80,000,000.

Markets of Magnitude!

The "CITIES WITHIN THE CITY"

Lincoln, Lawrence and Western, market place of a metropolis—one of the "cities within the city."

WHAT do you think of when you hear Erie, Pennsylvania, mentioned? Certainly not of a struggling community of a few hundred or a few thousand population. Rather do you visualize a great city of over 140,000 people made rich by natural resources and huge industrial plants . . . a city of prosperous families whose patronage means profit to the city's merchants.

Here in Chicago is another "city"—the "city of Ravenswood." Originally an outlying suburb, Ravenswood has developed into one of Chicago's greatest neighborhoods. Containing over 144,000 people, above average in the homes they live in and the things they buy, Ravenswood is equal in population and business possibilities to such thriving cities as Erie.

Ravenswood is not the only Chicago neighborhood with the right to be classed with the leading cities in the country. Chicago has 48 neighborhoods, most of them having 50,000 to 175,000 population. They are Chicago's "cities within the city"—rich communities that combine their peoples and prosperity to make Chicago the metropolitan monarch it is.

The Metropolitan Viewpoint

The progressive merchants of these neighborhoods realize the part they play in the city's greatness. They see their communities as they are—not as small groups of people who depend on a few scattered shops to supply their bare necessities, but as thousands upon thousands of families with desires for comforts and luxuries which their neighborhood retailers can supply.

These men have the metropolitan viewpoint. They know the possibilities their neighborhoods offer and know what must be done to realize them. The modern merchant knows he must use modern selling and merchandising methods, for only by so doing can he secure the big success that can and should be his.

But until eighteen months ago the neighborhood merchant was not able to apply one of the most vital of selling aids to his business. Until the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune was established, he was not able to afford newspaper advertising, the selling influence that has been so instrumental in the success of the largest retail stores.

How It Works

By dividing the Sunday Tribune's great circulation in Chicago and its suburbs into three parts, one for each side of the city, the Metropolitan Section makes it possible for the outlying merchant to buy only the part of the Tribune's coverage he can use. Ravenswood retailers, for example, can reach over 32,000 of the 35,000 families in their neighborhood, a coverage of 91%. In addition to this, their advertising goes to more than 200,000 families on their side of the city who can conveniently buy in Ravenswood! Metropolitan Section advertisers pay only for the circulation they receive—about one-third of the rate for complete Sunday Tribune coverage.

Other progressive merchants are selling to "the cities within the city" with Metropolitan Section advertising. A Tribune man will be glad to call and explain how you can do the same. Phone Superior 0100.

Chicago Tribune
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Metropolitan Section

The Chicago Tribune publishes as a part of its regular Sunday issue a Metropolitan Section, the circulation of which is divided so that local neighborhood merchants may advertise in any one or more of the three sides of Chicago and suburbs as follows:

North and Uptown Section—West and Northwest Section—South and Southwest Section

Plan Records of AdPrograms for Small Stations

250 Might Broadcast Same Stuff at Same Time.

Washington, D. C., July 28.—Despite the fact that the idea apparently has not made much of a hit with the federal radio commission, great possibilities are held out by the sponsors of electric reproduction for typing together without wires the hundreds of smaller broadcasters into vast chains.

Electric reproduction, it may be explained, is broadcasting phonograph records without the aid of a microphone, but direct to the transmitter by means of an electric needle device. The newest chain scheme seems to be to make a record of an advertiser's hour, send this record to a hundred or more smaller stations, and have it electrically reproduced and broadcast all over the United States at the same hour.

Judge Robinson Fooled.

Already Judge Ira E. Robinson, chairman of the radio commission, has come out openly as being against the broadcasting of phonograph records, and several other commissioners have privately expressed themselves adversely. So nearly do these electrically reproduced phonograph records sound like the real thing, however, that Judge Robinson himself admitted he had been fooled by them.

This has resulted in a stricter enforcement of the regulation that all phonograph records broadcast must be so announced.

The process of electrical reproduction was brought directly to the attention of the commission by Clinton R. White of Chicago, president of the Independent Broadcasters association, when he appeared in Washington in defense of his station, WCRW, which has been ordered to show cause why it should not be silenced on Aug. 1, together with 164 others.

Broadcast Many Records.

Mr. White testified that he was one of the first broadcasters to use records for air dissemination, and that at first the radio audience did not respond. However, since that time listeners have come to consider the electrical reproduction a very high grade of entertainment, according to Mr. White.

"Is it your opinion that electrical reproduction is a very important contribution to broadcasting," asked Louis G. Caldwell, chief counsel for the commission.

"Absolutely," replied Mr. White. "Station WENR, Chicago, is using electrical reproduction for two solid hours each morning, and other stations all over the country are turning to it."

Mr. White declared that he used these records in connection with direct advertising and that they are announced as being phonograph records in accordance with the commission's ruling.

Plan Huge Advertising Chains.

Mr. White also explained to the commission a plan whereby an advertiser who desired coverage in several cities of the country could have records made and distributed to broadcasters in these cities, and arrange to have them played for transmission to the radio audience at a certain hour on a certain evening. This would constitute a sort of chain, but would be used by only one station in one community, leaving the listener's dial free. These advertising records could be distributed to 100 or more stations electrically equipped to reproduce them throughout the country.

What the Chicago broadcaster said was the first public intimation that with the aid of electrical reproduction and phonograph records there might be competition offered by smaller stations to the present chains composed of larger stations in the selling of advertising time.

"It is really the first time any one has thought out a way to make smaller stations pay," an independent broadcaster remarked. "Why should not an advertising hour be heard on 250 stations instead of 50 stations?"

Trombone Expert to Conduct Family Party Program

Arthur Pryor, world famous trombone soloist and leader of one of the oldest and most popular bands in America, will conduct the family party program over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, tomorrow night with his celebrated company of brass, reed and string musicians, assisted by Olive Kline, soprano.

The program will run a full hour instead of a half hour and will be the second presentation of Arthur Pryor's band as a radio entertainment feature, its first radio concert having been given a year ago.

Although he has made an outstanding success as a band leader in recent years, the secret of Arthur Pryor's hold on American popular fancy dates back to his career as a trombone soloist. He could do things with a trombone never done before or since. Experienced players of the instrument used to think he had secret attachments which explained his trills, runs and tones. In Berlin a group of musicians called on him and insisted on inspecting his trombone, so certain were they that it was different from others.

Tommy's Soiree on Air Again Wednesday

Wednesday evening at 7:15 brings another artistic production of "Tommy's Soiree." This week's program will be more modern that previous ones, though in no way will it lack in variety. German, Spanish, English and American trends in the modern musical movement differ so radically that a sample of these and more will furnish an interesting three quarters of an hour of entertainment.

Lessons in Auction Bridge

BY R. M. ROGERS.

ARTICLE XIX.

Winning bridge depends less on luck than it does on the skill of the player. About two-thirds of the skill required is attributable to correct bidding and one-third of the skill to advantageous manipulation of the twenty-six cards controlled by the player.

R. M. ROGERS.

Skill in bidding requires knowledge of accepted principles and conventions and the meaning of the terms used in different positions. These can all be learned from written instruction.

Skill in play requires what can also be learned from written instructions and applied to actual experience in play, and the effect would be materially quickened by comments if obtainable of an expert player or expert play instructor.

There are many expert players, but few of them are instructors, and few instructors are like one I have seen play in one of the clubs, and who, as I happen to know, has lost but eight times in fifty sittings of play. There must be something besides luck in his success at the game.

Instruction on playing must explain and illustrate the features of bringing in long suits, or cross ruffing, placing the lead, when and when not to establish the long suit before exhausting trumps; how to establish cards of reentry in the hand holding a long suit to be brought in, etc. By bringing in a suit is meant making all the tricks possible in it, and it is established when no one but the holder can take any more tricks in that suit.

We give below a deal where north and south play a no-trump, at which the novice would take six, or seven, or eight tricks, while a skillful player will easily make ten tricks.

The difference in the number of tricks made would lie in two plays, first, waiting till the third round to win the first heart trick by south, at which time east will no longer have any hearts to lead to his partner. The second feature is for south to let east win the first spade trick, and when south gets in on anything that east may lead, his play of his second and last spade will be overtaken by the king in dummy, followed by the ace, and the suit is established and all the rest of the spades in dummy's hand will be good, as no one can follow suit.

If dummy was to take the first round in spades with the king and return the ace, the queen would still be out in the hand of west and north, the dummy, has no trick taker in any other suit so that he can get to make the rest of the spades.

THE HANDS.

North:
Spades—A, K, 8, 6, 5, 2
Hearts—7, 6
Diamonds—8, 6, 2
Clubs—9, 4

West:
Spades—Q, 4, 3
Hearts—K, Q, J, 10, 5
Diamonds—9, 7, 5
Clubs—K, 8

East:
Spades—J, 10
Hearts—9, 4, 2
Diamonds—J, 4, 3
Clubs—Q, 6, 5, 3, 2

South:
Spades—9, 7
Hearts—A, 8, 3
Diamonds—A, K, Q, 10
Clubs—A, J, 10, 7

THE BIDDING.

S.	W.	N.	E.
1 No Trump	2 Hearts	2 Spades	Pass
2 No Trump	Pass	Pass	Pass

N. and S. take 1 Heart trick, 3 Diamonds, 5 Spades, 1 Club. Total, 10 tricks, making a game and rubber.

We will admit that in the bidding north would undoubtedly bid three spades but just as certainly South would bid three no trumps.

The difference in the score is considerable and may be tremendous because if it is the rubber game and north and south fail to take nine tricks another deal must be played and if east and west win it they will secure the bonus of 250 points, which north and south might have obtained by properly playing the previous hand, which of itself makes a difference of 500 points.

Questions and comments will be given cheerful attention, and unique hands analyzed for our readers, if stamped envelope is enclosed for a reply. Address Bridge Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN A. RYAN.

WITH the talking moving pictures taking the film world by storm, we are moved to wonder if the ladies of the celluloid will be as unpopular when their voices are recorded in dialogue and in song, as are the ladies of the radio. The process of picking up the voice is the same in the talking pictures as in the radio. Regular radio microphones are used. And, by and large, women's voices do not register pleasantly on the radio; so why should they be any better in the audible films?

Gloria Swanson, Mary Pickford and others are holding up their newest productions, undecided as to whether the insertion of vocal effects would enhance their films or ruin the valuable reputations they have built up pictorially.

It is a nice treat to hear Dolores Del Rio sing "Ramona" and elocute a bit in broken English, with a pronounced Spanish-Mexican accent, as she did once on a radio chain program; but we fear that her speaking throughout a moving picture would be unintelligible and unhappy.

We find the ladies participating less and less in radio programs. Sopranos who have ever been unpopular, are fewer. Two, for whom we must make an exception, because they are a delight every time we hear them, are Belle Forbes Cutter and Virginia Rae, the latter of the chain programs. Ladies in the radio playlets are fewer; we have heard many dialogue sketches on chain programs lately, but they were without benefit of femininity.

So we believe the going will not be easy, when the movie gals commence to act into the movie microphones.

SUBTITLES, too, we understand, are going to be made vocal in the talking fims. That's a new job for us radio announcers, "Came the dawn, and two hearts entwined. This is Paul Schlitz announcing."

ONE OF the irritating habits of the men who write the announcements for the men who announce the chain advertising programs is the use of eastern time in their requests to "listen in again for this program at such-and-such an hour next Monday." The announcer of the Gypsies program, for instance, asks us to be with them again on the following Monday evening, "at 8:30," omitting even the specifications of eastern daylight saving time. Probably he reasons that by enumerating "Eastern time," "Central time," "Rocky Mountain time," and "Pacific Coast time" he would annoy some listeners—but not so much, we think, as he does by the ostensible disdain for the auditors who get the program from stations west of Detroit.

TODAY we make our first public appearance in this city, when we open a week's engagement at the Riviera theater. Heaven give us strength!

We learned a little while ago, upon the vaudeville stage in Madison and Rockford, that years of talking to an invisible audience makes one a bit self-conscious when addressing a real audience. We appreciated, when facing the footlights, the nervousness of footlight actors when they face the microphone.

What does an announcer do on the stage, you ask? Well, many of the radio people have been performing in the theaters for a long while. Ford and Glenn spend about half their time filling theatrical engagements about the country; Graham McNamee ducks away from the studio every once in a while to sing some songs and recite a few anecdotes for a week in a vaudeville theater; Al Carney, Pat Barnes, Art Linick, Uncle Bob and others are found on their nights off in nearby towns, yodeling and monologuing. In our case, we exhibit our own movie, "My Radio Scrap Book," showing our most important broadcasts and our manner of doing them—the Scopes Evolution Trial, the Red Grange games, the world series, the Indianapolis auto races and the Punch and Judy show. We chatter through the reeling of the movie, then a little talk, and finally a fast vocal reproduction of the Kentucky Derby.

Serial stories are very popular on the radio. Of course, folks will always listen to a story, but it was problematical at first whether a story read day by day over the air would attract a sustained interest. We have found that a novel which is read, a chapter a day, has a large audience, who write and phone in consternation when some other feature crowds out or postpones an episode.

Open Air Concerts by Loud Speaker Moscow Feature

MOSCOW, July 28.—U. P.]—Open-air radio concerts at all hours of the day and late into the night are a characteristic feature of life in the capital during the spring and summer months.

Powerful loud speakers are installed at a dozen or so of the principal squares of Moscow and broadcast a continuous stream of speeches, music, and even vaudeville sketches. The loud speakers are usually perched high on a telegraph pole or a roof, so that the voices seem to issue from the clouds.

The sudden eruption of a booming tenor or piercing contralto as one walks unsuspectedly along the streets must be responsible for cases of severe shock among Mucovites, and especially among visitors unaccustomed to this form of public entertaining. When the weather is good—apparently a rare occasion in Moscow—little knots of people are gathered around these loud speakers.

Recently voices familiar to music-loving America filled the air in Moscow through these outdoors radio concerts. Titti Ruffo, Galli-Curci, Enrico Caruso, Tito Schipa and Sergei Radomsky entertained enthusiastic groups of radio fans on the streets of Moscow.

They were broadcast from American phonograph records, loaned to the soviet authorities for the occasion by Radomsky, who is now in Moscow, preparatory to a concert tour in the Caucasus.

Hoover's Speech of Acceptance on Huge Chain

Will Talk at Hour Whole Nation Can Listen.

One of the first moves on the part of the Republican national committee has been to form a radio bureau. O. P. Gascoigne, formerly manager of station WCAP which was later sold to station WRC in Washington, is at the head of the bureau. Mr. Gascoigne will supervise all details of broadcasting during the campaign.

Just as the Democrats staged their keynote speaker Claude G. Bowers for a night session to catch listeners at home so has the notification speech of Secretary Hoover, on Saturday, Aug. 11, from Leland Stanford university at Palo Alto, Cal., been timed so that the great middle western and eastern radio audiences may tune in on it during the evening hours.

Will Speak at Odd Hour.

To do this, however, and because of the difference in time between the Pacific and Atlantic coasts Mr. Hoover will have to begin his speech at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. At first glance this seems to be an odd hour to make a campaign speech but inasmuch as this is on Saturday afternoon daytime toilers in San Francisco and vicinity will be free to attend.

More important than that 5 o'clock Pacific time is 6 o'clock mountain time, 7 o'clock central standard and 8 o'clock in the evening central daylight time as prevails in Chicago and other cities. It will also be 8 p. m. eastern standard time in Washington and 9 o'clock eastern daylight time in New York and Boston.

Why Saturday Night Was Picked.

Thus the middle western and eastern territory where Mr. Hoover's managers' figure he will have the hardest fight will be covered better from a radio standpoint than the far west which he is almost certain to carry anyway.

More radio canniness is shown in setting the speech on Saturday night inasmuch as there are fewer advertising hours, less contracted time on the air, that evening than any other in the week. Inasmuch as the advertisers pay for the broadcasting of their hours they must be consulted with regard to giving them up.

However, since there are comparatively few of them on that night considerably less shifting will be required to give Mr. Hoover the right of way from coast to coast and border to border thus insuring him an enormous hookup.

Betty Jane, Musical Comedy of 1923, on W-G-N Next Thursday

W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, announces another of its musical comedy revivals which are directed by Harry W. Spingold. This week, instead of going back twenty years for a production, the play will be "Betty Jane," a popular musical comedy of 1923. The play, a story of life in Hollywood, is a creation of three Chicagoans. The book was written by William Jacobs, the lyrics by Ted Koehler, and the music by Earl Carpenter. The production will be on the air at 9 o'clock Thursday evening.

W-G-N RADIO PROGRAM
THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE STATION

on the Drake Hotel

(416.4 Meters—720 Kilocycles)

SUNDAY, JULY 29

Jackie Coogan

Jackie Coogan

They're going to have company, Cuckoo and Jumbo and Duck-Lucky and Rosie, the Little Wabbly Calf. The animals are spending all day today getting ready for a visit from Jackie Coogan at their Punch and Judy Show. Puff is washing her face and Pal is keeping out of the stickers. Listen in for Jackie (you know, the little boy in the movies who will appear in person at the Chicago theater starting tomorrow) from W-G-N at 6:20 this evening.

The SOX and the SENATORS . . . .

THE microphone is at the south side park today ready to pick up the hub-bub of the battle between the Chicago White Sox and the Washington Senators. The afternoon's sport feature starts on W-G-N at 2:55 o'clock. Have the dials polished and tune in!

The A.K. Concert

tonight has as its guests the Sittig Trio, that well known group of string artists, playing such tunes as "Song to the Eveing Star" and "Bolero." The Trio consists of Fredrick Sittig, pianist, Margaret Sittig, 'cellist, and Edgar Sittig, violinist. You may hear them from W-G-N at 8:15.

"Fess Williams E'spo'tulatin'"

THEY'RE still at it, this hot colored band under the personal direction of Fess Williams with the rest of his jazzy crew. They're still at their business of creating the most rhythmic and most typically colored program on the air. This show comes hot on hot wires directly from the Regal Theater where Harry Gourfain herds the notes into the microphone at 11 o'clock this evening.

Frank Roberts, Tenor . . . . .

THERE has been much favorable comment regarding the voice of this young tenor, and well deserved comment it is. 10:15 brings to you a live patter of song sung by Frank Roberts from station W-G-N. Tune in Mr. Roberts this evening and hear his bright program.

Henry Dixon's Hawaiians

THE strains of Waikiki will be strummed snappily today at 1 o'clock sharp marking the opening of the half hour of Hawaiian music presented every Sunday afternoon from W-G-N by Henry Dixon's Trio. They're contented lads, these Hawaiians, and happy. They sit dreamily in W-G-N's studio, just as though they were sitting under a spreading palm tree on their native beach tuning their guitars and ukulele to their keen ears. They play vivid music, popular, classical, marches and, best of all, characteristic music of their native islands. Just in time for Sunday dinner.

100! 100! 100!

Set your dials to W-G-N tonight and leave them there each night until the number of hours you have listened equals 100. Then send in your name for the official membership certificate. Today's additions to the roster are:

424. O. Jim Read, Elkhart, Ind.
425. Bernard Brozowski Jr., Wauconda, Ill.
426. Marion Guthmann, Chicago, Ill.

Dr. and Mrs. J. G. McNeil of 12204 Stewart avenue are gadding about by airplane on their vacation. They hopped from here to Cheyenne, Wyo., for a visit with Mrs. McNeil's sister. And by the way, Judge Landis, who distinctly remembers the Deacon's One Hoss Shay, is now among our high flyers, his latest sky buggy ride being from Aberdeen, S. D., to Chicago.

THE dance given by the Mayfair chamber of commerce at the Mayfair community house was well attended and much enjoyed. Forrest Jarrett, local florist, greatly pleased his audience with his cornet solo.

Mrs. George Christensen and Mrs. A. J. Johnson, in charge of the bakery sale of the Ladies' Aid of the Norwood Park Methodist church, report excellent patronage. Part of the proceeds will be used to buy a new stove for the church.

"And how's business?" we politely interrogated, as is our wont, Miss Carey Hoey, the indispensable real estate lady of Wilmette.

"Just fine," she chirruped. "I put a three line ad in the Sunday Trib for a piece of vacant and my phone's been ringing all morning. I guess I have fifty prospects. If there's business the Trib gets it." Advt.

The Association Opposed to Salad may derive what cheer and comfort it may from the observation of Addison J. Hawes, the art and gift man, to D. A. R., the peerless West Towner, that "It has got so now they serve everything on a leaf of lettuce except a subpoena."

As was to have been expected, the annual picnic of the West Englewood Old Settlers' association was a success. Among the prize winners were Mr. and Mrs. William Weibel, 6512 Whipple street, oldest married couple; William Groener, 6318 Artesian avenue, horseshoe pitching; Edward W. Chopp, 7010 Oakley avenue, second place in the shotput.

June Violette Gillette, 3818 Schubert avenue, won first prize in the baby buggy parade of the Logan Square Business Men's association. Movies were taken of the event, and the features of many a handsome merchant have been seen on the screen as a result. Among those present are J. H. Cavanarry; Charles V. Falkenberg, newly married president of the association; Sidney Schwartz, Mark Fisher, etc.

A slightly used calaboose can be had on reasonable terms by applying to William Laatz, village president pro tem. of Spring Forest, over in southwestern Cook. It has been unoccupied for some time, except as a chicken roost, due to peaceable conditions generally, and a new two passenger gaol specifically. The latter, however, has never yet been filled to capacity, let alone overflowing. To the right kind of buyer, the village president will also throw in an old fire station.

PLEDGES ranging from $100 to $2,500 have been subscribed by members of the Lincoln Square Commercial association to conduct a $25,000 advertising campaign that will make it as well known as Uptown Chicago and other thriving commercial centers.

Word has been received by friends of Peter Stomatis of Anggelina's confectionery, 3300 Lawrence avenue, that he will not return from Greece a bachelor. He was married last week to Miss Mary Kobbantze of Argos. They will return to Chicago in about a month.

Seven hundred folks attended the annual outing of Laurel Lodge, A. F. and A. M., on the banks of the Des Plaines river. Refreshments as well as balloons were supplied gratis, and there were disposed of 500 balloons, 500 packages of cracker jack, 2,400 packages of chewing gum, 75 cases of soft drinks, 45 gallons of ice cream, 30 gallons of cream and 300 gallons of coffee.

Mr. and Mrs. Siegfried Hirsch of 7308 Constance celebrated their silver wedding anniversary and I. G. Herzka, the toastmaster, commemorated it in poetry. We shall quote a few stanzas:

I hear the chime of silver bells,
So sweetly, sweetly ringing;
Of happy years their music tells,
Of gladness they are singing.
They ring of that day long ago
When 'neath love's banners spreading,
Two lovers stood with hearts aglow—
'Twas Sig and Alma's wedding.

And in this circle here today
Are many friends and neighbors,
Who've journeyed with them on the way
In pleasures and in labors.
There's Tessie and her Hugo dear,
And Bella and her Mose;
Selma, Bertha, Sig are here,
All in their Sunday clothes.

Bertha and Hugo, Anna, Nate,
And Blanche and Albert, too;
With Fanny and her toothpick, Art,
To swell the happy crew.
There's I. G. with his Irish Rose,
Who won't let him get chilly;
Our honorary Mamie and Dan,
And Rose and Banana Willie.

It seems needless to say a good time was had by all, and ye ed wishes he had space to print the rest of the verses.

William R. Wilson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Wilson of 6827 Hobart avenue, is entering the United States Naval academy as a commissioned officer without the aid of any political influence or pull. He won his appointment solely upon his merits in a competitive examination. He is a graduate of the Carl Schurz high school. He served with the Norwood Boy Scout Troop No. 899, retiring as an eagle scout. William is one of those reasons why we're proud to be Chicagoans.

Mr. and Mrs. William Leubscher of 3128 Archer avenue had to hire a hall to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary, there were that many friends and relatives in attendance—altogether, 200.

EVERY ten years W. T. Reynolds of Seattle, Wash., who is now 85, comes to Chicago to visit with his daughter, Mrs. W. H. Kempf of 3450 West 66th street, and his grandchildren and great grandchildren. He's here now. He expects to stay about a month.

John Matthews of River Forest has realized his lifelong ambition. He is chief of that suburb's fire department. Born near Palos, Ill., in 1872, Mr. Matthews started going to fires as a boy. He never missed one. When he moved to Oak Park 35 years ago he promptly joined the volunteer bucket brigade and further enlarged his experience. In between fires he served customers at Whittlesey's grocery store, Lake and Marion streets. He used his delivery wagon team to haul the apparatus. Later he moved to River Forest and opened a grocery store of his own. His reputation had preceded him. He was importuned to join the department. The first time the alarm sounded he did. Since then he has made every fire. His yeoman service was rewarded when the chieftainship of the River Forest departmen became vacant and the village father said, "John, you're it."

About writing: Mrs. Maurice B. Rothrock of 6646 Woodlawn avenue, who manages to do her own housework and compose worthwhile poetry, says one never "sits down" to write. Writing, or creation, is an endless process. "You write as you wash or dry the dishes, or cook the evening meal, or, perhaps, as you make your way through the burly burly of the loop or saunter through the cool sanctuary of a country lane." Mrs. Rothrock has just had published a book of verse, "Autumn Garlands," dedicated to her 83 year old mother.

Our industrious fellow townsman, Henry Rhode, steward of the Furniture Mart club, merits a word of commendation, if not two or three. He feeds from 5,000 to 6,500 every noon hour during the annual show. He bosses and keeps the peace and his temper in a family comprising fourteen cooks, five butchers, twelve dishwashers, ten pantry girls, five vegetable girls, 100 waiters, and forty bus boys. And when not so occupied he is treasurer of the village of Lake Forest. Henry, we salute you.

"The world's greatest club," placards our neighbor, Medinah Temple. So now we have the world's greatest newspaper, the world's greatest hotel, the world's greatest furniture mart, the world's greatest air rights development, the world's greatest apparel mart, all on or close to the giant's causeway that is Boul "Mich." Chicago is rapidly outgrowing the word formulas of Mr. Webster's ancient and honorable lexicon.

Edward Cuthbert has dusted off the old track suit; Otto Rudolph has gone into training with the liniment, and daily rehearsals are being held by the barber shop four—Edward Oxnam, Tom Duffy, Harry Bradford, and Ed Butkiewicz. Yes, the Belmont and Central Improvement association is preparing for its annual picnic.

My word! "Do not overlook," writes Mary Ann, "that this is the week we commemorate the advent of the bloomers." Mrs. Amelia Bloomer, editor of a temperance journal, the Lily, according to authentic documents cited by Mary Ann, was the author of the daring innovation. "The costume," it is set forth, "consisted of a knee length tunic and the billowy bloomers, which reached to the instep and were gathered with an elastic. Surely, many Chicago women (ahem) will remember the date, July 23, 1851, and the furore of condemnation that swept the country."

The good ship, Mayflower, will cast off Thursday morning from the Calumet river dock on the annual junket of the South Chicago Chamber of Commerce, the itinerary including a visit to the new state line generating plant, which, when completed, will be the largest in the world; a cruise down the Indiana Harbor ship canal, inspection of the Gary and Buffington harbors, and a trip all along the busy waterfront of the Calumet region.

AGELESS.

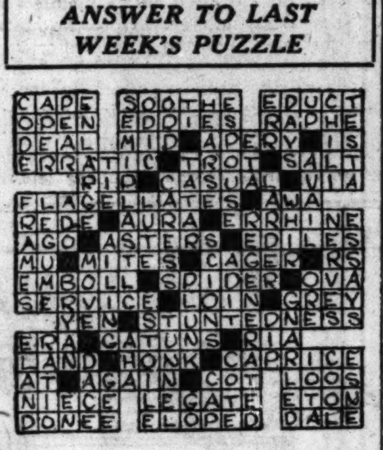
ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE



London Debates Health of Its Flower Sellers

LONDON.—(AP)—The welfare of Piccadilly's flower girls, most of them past fifty, has become the subject of much controversy in the London county council.

Heretofore they have conducted their colorful business exposed to the buffeting of wind and weather and the council has now submitted to the proper municipal authorities a plan for building flower kiosks.

Popular opinion is divided. If the kiosks are erected, say the die-hards, who deplore any effort to change old London, the picturesqueness of these buxom, red cheeked "girls" will be lost. The streets will no longer flaunt gorgeous splashes of color as an antidote to fog and gloom.

One of the girls, now in her seventy-first year, points out that she has no need for shelter, never having been ill in her life.

Rare Old Coin.

While I was working as a cashier in a small town moving picture house a farmer questioningly offered me an old 50 cent piece in return for a ticket to the show. I accepted it and later examined it, finding the date upon it read 1775.

Changing it for one of my own 50 cent pieces, I took it to a city numismatist, where I received $50. H. B.

More Than She Expected.

About fifteen years ago I bought at an auction sale a brass bed, mattress and springs for ten dollars. After using it all these years I decided to get rid of the bed for a single one, so called in a second hand dealer. He looked it over carefully, then looked at me, and I thought he would offer me about a dollar.

When he said, "Now, lady, don't faint, for I cannot possibly give you more than $10," well, I did nearly faint, for I never expected so much.

M. B.

Making a Large Profit.

While rummaging through the attic of a friend's home, she pointed out an old center table which she thought was so ridiculously old fashioned, she would consign it to the furnace. As it was just what I had been searching the antique shops for, I greatly admired it and she, thinking I was not sincere, in joking way said it was mine for a dollar.

I surprised her by quickly completing the deal. When I took it to a firm to have it refinished, they told me it was a rare antique and offered me $75 for it.

I call the purchase of this table a real bargain, as the profit paid for my summer vacation. J. C. R.

It Pays to Know.

One summer evening while walking we came upon a window with a card reading "Selling Out." The window was filled with Parisian jewelry, objets d'art, and a framed Simon colored etching, priced $20. It was one of Simon's snow scenes, which I happened to know had advanced in price to $50.

I purchased several pieces of jewelry at attractive prices, that I kept, and was careful also to purchase the Simon etching. This I sold in a few days at $50.

Is there an easier or a more pleasant way of finding a bargain, and, incidentally, picking up $30?

English Rulers Attend Their First Cabaret

LONDON.—(AP)—King George and Queen Mary have gone to their first cabaret show.

The twinkling toes of the cabaret girls amid bright shifting lights have hitherto been to the reigning couple of England only so much "newspaper talk."

They saw it all with their own eyes when they attended Lord Lonsdale's golden wedding celebration. The "world's greatest sportsman" had the honor not only of providing the king and queen's first cabaret, but also of being host to the first golden wedding ever attended by the reigning sovereigns.

MAKING THEM USEFUL.

The billboards have at last justified their erection along the highways. Motorists are using them to bridge mud holes.—Atlanta Constitution.

INSTRUCTION.

Talk Another Language Your First Lesson

There's no need to lay a foundation when you study languages under the famous Berlitz Conversational Method. You're ready the minute you start, to talk the language you select. You leave your English behind, you neither talk it nor hear it spoken from the time you enter the classroom. For by this perfected method, psychological principles are put to work to make mastery simple and fascinating for you. Just like you learned your mother tongue, you become expert in the use of any language NATURALLY—by talking it and hearing it spoken. And while you progress you're enjoying yourself—for this method is like play, it's so simple and fascinating. More than 350,000 students testify yearly to the merit of this method. In 26 countries the world over the name Berlitz has come to mean the ultimate in modern, progressive language mastery—the method by which all others are judged. In 339 schools, in every part of the globe, linguists are daily being developed—quicker—with greater ease and LESS work. You must sit in on a lesson to really appreciate this method. It can readily be arranged, at no cost or obligation to yourself. Simply call, write, or phone Harrison 0392 for a free demonstration lesson in French, Spanish, German, Italian or any other modern language. Then decide for yourself if this isn't the way you would like to become a linguist.

HERE'S ELECTRIC NEWS FOR R. E. MEN. THE BIGGEST SINCE THE ARMISTICE.

Advance notice of pre-opening of the most beautiful $3,000,000 development in CHICAGO [at 6800 North] and due west of the Great DEVON-WESTERN DISTRICT.

YOUR SHIP COMES IN.

Here is the rainbow of hope for real estate men — the means of ending all your troubles and FINANCIAL WORRIES. Here is the kind of a deal you have hoped for—wished for—yes, even prayed for, during the last two years. If you want money—need money—will work for money—THEN READ ON.

BACK TO CHICAGO.

My development represents a brand new field of operation in the choicest boom spot in America—C-H-I-C-A-G-O—backed up with millions of dollars and overripe for quick and very easy selling.

YOU NEED A BOOM SPOT.

You need a boom spot now for subdivision selling, and CHICAGO is that boom spot. I have money, and I am known as a man who spends big money to do big things. I have one of the largest and best equipped real estate offices in the Loop. I am going to take in some good men with me and make them rich, as I have made others who associated with me during the past ten years. FIRST COME, FIRST SERVED—with the best I have to offer.

YOUR SUCCESS.

I will take on several hundred ambitious ladies and gentlemen to join a new sales force I am organizing, to sell out during the next six months my new 175 acre $3,000,000—CHICAGO—development, right in the great 41st WARD. My new gigantic development incorporates approximately four miles of wide parkways fronting on 80 ft. and 100 ft. boulevards; one mile of business frontage on paved full section line.

PERMANENT BEAUTY.

Over 1,000 BEAUTIFUL TREES and 10,000 SHRUBS to be planted immediately, and every square foot of the entire 175 acre development to be landscaped and seeded with LAWN GRASS [no unsightly weeds]. Property to be maintained and cared for for FIVE YEARS. I don't forget my salesmen's customers.

Big Chicago Development.

Large, built-up CHICAGO developments encircle the borders of my property. Homes and apartments of highest character, stores, banks, theaters, schools, churches. Three lines of transportation serve the property. A 930 acre PUBLIC PARK [about the size of Lincoln Park] and PUBLIC GOLF COURSES surround my new development. For my salesmen's convenience I have built a $5,000 administration building, with private closing rooms, electric lights, and telephones. MOTION PICTURES of this distinguished development is just another aid for my salesmen to close deals.

$250,000 Opening Sales.

The first unit of this gigantic development opened July 23, but already OVER $250,000 IN RESERVATIONS have been made. Sounds like old times, eh? Well, a fortunate purchase for cash enables me to sell this property at LOW PRICES and terms that assure a quick sell-out. Imagine apartment lots at $995, in a highly restricted development that overlooks a 930 ACRE PUBLIC PARK AND 18 HOLE GOLF COURSE. No objectionable developments to kill your sales. EVERY SALE MULTIPLIES ITSELF. Listen! Practically all of my salesmen will be closing deals tonight and EVERY NIGHT.

10% Down—Comm. Paid.

Apartment lots $995.00—$99 cash. Business lots of $1,995—$199 cash. Don't stand in the way of your own success. Only cowards say "I had no opportunity." Break loose from the tough, hard selling. FAR OUT, too high priced subdivisions, at half cash and 15c to 25c fare to Loop, as hard as nails to sell—and you know it.

HERE SALESMAN IS KING.

This message is from one of you, who has a record of FIGHTING IN THE INTEREST OF SALESMEN. For ten years I gave my organization only the best to sell. I never allowed my people to get caught on a SLOW ONE. I know and understand men and women and I know and understand what CO-OPERATION men and women need to succeed. That's why the men and women who work with me succeed big. The greatest co-operation, low prices [$995.00], easy terms, plenty of leads, automobiles, FREE LUNCH FOR YOURSELF AND CLIENTS are yours. In fact, I stand back of you with every form of co-operation.

I AM READY FOR YOU.

Come and see me sure Monday or Tuesday evening, July 23 or 24, at 8 p. m. sharp. Be on time. Come with the expectation of hearing THE BIGGEST NEWS SINCE THE ARMISTICE. The men and women who will join with me at once will make BIG MONEY IMMEDIATELY. They will represent the highest paid sales people in CHICAGO. Monday or Tuesday I will show you how to earn a year's salary within the next 90 days. Now, don't be afraid to come, fearing the "boss" might see you. Remember, cowards do not succeed. You will not take $1,000 FOR MY PLAN OF QUICK AND EASY SELLING.

8 P. M. SHARP, JULY 30-31.

NONE TAKEN AFTER THESE DATES.

134 N. LA SALLE, RM. 600.

ATTENTION, SALESMEN!

"Go-getters wanted to travel; no samples to carry; real money for men who qualify. 208 W. Washington, Rm. 1822.

FROM NEW YORK TO ST. PAUL. FROM BOSTON TO CINCINNATI. ELECTROLUX MEN

HAVE FOUND PROFITABLE CONNECTIONS AND A PERMANENT AND BRIGHT FUTURE.

Yes, all over the world [for the sun never sets on Electrolux] you will find happy, prosperous men selling Electrolux and managing over 500 branch offices.

You will find them in England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Australia, New Zealand, Germany, France, Egypt, South Africa, Poland, Austria-Hungary, Sweden, Denmark, Norway, and Holland—in Mexico and South America—in every civilized country on the globe. We are mere infants in the United States compared with our old world operations, but a healthy, sturdy infant that is rapidly growing into a powerful figure in industry. We need more men—men who can sell or feel they can. Men who can manage and organize other men after a brief period of training.

The men we select will be given every co-operation and will be trained along selling and managerial lines with the purpose of developing branch managers for our contemplated new branches and district offices covering not only the entire state of Illinois but embracing all the territory from here to the Pacific coast.

Only sober, earnest minded men with clean records, preferably between 25 and 40, need apply. No others will be considered. Neither will telephone or mail applications be considered. See Mr. Wilbor, from 10 a. m. to 12 a. m.

OPPORTUNITY.

The Williamson Heater Company of Cincinnati, established nearly forty years, and nationally known as a manufacturer of high grade heating apparatus, is desirous of obtaining a high grade executive specialty salesman for Chicago, to sell the Snow White Cabinet Clothes Dryer to contractors, architects, and builders of new homes.

Snow White is a metal cabinet using gas or electric heat. It dries, sterilizes, and bleaches clothes in a few minutes. Its installation makes the housewife independent of weather conditions. It eliminates the drudgery of carrying clothes outside. It permits washing and ironing to be done the same morning. In smoky communities it is indispensable. It prevents fading of clothes exposed to sunlight. Every woman appreciates its advantages. It appeals to the professional builder, as it enhances the salability of his building. It appeals to the apartment owner in eliminating the backyard problem. To the man owning or erecting a high grade home, it sells itself. The price is less than other laundry equipment. Every residence and apartment should have one.

Thousands in use from coast to coast. We wish a high grade man to take charge of the Chicago market, actively selling himself until such time as he is self-supporting. He will then be permitted to hire additional men, receiving underwriting on their business. Successful applicant, however, must be a salesman not afraid of hard work, capable and willing to do eight hours of good hard work each day, calling upon high class residential builders and architects, specializing in residential work. Generous commission, with substantial drawing account.

In replying, set forth clearly the following information: 1—age; 2—do you own a car; 3—present work; 4—details of work for past ten years, set forth yearly; 5—earning power for past ten years; 6—why you wish to leave present connection; 7—when you can start work; 8—drawing account desired to start with.

Address replies to Lee Stratton, General Manager Dryer Division, The Williamson Heater Company, Cincinnati, Ohio.

PART TIME SALESMEN.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

WE NEED ADDITIONAL MEN.

OUR BUSINESS SHOWS AN 86% INCREASE OVER LAST MONTH, AND A 50% INCREASE OVER JULY, 1927.

MEN, HERE'S YOUR CHANCE TO GET IN ON THIS PROSPERITY.

This Branch has been established for over five years. These have been five years of national prosperity. But our business this month exceeds any previous July since the Branch was opened.

Which means more money to salesmen.

This Branch has just been awarded the President's trophy presented to the manager whose branch shows the largest per cent of increase. This Branch showed an increase of 86 per cent.

One reason why our salesmen are so well paid—they are a part of a growing business.

We are now getting set for the largest autumn business ever enjoyed by the company and need men to handle the increase. We can use intelligent, hardworking, neat appearing men with or without previous sales experience, and they can earn more money than has ever been paid them for the same mount of time and effort.

As for example:

Mr. S. is a musician—started with us July 16. He made $92 the first two days in the field. He made $138 last week.

Mr. H., a washing machine salesman, started with us the same day as Mr. S. His earnings for the last half of July will exceed $300.

Mr. W., a machinist, joined us eighteen months ago. He made $184 the first three days of last week—his total for last week was $276.

Mr. F., who started last week, made $69 the first three days in our employ. He formerly owned his own store.

Mr. R. had earned up to July 28 $575 for the month and expects to increase that total to $700 in the remaining two days.

Mr. DeP. and his cousin, Art, working together as a team last week, made $230 or more than the two combined made in an entire month at their trade. This is their first sales experience.

All the above are Chicago records made last week. They have been duplicated by them and by others every week of the past five years. If you come in Monday, you can meet these men and talk to them. If you are interested, they will help teach you to go out and do as well.

We are an Illinois Corporation, part of a three and one-half million dollar international organization with thirty-five branches now in operation, and more to be opened as fast as we develop men to run them. We manufacture and sell a product that is advertised nationally and has a market as great as the automobile. We offer splendid opportunities for rapid promotion, as evidenced by the number of men now holding managerial positions who have been with us only a matter of months.

We appreciate that the statements above are strong. But there isn't a figure named that isn't taken from our sales record. These records are open for investigation. Inasmuch as they appear at least unusual the man who is earning less than $100 per week cannot afford to overlook them. He should investigate. That's all this "ad" and a call obligates a man to do. But hundreds of men are now prosperously employed just because they investigated an "ad" like this.

Our men are buying homes, apartments, automobiles, bonds and the like just because every word in the foregoing is true.

We cannot hire every man who applies. We want hard working men, good appearing men, men of intelligence, men who will be a credit to an organization already famous for its high class membership. If you measure up to these qualifications—there's a job waiting for you in which you will have a chance to do better things for the whole family.

It's going to be worth your while to see Mr. Gallagher—Monday between 9 and 11, or between 2 and 4.

A $3,000,000 LAKE FRONT DEVELOPMENT.

North Shore Beach opens soon. This means a real opportunity for the ambitious. All applicants must be over 25. References required. We will also start a few beginners. SALARY AND COMMISSION to those who qualify.

Preopening sale at low prices just starting. Big full page ad campaign. Leads. Full co-operation. Practically no competition, as this is the only waterfront development on Lake Michigan in the Chicago Metropolitan district that to our knowledge is of such beauty, magnitude and unusualness at popular prices. Homes under construction.

Our 30 years of service and good will stand back of you. This means that salespeople of high standards can succeed with a successful firm. Permanent, well paying positions now open. Apply Monday, July 30. Ask for MISS J. E. HOLMES. Call between 11 a. m. and 5 p. m.

A POSITION.

for 5 refined ladies now open. Must be over 25 yrs. or have mature judgment. References exchanged. Work is congenial, dignified and well paying. I represent an old, responsible firm, well advertised in Chicago. I need 5 ambitious ladies to assist me. Sales experience will help, but is not absolutely necessary, as the firm has its own method of training. It made me successful and can do the same for you. I know just the type that is suited for this work and can tell you just what is required.

If you qualify I am authorized to place you in a position where you can start earning a steady, moderate income at once. Permanent position, with a future of increased pay. Talk it over with me in person; if you convince me your position is assured. Apply Monday 10 a. m. to 5:30 p. m., Suite M49-M50.

MORRISON HOTEL.

LAKE SHORE DRIVE

"On the Sunny Corner of Schiller Street."

This unusual fireproof and soundproof building with this distinctive address offers an unusual service ordinarily available only in the most exclusive hotels. It is the last word in modern conveniences. For example—the building will have a water filtration system, a vacuum heating system, especially designed hardware and lighting fixtures, full cabinet finish woodwork, light and well ventilated laundries on the twenty-first floor, extra maids' rooms, metal weatherstripping on all outside windows, plaster cornices in the living rooms, dining rooms, and corridors; cabinet type radiators, metal balustrades of ornamental iron in front of each window; baths with every bedroom [except the six room apartments, which have two baths], colored tile wainscotting in all bathrooms, forced ventilation in bathrooms and kitchens, incinerators; kitchens have Crown ranges, Hoosier Kitchen Cabinets, broom closets, and Gibson all porcelain iceboxes with mechanical refrigeration; telephone booths in the lobby, as well as telephone connections with each apartment from a central switchboard. Soundproofing is effected by the use of thermocrete in all pipe slots, and between the apartments by double partitions, flaxlinum, and an air space.

In our 100% co-operative plan you may live here on the following basis:

	MONTHLY ASSMTS.	COST OF EQUITIES.
4 ROOMS	$ 92.25 UP	$ 5,400 UP
5 RMS., 2 BATHS	129.83 UP	7,600 UP
6 RMS., 2 BATHS	182.79 UP	10,700 UP
7-8 RS., 4-5 BATHS	319.46	18,700

Also some 2 and 3 room apartments available at equally attractive prices.

Complete information may be had by writing, phoning, or from our representative at the building.

1320 N. State
CHICAGO'S FINEST CO-OPERATIVE BUILDING.

There will be available for early fall occupancy one of the choicest 6 room apartments in this building. The arrangement of rooms is unusual and should interest the discriminating purchaser for an apartment of this size. The present owner is taking a larger apartment in the building—which makes it possible to offer this charming apartment for sale. The equity price is very reasonable and the monthly assessments are considerably less than you would expect to pay for an apartment of this type.

There are also ready for immediate occupancy a number of 7 and 8 room apartments—some with two-story living rooms and the duplex arrangement.

Apartments can be purchased on the Rental-Purchase Plan—which is probably no higher than you would pay for rent for an equally desirable apartment in this location.

1320 NORTH STATE-ST. is in successful operation and houses many of Chicago's prominent families.

Apartment always open for inspection.

REAL ESTATE LOANS.

SECOND MORTGAGE LOANS

It is easy to figure the exact amount which you will be charged on a second mortgage loan made through the agency of the Chicago Morris Plan Bank. Our rate is 6% interest plus a commission of:

3½% for 1 year
6½% for 2 years
9 % for 3 years

Suppose you desire $2,000 for two years, the commission will be $130—no more and no less.

That is the beauty of the one-price system which is used throughout the Morris Plan. The goods are marked with a readable tag, there is no variation or exception, no dickering, bickering, or any other element of trading.

Come in—you will like us and the way we make second mortgage.

AUTOMOBILES—GASOLINE.

IT IS WORTH
$200 TO $400
TO YOU IF YOU READ THIS AD

We frankly believe a used car purchase made from Studebaker at this time will net the buyer a saving of $200 to $400. This is the peak of the used car season, and we know that if our stock is to be moved, NOW IS THE TIME. We therefore, purposely cut the prices of our automobiles absolutely to the bone, and the result is they will be sold at once. Our selection is very full because we are the biggest dealer in Chicago. All automobiles are sold on the basis of the Studebaker Used Car Pledge that guarantees 5 days' driving trial.

AUBURN SEDAN. A recent model that is one of the snappiest Auburn sixes in Chicago. The finish is a beautiful two tone gray, and the car has low swung lines. Equipped with bumpers, 4 wheel brakes, shock absorbers, heater, spare tire, etc. An exceptional buy for $795.

BUICK COACH. Master Six that was traded in by a stock broker who claims he gave it exceptional care. We checked it over carefully and it is in such excellent condition that we're convinced that he was right. Equipped with 4 wheel brakes, snubbers, bumpers, five good balloon tires, spotlight, etc. A rare buy for $945.

CHEVROLET SEDAN. This Chevrolet was only driven Sundays and holidays by an advertising executive; result is it's in new car shape today; has spare tire, bumpers, etc. Will sell at once for $385.

DODGE SEDAN. Worth considerably more than our special price; extras are heater, spotlight, bumpers, spare tire, etc.; it's in good all around condition; only $395.

HUDSON SEDAN. A 5 pass. Super Six that was oiled and greased every 500 miles by the previous owner. The new buyer will obtain a handsome Hudson that's ready to run as though direct from the factory. Equipped with shutter front, spare tire, road light, bumpers, etc. Today, $545.

STUDEBAKER COMMANDER. A recent Big Six 5 pass. sedan; it was owned by a North Side contractor who gave it very good attention; in fact, we believe this Studebaker will give new car satisfaction; the engine has been reconditioned, and it carries a 30 day free service guarantee; the appearance could not be improved; equipped with 4 wheel brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc.; an exceptional buy for $1,045.

JEWETT SEDAN. This undoubtedly is the best Jewett value in Chicago. We've priced it at $285 and it will be sold at once at this figure. It's very attractive and the extras include seat covers, spare tire, spotlight, bumpers, heater, etc. A rare buy.

MOON SEDAN. The buyer of this beautiful late model will make an unusual saving. We were fortunate enough to obtain this car at $885 and we priced it at that figure for a quick sale. The motor was carefully checked over and we found it in excellent shape. The appearance is exceptionally attractive. Equipped with 4 wheel brakes, shutter front, heater, spare tire, bumpers, etc. Here is a great bargain.

OAKLAND COACH. This Oakland was in storage for 9 mos., so it really looks and runs better than many new cars selling for $1,000. Has handsome original finish and the upholstery appears unused. Equipped with 4 wheel brakes, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Today $525.

STUDEBAKER SEDAN. Special Six that we were told to sell by the buyer of one of Chicago's big dept. stores who left on a business trip to Europe. When he returns he'll take a new Studebaker "8." His Special Six is exceptionally clean throughout. There's not a mar on the finish and the upholstery, finish, motor, etc., are in the original new condition. Extras are heater, bumpers, spare tire, etc. A remarkable bargain at $745.

OLDSMOBILE COUPE. 1927 model, used only a very short time. This car is a beauty and will give new car satisfaction. Equipped with snubbers, spare tire, bumpers, etc. Will not remain long at $535.

PACKARD SPORT TOURING. This Packard Six is one of the best open car buys anywhere. It's in splendid condition throughout. The finish is bright and shiny. The upholstery appears new, and the tires have little mileage. You'll find the performance is smooth and powerful. Equipped with 4 wheel brakes, shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Will not remain long at $650.

STUDEBAKER COACH. A standard six with very low mileage. We obtained it at a very favorable figure and we're willing to pass on the saving to you. It's in dandy running condition and the appearance will please you. Has bumpers, 5 good balloon tires, etc. A snap for $545.

WILLYS KNIGHT BROUGHAM. A quiet, smooth running car that never left the Chicago boulevards. The finish is bright and shiny and the upholstery appears unused. Equipped with snubbers, spotlight, trunk, spare tires, etc. Will be sold at once at $545.

LINCOLN

Luxury and Economy in the Reconditioned Cars

To those with a taste for the fine things that go to make life pleasant, reconditioned Lincolns offer an unsurpassed opportunity for gratification, though the individual's income be a relatively modest one. Without extravagance, persons whose incomes would not ordinarily allow for such motor car luxury may know the supreme delight of Lincoln ownership.

Reconditioned Lincolns are sold by AUTHORIZED DEALERS at prices ranging from fifteen to thirty-five hundred dollars. Many of these have been the prized possessions of people of unlimited means, driven but a few thousand miles by an experienced chauffeur. Yet before they are offered for sale by AUTHORIZED DEALERS these Lincolns are placed in the hands of specially trained mechanics, who eradicate the marks of previous service and put every working part in perfect adjustment.

Thus it happens that AUTHORIZED DEALERS sell reconditioned Lincolns under standard guarantees. Thus it is, too, that the motorist obtains maximum returns, in service satisfaction, when his selection falls to reconditioned Lincolns.

Before you decide on your next car, talk to the AUTHORIZED DEALER near you about reconditioned Lincolns. You may rely upon what he tells you. His dependability is assured by the reputation of the great Lincoln manufacturing organization, for whom he speaks.

PAIGE 1926 SEDAN, 7 pass. This late series sedan comfortably seats seven, yet it is in no sense a bulky, cumbersome car nor more expensive in operation than cars which sacrifice needed seating capacity. The paint, upholstery and tires are like new; mechanically 100%, and the complete equipment includes special $55 set of bullet headlights. A high grade, moderate size family car that can be purchased with a low investment and on easy terms.

1927 DODGE SEDAN. Evidences extremely good care. Painted blue; everything in excellent condition. Disc wheels, good tires, and fully equipped. Special.

PAIGE 1927 6-45 SEDAN. Has the appearance that stamps it as new. Space does not permit detailing mechanical refinements, but we are very sure it will exceed your expectations. Almost new tires, disc wheels, fully equipped; $750.

GRAHAM-PAIGE 619 SEDAN, 5 pass., used by an official of this company. Tires show little or no signs of wear. Everything perfect. Offered with new car guarantee. See it as soon as you can.

BUICK COACH MASTER 6. In extra good condition, both from an appearance and mechanical standpoint. Tires excellent. This buy will stand comparison with any in the city at anywhere near its price of $525.

PAIGE STRAIGHT 8 SEDAN, 7 pass. famous 8-85 model, with 4 speed transmission, affording amazing performance and long life. Used very little. New car guarantee given. Sold new for $2,700 as equipped; our price $1,500.

PAIGE 6-65 ROADSTER. Rumble seat. Car first class throughout and equipped. Also a Cabriolet of same series in similar condition. Both priced right.

STUDEBAKER "COMMANDER." 1927 SEDAN, 7 pass. Original attractive finish, upholstery and mechanical condition better than excellent. Has disc wheels and lots of equipment; reasonably priced; $1,125.

PAIGE 6-72 SEDAN, 5 pass. Traded after having had but little service. Original finish still has that new look. Mechanically 100% and guaranteed. So good you can't spend a penny on it in any way; $725.

PAIGE 6-70 LANDAU SEDAN. Representing luxurious transportation that cost many thousands of dollars to build new. Interior like new; 2 tone finish and mechanical condition excellent. Fully equipped; $650.

OAKLAND 1926 LANDAU SEDAN. Received with low mileage. Leather back type with carriage bows, 4 wheel brakes, Duco finish, etc. First class condition; $525.

PAIGE 6-75 COUPE, 1927. You have undoubtedly noticed many of these on the street. It's the car with D-shaped rear quarter windows, leather back, carriage bows, etc., and has rumble seat. Appearance and mechanical condition are first class, and guaranteed. All equipment included. Special.

Rolls-Royce

ROLLS-ROYCE 4 PASS. ROADSTER. Custom built Piccadilly model. A car that is becoming increasingly popular for sports. Very smart in appearance and the rumble seat provides for extra passengers. Finish is a special ivory cream with black enamel fenders and running gear. Special equipment includes Burbank seat covers, 2 Lorraine spotlights, and 6 wire wheels and new tires with spares mounted in front fenders wells. Very attractively priced.

ROLLS-ROYCE SEDAN LIMOUSINE. Canterbury model. This is the conventional Sedan type with division between driving and passenger compartments. A very satisfactory type for family requiring car for general use. Equally adaptable for chauffeur of owner driving. Actually driven only 18,000 miles. Finished in deep maroon with ivory striping and upholstered in imported English broadcloth. A splendid value.

Many other splendid values are now available in Rolls-Royce open and closed body style, attractively priced from $6,500 up. Terms arranged.

R. G. TIFFANY

"For more than a year many dealers have complained that the used car market was 'off.'

"This may have been true of other markets and other dealers. But The Tribune and its tremendous market have produced for Cadillac greater sales and greater profits than we have ever enjoyed. In The Tribune Want Ad Section, which we are now using exclusively, the used car market is better than it has ever been."

R. G. TIFFANY,
General Manager of
THE CADILLAC MOTOR CAR COMPANY
CHICAGO BRANCH

IN the first five months of last year, using three Chicago newspapers, The Cadillac Motor Car Company sold $811,000 worth of used cars. In 1928, over the same period of time, by concentrating exclusively in The Tribune Want Ad Section and increasing their lineage, they boomed their sales practically a quarter-million dollars!

The magnitude of this achievement takes on an added significance when you consider that in the face of a "slow" market, Cadillac, selling used cars whose resale prices are well above the average new car prices . . . made an unprecedented gain by concentrating all its used car advertising in Tribune Want Ads.

How Cadillac Did It

But Tribune Want Ads are not satisfied with furnishing Cadillac a quarter of a million dollar gain in five months. Week by week—month by month they have been drawing an increasing number of prospects into Cadillac's display rooms . . . developing a crescendo of sales that in May carried Cadillac to the highest pitch of volume they have ever known—an increase of 50% over May, 1927.

The Cadillac Motor Car Company earned this prosperity by foresight. At the conclusion of 1927 they realized that success in 1928 would reward the used car dealer who picked the best market and concentrated his efforts on cultivating it aggressively for sales.

They chose The Tribune Want Ad Market for two reasons:

1. Its size, offering more than 805,000 potential used car buyers daily and over 1,100,000 prospects Sunday—made it incomparably larger than any other market.
2. Its greater wealth was indicated by the fact that 90% of Chicago's prosperous families are to be found in it.

They acted on their decision by concentrating their classified advertising in it exclusively—instead of diffusing it in three media as they previously had—and by practically doubling the amount of space they used. Success vindicated their judgment.

While other dealers were complaining, Cadillac was selling cars—and enjoying the most profitable five months in their history!

For, as R. G. Tiffany, General Manager, says: "We have found our market, and it has absorbed more than a million dollars' worth of used cars in five months. It is the tremendous market offered by Chicago Tribune Want Ads."

Could there be a more dramatic revelation of the tremendous sales power of Tribune Want Ads than this? It is proof positive that among The Tribune's vast army of readers more used car buyers can be reached than through any other Chicago newspaper—or combination of newspapers!

It is not too late for other dealers to duplicate Cadillac's success. The best months are ahead! Obviously a great reward awaits every one who adopts the policy they set down . . . ceases to diffuse his advertising in markets where results are uncertain . . . and instead concentrates in one market, proved by Cadillac to be the greatest in Chicago! Here, by aggressive, consistent advertising a share of The Tribune's million used car prospects can be won!
